Montreal Peace Trek Is Violent

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

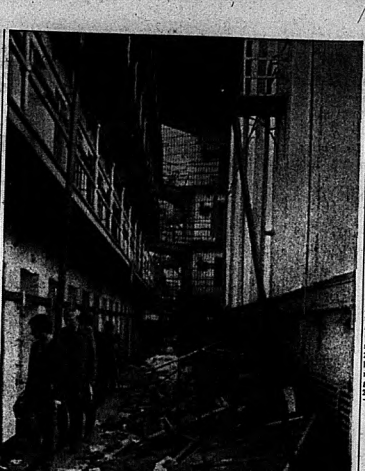
Peace marchers stayed generally peaceful as groups in several cities across Canada staged demonstrations against the Vietnam war during the weekend.

But Montreal's march got out of hand briefly and was marred by outbreaks of violence. Each month's 300 marchers were turned back by a cordon of 15 police and flames were used as a dramatic device in two British Columbia demonstrations.

At Montreal Saturday a small group from among 700 protesters, mostly students, smashed windows and flinders on police cars near the U.S. consulate.

Police said the violence broke out when police moved in to stop the group. Bricks and large stones were showered on police vehicles and 15 were arrested.

The demonstrations in Canadian cities were held in conjunction with anti-war protests in major U.S. cities, in particular Washington and San Francisco. There were also rallies in Europe and Japan.



DRAWS 1,500

The largest Canadian demonstration was in Toronto where about 1,500 persons gathered at the city hall Sunday to hear several speakers after marching from the Ontario legislature building.

There was one arrest. Michael Rovic, 25, of Montreal, a bystander, was charged with possession of a restricted weapon and possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

Police said they found a .22-calibre pistol that looked like a pocket flashlight.

Principal speaker at the Toronto rally was Montreal pacifist Claire Culhane, who called on the federal government to prosecute Canadians who have enlisted in the United States Army. She said joining U.S. services is in breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act, but the act is never enforced.

Huge Peace Rally Held At Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — Militant anti-war protesters and anti-poverty lobbyists turned their attention to the halls of Congress today after the weekend's huge and peaceful Capitol rally, which a police official called the biggest in U.S. history.

Kicking off a two-week campaign of planned non-violent disruption, they scheduled calls on congressmen and 24-hour sessions with senators in a "people's lobby" against the war and for expanded welfare aid.

Sunday, the continuing anti-war campaign saw police quietly lead away 124 persons whose Quaker peace vigil at the White House grew beyond the 100 persons allowed.

Police arrested only those who refused to leave when asked, and charged them with crossing police lines, which carries a $25 maximum fine.

Sunday, NPAC co-ordinator Jerry Gordon claimed that on Saturday march and rally at the Capitol drew 500,000 persons. Police stuck officially with Chief Jerry V. Wilson's estimate of 200,000, but civilian information officer Bill Jeparis said he seemed much larger.

The previous high attendance is generally conceded to be the 220,000 estimated by police at an anti-war rally here Nov. 15, 1969.

Agnew told reporters in New Orleans Sunday night:

"I think a lot of the demonstrators are well meaning but confused. But I would call their attention to the fact that it is becoming too fashionable in this country for our citizens to extol the virtues of enemy nations, of very repressive, totalitarian societies, while they run down the decision of our own elected officials."

A similar demonstration in San Francisco Saturday involved another 150,000, police there estimated.

MERCHANTS WARNED

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — The federal price control office announced new punishment for retailers, principally butchers, who charge unfair prices after being warned by the government. Second offenders' stores will be shut down and sealed with large signs saying: "Closed for robbing the people."

Prisoners' Spokesman Claims He Was Beaten

TORONTO (CP) — A member of the citizens' committee that helped end the Kingston penitentiary riot two weeks ago said today he is seeking a court order for an investigation into a complaint that prisoners were beaten after their transfer to Millhaven correctional institution.

Desmond Morton, law professor at the University of Toronto, said he is taking legal action after receiving a complaint from Norman McCaud, a leader of the Kingston prisoners' negotiating committee.

"I went to Millhaven to see McCaud Saturday after he contacted me and complained about a bad beating he received," said Mr. Morton. "I wanted to take a commissioner of oaths with me to swear on McCaud's condition but I was not permitted to take anyone with me."

Mr. Morton said he called provincial police Commissioner Eric Silk Saturday night and asked him to investigate.

"But I was not satisfied with his response and decided to ask the Ontario Supreme Court to order him to investigate."

McCaud, serving 10 years on 112 counts of forgery, was first jailed in 1952 at the age of 19 and has served two sentences for robbery.

Trent River Bridge Expected by October

An October completion date for the new bridge over the Trent River at Glen Miller is still hoped for, according to Hastings county road engineer Peter Anderson.

Mr. Anderson said that one pier and the west abutment of the bridge are yet to be constructed.

Form work for the east side deck is now completed and the contractor is about ready to commence pouring concrete for the deck.

Work on the remaining pier and west abutment will be commenced following the spring run-off.

Because of the large expenditure on the Glen Miller bridge and the limit set on the regular subsidy, county councillors were told this week that there is no money available for actual county road construction this year under expenditure bylaws.

All road construction, therefore must be carried out as development road projects.

A recent change in highways department policy requires that pre-engineering on development roads is now done under bylaw funds and accordingly a large part of road program funds this year is devoted to planning for four proposed projects.

These are a short section of Road 5 from Frankford west to the county boundary: 1.8 miles on Road 7 from Highway 401 through Shannonville to the Tyendinaga Reserve; 5.8 miles on road 12 from Highway 7 to Queensboro and two miles of Road 13 from Highway 37 to Stoco.

Unemployment Down

The number of unemployed in Canada decreased in March to an estimated 650,000 or 7.8 per cent of the labor force, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the federal manpower department said Thursday. It was a decrease of 25,000 from mid-February. In March 1970 the unemployment rate was 6.7 per cent, with 542,000 people jobless. (CP Newsmap)

Davis Told Canadian Denied Job at Windsor's University

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Premier William Davis and some of his cabinet ministers were taken to task Saturday over a number of issues ranging from university hiring policies to pay for policemen.

Sam Mileg, a Harrow, Ont., resve, said his son Milan, 27, was unable to get a job as a lecturer at the University of Windsor because he was Canadian.

Mr. Mileg said in an interview the Ontario Human Rights Commission found that his son was "a victim of circumstance" and that the American who headed the university's sociology department where he sought employment was involved in a departmental power struggle.

Mr. Davis said he wrote university presidents 3½ months ago urging that Canadians be given priority in filling faculty vacancies.

University Affairs Minister John White said the government "is doing what we can to bring this under control but we do not want to use a heavy hand" because universities should retain their autonomy.

Sarnia Mayor Paul Blundy complained that government-appointed arbitration boards were not consistent and lagged behind in determining wage settlements for firemen and policemen.

He asked the government to set up one board specifically for this purpose.

Attorney-General Allan Lawrence admitted some of the arbitrators were inexperienced and agreed a single board would eliminate "some of those hairy, far-out awards you've been getting."

Mayor Blundy also told Premier Davis that municipalities were having difficulty setting tax rates because school boards were late in presenting their budgets.

The premier said budgeting for boards of education was more complicated this year because they had to meet government spending ceilings but "the majority of the boards should meet their deadlines next year."

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For April 27

Your birthday today: Expansive diversity characterizes your experience in the year ahead. Your temptation will be to scatter a great deal of energy over too broad a field, too many different sorts of action. Today's natives have a deep wish for the exact truth, usually some knack of saying it subtly. Where this is misunderstood or frustrated, their remarks tend to come out with almost harsh candor.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Much of what passs for conversation may be really something else — be thickskinned and disregard it. Getting engaged in a trial of the merits of commentary wastes the time and potentials of all.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Being the rugged individual gets to be more rugged than its worth today — why rough it alone, when it's more effective to go along a normal path and have the fun of argument?

GEMINI (May 21 — Jun 20): Take notice of your mate or partner, and fellow workers, for a clue to the general drift of events. It doesn't pay to get left too far- behind.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Long ago situations, requests come to life again; this time under somewhat different, more constructive circumstances, according to what you did with the help you got then.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Real opportunity exists today, but not in directions you've been working toward. Seek out the ordinary expedients, neglected connections.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 —Sept. 22): Your help and advice is needed even where it has not been definitely asked. Nature in the form of coincidence and intuition provides a clear channel for expression.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Objections crop up on all sides, but you can cope with all in due course, according to how well your have arranged your activities for the past several days.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Up and over early resistance and you are assured of success, much better and more than anticipated.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Experiments should be set aside today in favor of steady efforts to fill in the gaps and details in going projects. Further preparations become urgent before you make any additional changes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Financial questions find better answers now. Certain expenses can be avoided, others put into more favorable terms. Seek a complete change of scene this evening.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): An easing of material problems. Limitations comes unexpectedly, just when you are not quite set to take full advantage of it. There will be another chance of this nature, so keep your poise.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Use all your energy to push others into action, co-operation, but do not fail to speak up about your own needs and projects.

Teachers End Calgary Strike

CALGARY (CP) — Public schools were to reopen today for 78,000 students after 3,900 teachers agreed reluctantly Sunday night to a two-year contract.

Charles Rose, president of Local 38 of the Alberta Teachers' Association, said: "The teachers accepted the agreement but the teachers are not pleased."

At a closed meeting, about 2,000 teachers voted 80 per cent in favor of accepting the agreement to bring a halt to the city's first teacher strike which began last Wednesday and closed 154 schools.

The agreement was to be ratified today by the public school board.

"We did make some gains even though we dropped over 40 of our requests in this particular dispute from a total of 58," Mr. Rose said in an interview.

"We have managed to come to an agreement that at least we can get back to work under."

The contract, worked out by board negotiators during the weekend then put to the teachers, came after round-the-clock talks with mediators.

Working conditions, the major complaint in the eight-month dispute, were spelled out in the new contract. The teachers' last contract expired Dec. 31, 1970, and contained no provisions for working conditions.

Under the new agreement, teachers will have 30 hours of "assignable time" a week, but this does not include hours for preparing lessons, examination marking and other unassigned activities.

The contract also states that staff deployment is the responsibility of the principal and officials of each school.

"It is understood that teachers are expected to participate in those aspects of student activities that are an extension of the classroom program," the contract reads.

The teachers wanted 30 hours of teaching a week for Grade 1 and grades 10 to 12 and 22½ hours for grades 2 to 9.

Mr. Rose said the major gain was having a say and a right to establish our conditions of employment."

Salaries were established early in mediation talks with most teachers receiving a five to six per cent increase a year.

Laxer, Watkins Denied Seats On Executive

OTTAWA (CP) — The New Democratic Party council handed the Waffle faction a final rebuff Sunday, denying positions on the party executive to Waffle leaders James Laxer and Melville Watkins.

Mr. Laxer and Mr. Watkins, along with Jeremy Akerman, Nova Scotia NDP leader sympathetic to the left-wing aims of the Waffle, were the only three nominees rejected in voting by the council for 12 of its members to be seated on the executive.

Lewis Denies NDP Swung Toward Right

OTTAWA (CP) — David Lewis, new leader of the New Democratic Party, said Sunday he rejects completely the idea that last week's NDP convention made a turn to the right in its policy decisions.

On the issue of public ownership, the 1,720 delegates had simply rejected the "branch-plant language" invoked by the party's left-wing Waffle group to support complete nationalization of industries now in U.S. hands. He suggested the Waffle had imported from the U.S. a rhetoric of worker oppression.

As for the touchy Quebec issue, the convention decision to hand the question over to the party's federal council was "proof of the determination of our party not to go the road of the Waffle."

The Quebec and ownership issues were the most significant and contentious questions handled by the convention.

On the matter of Quebec, English-speaking delegations pressed during the convention for a firm stand on the side of a confirmed —if altered—federalism. The Quebec delegation insisted on a commitment on Quebec's right to self-determination, without the rider opting for federalism.

After a series of compromises failed, the party passed a resolution favoring a "united Canada" but sending the issue to the council to work out a more specific policy. The Quebecers and the Waffle faction voted against the majority on that one.

As for ownership, the delegates passed a resolution calling for increased public ownership of resource industries, along with joint government-private partnerships.

It turned down Waffle proposals for complete and immediate nationalization of resource industries and financial institutions and eventual public ownership in all major sectors of the economy.

Budget Highlights

No new taxes.

A record deficit of $415 million resulting from forecast revenues of $3,847 million and expenditures of $4,262 million for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

Equalization of beer prices between Northern and southern Ontario, involving an 11-cent reduction in the north and a 15 cent increase in the south on 24-bottle cases, effective May 1. New price is $4.65, excluding the 50-cent bottle deposit, across the province.

Nursing home and home care services to be included in Ontario's health insurance program starting April 1, 1972, with a fee of $3.50 a day for those who can afford to pay.

A five-per-cent guideline on wage increases for the civil service coupled with staff reductions in four departments and no increase in staff in seven other departments. Total staff for 1971-72 will be 69,118.

A further $45 million to be provided for increased subsidies and lending programs to encourage house construction and associated employment.

The $3 fishing licence no longer will be required for Ontario residents, retroactive to Jan. 1.

A five-per-cent tax credit for job-creating investment in machinery and equipment by Ontario companies, effective midnight Monday night.

Ontario corporations may deduct interest on money borrowed to purchase shares in other companies in order to reduce the tax disadvantage in bidding against United States firms.

Provision for $78 million in increased property tax relief to give Ontarians more spending income, including an increase in provincial support to school board to 55 per. cent from 51 per cent.

A revised system of unconditional grants to municipalities to be introduced Jan. 1, 1972, at an estimated additional cost of $16 million annually.

Additional staff to be provided in hospitals for mentally retarded children at an additional cost of $20 million.

Further large cuts in succession duties, with exemptions for widows and widowers raised to $250,000 from $125,000, duty free estates increased to $100,000 from $50,000 and surtaxes eliminated for preferred beneficiaries such as children and grandchildren.

A total of $18 million to be provided for summer jobs for young people.

Benson Declares Budget Blackmail

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister Edgar Benson attacked sections of Ontario's new budget Monday, calling it "fiscal blackmail" designed to retard progress on constitutional reform.

"Blackmail is not the way to accomplish something," Mr. Benson said in an interview with The Star, "Anyone can say they are going to stop playing if they don't get their way."

The finance minister said Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough was resorting to blackmail in threatening to block constitutional reform if Ottawa ignores Ontario's attempts to get a bigger share of tax revenue.

Mr. McKeough's budget speech Monday said Ottawa is discriminating against Ontario economically. The speech also raised the possibility that Ontario might quit shared-cost programs with the federal government.

Mr. Benson suggested if Ontario is unhappy with proposed new federal tax laws "they can go their own way, like Quebec, with a separate income tax."

On other aspects of the budget, Mr. Benson had some praise.

Referring to a plan to give Ontario companies a five-per-cent tax credit for investment in machinery and equipment until March 31, 1973, Mr. Benson said:

"It could be quite a good incentive. It's a fair amount of money the province is willing to give up."

However, Mr. Benson was less complimentary when asked about Ontario's decision to allow companies to write off costs of borrowing money raised to buy shares in other Canadian companies.

The finance minister said this would not prove a great deal of relief. He felt the money might go to people who shouldn't get it and that the cost of borrowing has not been a serious factor in preventing Canadian companies from bidding against U.S. companies for control of other Canadian businesses.

Boost In Jobs Sought

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough submitted a cautious $4,262 million budget to the Ontario legislature Monday and warned that revitalizing the troubled provincial economy depends in large measure on federal government fiscal policies.

Mr. McKeough said the budget is the Conservative government's blueprint for putting the provincial economy back into high gear—a three-pronged program of spending restraints, tax incentives for private industry and tax reforms.

Proposals range from tax credits for outlay on equipment for businesses to a measure equalizing the price of beer in Northern and southern Ontario.

For Other Budget Stories See Front Page Second Section

The provincial treasurer described the 113-page document as "full employment budgeting" aimed at creating 100,000 new jobs by adjusting fiscal mechanisms in the public and private sectors.

Mr. McKeough predicted record revenues and expenditures of $3,847 million and $4,262 million respectively in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1972, leaving a deficit of $415 million —the biggest ever. However, no new taxes are planned.

"We hope through a combination of measures to get unemployment back down to three per cent of the work force—the accepted level of full employment," the 38-year-old treasurer told reporters.

"However, without action from Ottawa the budget may not succeed to the degree we might expect. The budget will do a great deal to help our economy, but we need Ottawa to get it rolling again."

The tersely-phrased speech was mainly an addition of programs previously announced, refinements of existing measures and a few glimpses of legislation planned for later.

But it did include a caustic, bitter assault on the Trudeau government's monetary and taxation policies ranging from Finance Minister Benson's controversial white paper on taxation to federal-provincial shared-cost schemes.

Provincial NDP leader Stephen Lewis accused the government of pandering to its corporate allies with tax incentives that won't stimulate new jobs.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: Skies will be mainly sunny across Ontario today and afternoon temperatures are expected to reach the mid 50s to the low 60s in the south .The sunny weather, however, is expected to be short-lived as a storm centre developing over Kansas has produced adverse weather in the central states. It is expected to move towards Ontario by Wednesday morning and as a result skies will be mainly cloudy with some periods of rain over the southern and central sections of the province.

MPs Asked to Accept Large Pay Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of Parliament are going to be asked to give themselves a 50-per-cent increase in income.

Prime Minister Trudeau announced Monday that legislation will be introduced this spring to increase the salaries of MPs to $18,000 from $12,000 and increase their tax-free expense allowance to $8,000 from $6,000.

The same legislation also would increase their tax-free expense allowance $22,000 — $18,000 in salary and $4,000 in tax-free allowances — from the present $12,000 salary and $3,000 expenses.

This would be the first increase for parliamentarians since 1963, and Mr. Trudeau said it would be equivalent to about a six-per-cent-per-year increase.

The salary issue has been under review for months, and late last year a three-member committee of outsiders headed by T. N. Beaupre, president of Dontar Ltd., recommended that salaries for MPs be increased to $25,000 and the tax-free expense allowance be replaced by a more generous, but accountable, expense scheme.

Along with announcing plans for increasing parliamentary salaries — which won't apply to officers of Parliament — Mr. Trudeau also said the salaries of senior public servants would be revised upwards and the salaries of federally-appointed judges would be increased significantly. Legislation would also be introduced to increase the salary of the auditor-general to $39,000 from $32,000.

The salaries of senior public servants were studied by an advisory group headed by J. V. Clyne, chairman of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., of Vancouver.

The group recommended a new framework under which the top salaries of deputy ministers would rise to $50,000 from the present $42,000.

Mr. Trudeau's announcement did not give details on the proposed salary revisions for senior public servants, but he did say the changes would be implemented in two stages — half the increases retroactive to Jan. 1, 1971 and the full increase effective next Jan. 1.

The salary increases for judges would be implemented in the same manner. The chief justice of Canada, now earning $40,000, would be given a $3,500 increase retroactive to last Jan. 1, and another $3,500 next Jan. 1. Other Supreme Court judges would go up to $42,000 from $35,000 in the same two stages.

County court chief judges, now earning $19,000, would earn $27,000 by next Jan. 1 and other judges of the same court would get $25,000 instead of $19,000.

The initial indication around Parliament was that a vast majority of MPs would support the salary increases.

Among those opposing the measure is David Lewis, newly-elected leader of the New Democratic Party, who said "this is far too large an increase.

Under the legislation to be introduced, parliamentary salary increases would be retroactive to last Oct. 8 when this session of Parliament began.

Mr. Trudeau also said that the Prime Minister's Residence Act would be changed to the Official Residences Act and provide rent-free accommodation to the prime minister, the leader of the Opposition and the Speaker of the Commons. Mr. Trudeau now contributes $5,000 a year toward the upkeep of 21 Sussex Drive, his official residence.

U.S. Tourists Burn to Death

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Three persons were burned to death today on the Macdonald-Cartier Freeway when a transport truck collided with a stopped car. Provincial police now are trying to obtain fingerprints and personal papers from the three bodies which were burned beyond recognition. Police said a car apparently stopped without any lights. A transport hit the car — which bore Illinois licence plates — and it burst into flames. Before help could arrive, the car was destroyed and the three occupants killed.

EDMONTON (CP) — Authority to ban rock festivals and other open-air entertainment events in Alberta is contained in amendments to the Amusement Act given second reading Monday in the legislature.

New Secondary School Planned for Stirling

Hastings county trustees last night gave approval in principle to the construction of the county's ninth secondary school.

It is slated for Stirling and will be ready by 1974.

The secondary school is part of a plan for a campus-type setup in the village. It will be built on 35 acres of land purchased from Cosmos Imperial Mills for construction of a senior elementary school.

The senior elementary school, given approval in principle when the board adopted a five-year capital works program last year, will be ready for pupils by September, 1972.

But before the department of education would give approval for the senior element a ry school, the board had to indicate its plans for a future secondary school on the site. The two schools will be planned as one unit, although their construction will be staggered. Joint use will be made by the secondary school of the heating plant, gym, library and shops.

In announcing the construction plans today, Donald Williams, board chairman, said trustees were looking ahead at increased enrolments expected in secondary schools in the next three to five years. The Stirling elementary school are now operating over capacity, with portable class rooms and pupils jammed in to libraries and general purpose rooms.

The board is seeking department approval for other school construction already approved in principle by trustees.

The building program for 1971 also calls for a Foxboro elementary school with a year for elementary program, a senior elementary school addition and replacement Frankford school the renovation of Avondale school for use by retarded children and a North Hastings senior elementary school in Bancroft which has already been approved by the department.

A new school on a new site is estimated to cost $2,850,000 exclusive of furnishings.

One of the prime reasons for the choice of the Stirling site was the availability of water and sewers. The department of education is believed to be reluctant to approve school sites that cannot be tied in with municipal water and sewage disposal systems.

Found at Fault

Responsibility for a Feb. 12 accident at the corner of Dundas Street West and Sidney Street, which saw five area young people taken to hospital with multiple injuries, was assessed the driver of the car in provincial court Friday.

Fined $125 and costs of $64 was Wayne S. Bedore of 69 Victoria Avenue, when he was found guilty of careless driving.

Injuries in the accident were sustained by Bedore, who suffered lacerations to his lip and a fractured shoulder and pelvis; Wanda Jane Veeder, 16 of Middleton Park, Trenton, lacerations to her face; Sandra Mary Gautreau, 15, of Middleton Park, Trenton, fractured left ankle and facial lacerations; Brian Garrison, 19, of Trenton, facial lacerations, and Leon Quinlan, 22, of Madoc, who suffered lacerations and compound facial fractures.

Choir Hit At Council

"With children like these there should be no concern about the future of Canada."

Such were the words of compliment from Mayor J. Russell Scott at city council yesterday after members were treated to two vocal numbers by the junior choir from Park Dale elementary school.

The 32-member choir of 29 girls and three boys sang their special Bellevile centennial song, plus another patriotic number They Call It Canada.

The Bellevile song was written by teacher J. Hurst with the lyrics being put to music by the school music teacher, Mrs. D. Faulkner, who yesterday led the choir in its presentation to council.

On the recommendation of Alderman Ross David, council voted to recognize the choir's effort by presentation of a suitable plaque.

City Requests More Housing

Belleville city council has asked the Ontario Housing Corporation to provide more family and senior citizens' housing in the city.

The immediate request is for 74 family residential units ranging from two to five bedrooms and for 97 senior citizen's one - bedroom apartments.

But according to W. James, Belleville OHC supervisor, the need is still great and council will ask for another OHC survey to determine how many additional such housing units are needed.

The recommendation for the 171 new units asked for by council yesterday was the result of an OHC survey done last year.

Construction of the recommended 111 new units would bring the number of geared-to-income family units in the city to 210 and the number of senior citizen apartments to 190.

When Ontario Housing Corporation first constructed geared - to - income family housing in Belleville a number of years ago, the decision was for single family residences which were built in different sections of the city.

Since then apartment or town house units have been constructed on North Park Street and on Pine Street extension with both of these developments now being fully occupied.

The first senior citizens' apartments were built on Turnbull Street where about 45 units were provided.

Mohawk Liaison Officer Appointed

Indian students from Tyendinaga Reserve now attending Belleville schools will have their own Mohawk liaison officer starting in September.

Leslie Claus, a former teacher on the reserve, has been appointed to the position and will have his headquarters at Moira Secondary School. There are 68 Mohawk students enrolled at Moira.

His appointment was recommended by the Council of the Mohawks of the Bay of Quinte. His salary will be paid by the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development. The government of Canada will also pay up to $6,000 for supplies and other expenditures in connection with setting up the liaison office at Moira.

Trustees were told last night that Mr. Claus will act as a resource person in schools, instil students with understanding the Mohawk heritage and culture and will teach the Mohawk language as an extracurricular activity.

Although he is a qualified teacher, Mr. Claus has been a liason representative for Indian culture for the past few years, travelling around the province in that capacity.

Support Clarified

TRENTON (Staff) — Officials of Trenton's retarded workshop, ARC Industries, ask that explanation be given regarding Chamber of Commerce support of the organization for which the Trenton Chamber will receive a president's award next week.

In June, 1968, the chamber organized a walkathon which raised $22,000 for the workshop fund. It opened in Jan. 1969 and has relied totally on the support of the general public since then.

An Intelligencer report Saturday briefly mentioned chamber assistance to ARC Industries without giving extensive details of this support.

Dr. Potter Wins Point, Now Urges Go Slow

"After talking about it for three years, I never thought I would see the day I was urging the province to go easy on nursing home care," Dr. Richard T. Potter, MPP, Quinte and minister without portfolio, said today.

"It was one of the reasons I decided to run for politics three years ago and I am delighted that Ontario has now agreed to embark upon this course."

Dr. Potter's exuberance was generated by Premier William Davis' first budget which indicated Ontario would include nursing home care under its medical health plan in April of 1972.

"We need a year to work out the details now that the decision has been made," said Dr. Potter. "We do not want to get into a hassle with nursing homes like we first did on OHIP (Ontario Hospital Services Insurance Plan).

"We have to establish the regulations so that nursing homes must provide a recognized standard of care. In addition, under the plan, only those patients must be admitted who require specific treatment and we must work out the regulations as to how pay - ment will be made.

"One of the most important things that has to be recognized by doctors and the public is that this proposal is only for those patients requiring care which they can not get at home and which we shouldn't be providing in hospitals.

"The plan is not designed to under w r i t e a retirement home, nor is it for the chronically ill who must be looked after in a different type of institution."

Dr. Potter said the nursing home proposal fits in with the Hon. Bert Lawrence's comments regarding the delivery of medical care to the residents of Ontario.

Dr. Potter also said nursing care would be one aspect of this integrated health program "as is the home care program."

"Many people in Belleville do not know that the home care program has been operating quite successfully in the Belleville area for some months and it is being well received, both by the doctors and patients."

Asked if he thought treasury minister D a r c y McKeough's budget was "an election budget", Dr. Potter said: "I don't think so. I think we have got a lot of good programs in the pipeway over the next few months. The prime minister has not told anyone, but I personally think next year will be soon enough."

IN MEMORIAM

BATEMAN — In sad and loving memory of a dear husband and father, Fred Thomas Bateman who passed away April 27, 1970.
More and more each day we miss you
Friends may think the wound is healed
But their little know the sorrow,
Which lingers still and deepens
Time cannot sweep away the edge of grief
But fond memory brings you near
And keeps remembered by brother Douglas and sister-in-law Gloria.

BATES — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Ernest Bates who passed away suddenly, April 27, 1966.
Those we love go not from memory
Nor leave our world of mind
They live as in the hearts,
Who love and leave behind
Loving and kind in all his ways,
Upright and just to the end of his days
Sincere and true in heart and mind,
Sadly missed and always remembered by daughter Jessie.

PLUMPTON — In loving memory of a dear wife and mother, Ethel, who passed away April 27, 1970.
It's a pain to be missing her
There's a voice that we're longing to hear
There's a smile we'll remember for ever
There's a face we try to forget ever year
There's a heart that's broken
There's a memory fond and true.
And a love that will remain
Forever and forever
Sadly missed still for you.
Ever remembered by husband Ralph, Peter, John, Mary Beth and Nancy Jane.

MITCHELL — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather, Ernest Mitchell who passed away April 27, 1970.

Council Approves Greenbelt Purchase

City council yesterday confirmed that it will pay up to $18,000 as its share of the cost for purchase of 18.4 acres of greenbelt flood plain land west of the Moira River between College Street and Highway 401.

Purpose of the purchase would be to add to the acreage already purchased by the Moira River Conservation Authority to be used by the city for greenbelt and park development.

Estimated cost of the property is $70,000 to which the provincial government would give a 75 per cent grant.

The city, in turn would pay 90 per cent of the remaining authority share.

In recommending approval of the purchase, Alderman Paul Russell, as chairman of the city parks board, said this was an opportunity to pick up additional parkland at a "cheap" price to the city.

He felt that the city's share of the land cost could be managed somehow from current year's parks board budget.

Alderman Donald Soutter, chairman of the recreation and arena committee, seconded the motion for the purchase, noting that the subject land opposite the lower Moira assumed dam had great potential as a riverside recreational site.

"We should go ahead with the purchase," he said.

No Action Taken On Lawyer's Plea

City policy with respect to park dedication can show no favorites regardless of financial position.

That was the decision yesterday of city council when members voted no action on the request of a local solicitor for the city to waive payment of $339 by a Gilbert Street welfare recipient.

The request to council was made by solicitor Ian W. Brady on behalf of Lillian Mahon who has recently sold part of her Lemoine Street property. Under parks board land split policy, Miss Mahon is obliged to pay the city five per cent of the assessed value of the property sold, which amounts to $339.

The monies received by Miss Mahon from the sale of part of her property have gone to repay funds lent to her to pay arrears on taxes. Mr. Brady said waiving of the $339 payment by the city would allow Miss Mahon to improve her home which now has no heating or toilet facilities.

Despite the appeal council took the stand that city council not waive payments for one and six another and voted that no action be taken.

Committee Budget Raises Question

A Belleville alderman has questioned the size of the $300,000 Census 1971 budget which the city recreation and arena committee is submitting to council for approval.

The proposed budget, drawn up by committee members, calls for a recreation budget of $218,987 with additional costs for the Memorial arena set at $103,000 and for the Dick Ellis Rink another $97,-131.

Revenue items total $116,275 leaving a net proposed budget of $287,713.

Alderman Enos David questioned the size of the recreation budget, noting that the city of Belleville could not subsidize the size of Belleville—had a smaller budget than did Belleville.

The alderman asked if all the recreational programs offered were really called for.

He picked out instruction as one of the items which might be questioned, noting that he had learned to play the game on his own.

"I am really concerned about the cost escalation," he said.

Alderman Donald Soutter, chairman of the Recreation and Arena Committee, said the departmental estimates had been approved by his committee but would still have to get the okay of the city manager and council at its budget meeting.

Any recommendation before council yesterday, he said, was merely seeking council approval of the committee action.

Alderman David was advised that he could make a formal objection to the estimates at the council budget meeting.

Later in the evening, City Manager J. R. Reynolds said the 1971 budget had now been completed and was being typed.

After it is in the hands of individual members, council will decide the date for its budget meeting.

Y and Rec Committee Combine on Programs

Summer activities for 1,-000 different children between the ages of 6 and 12, sponsored by the YMCA and the Kirk-ville Recreation Committee, will provide employment for 23 college and high school students for at least 6 weeks this summer.

This employment figure does not include the eight to 10 students employed each summer by the Y for life guarding and supervision.

The three projects, Kinder-Kamp, Sun-Fun and Community Day Camping are expected to have a budget of approximately $16,000 of which $11,-000 will be used for payroll. Another $5,000 will be used to subsidize 240 youngsters of low-income families.

The combined income from the three projects will be $5,-000 short of the cost and it is hoped that the difference will be subsidized by the federal government.

Spokesmen for the Y say that in the event no money can be had from the government the programs will still exist but will be on a smaller scale.

The day camping project, sponsored jointly by the Y and the Belleville Recreation Committee, will operate for a six-week period commencing in July from a.m. until 4 p.m. each weekday.

This type of camping can be done at a fraction of the cost for an overnight resident camp, said Di Diamantides, general secretary of the Y.

The camp area will be located about 12 miles out of town to create the atmosphere of a resident camp. Transportation to the camp will be provided by the Y.

Crafts, woodlore, campouts, hiking and canoeing will all be part of the project designed to create clean outdoor living experience for the youngsters.

Supervision will be at a maximum with one councillor to every 10 children. Each child will bring his own food and milk will be supplied.

Researcher at Kiwanis

Brian Donaldson, a member of the research branch of the Department of Municipal Affairs, yesterday was guest speaker at the Picton Kiwanis Club. He discussed the problems and possibilities of regional government.

Speech from Throne Heard at Collegiate

PICTON (Staff) — The first sitting of model parliament at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute opened yesterday afternoon when the Speech from the Throne was read by school principal Paul Burd.

Mr. Burd, pinch - hitting for Governor - General Roland Michener, said that the New Democratic Party would introduce several bills during this session, each hopefully geared to spark fruitful debate and to lead to new legislation enhancing Canada's future security as a free nation.

The New Democratic Party won a student election held last week by sweeping a majority of 21 seats. The Progressive Conservatives followed with 16 seats while the Liberal Party trailed with 12.

The "Governor - General's," in his speech, reminded the assembly that the NDP holds the position of a minority government and will seek the support of each parliament member in its efforts to pass bills that would prove beneficial to Canada. "Canada today is a strong and free nation. It is our responsibility to maintain strength and freedom within our borders, to see to it that Canada remains free of foreign domination and internal strife of any nature.

With this in mind, New Democratic Party has devised bills that we feel will serve to aid the efforts being made to build a united Canada and that all its citizens can find security and happiness within this nation."

"The environmental pollution is a foremost problem in Canada today. To combat this growing problem a bill will be introduced that has been designed to halt the spread of pollution and waste and reverse effects of present ecological crisis by the increased use of packaging materials that can either be easily and effectively decomposed or reprocessed for future use."

The "rapid takeover" of Canadian resources and industries was warned against in the throne speech and it was stated that measures would be introduced to allow for buying out of American shares. They would then be redistributed among Canadians.

Unemployment was discussed in the speech and it was suggested the present govern-

County Leaders Hold Judgment

PICTON (Staff) — Picton mayor Margaret Ackerman observed last night, "I think I'll just sit and listen," when regional government was discussed during a special meeting of the Picton Kiwanis Club. Mayor Ackerman officially welcomed Brian Donaldson, a representative from the Department of Municipal Affairs, Toronto, who had addressed Kiwanians and members of Prince Edward's ten municipalities. "In regional government the answer for this area? I wonder," commented mayor Ackerman before Mr. Donaldson's introduction.

County warden Allan Anderson asserted, "We'll reserve our feelings on regional government." He reminded councillors that through attending ACRO (Association of Counties and Regions of Ontario) conventions and other meetings many of them have become familiar with this topic. "We are interested in hearing another slant on it," he remarked in welcoming the speaker.

Regional Government Concept Said Designed for Urban Areas

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON (Staff) — Regional government, a system generally aimed at the whole province, "is being implemented with priority in Ontario's rapid growth areas, Brian Donaldson, a member of the research branch of the department of municipal affairs, Toronto, said here last night that Prince Edward is "treated" with a slower growth pattern which allows councillors to examine possible changes without pressure. The speaker was addressing Picton Kiwania Club members and their guests, councillors from each of Prince Edward's ten municipalities.

Mr. Donaldson discussed local government in Ontario noting that the province records 900 municipalities. Part of the municipal structure is formed by 1000 boards and commissions described as "all part of the government too, and sometimes a good deal of power." Mr. Donaldson mentioned county school boards, PUC commissions, health unit boards and conservation authorities. He added that "when things go wrong" councillors often find it frustrating to be blamed for a commission or board decision made without their direct involvement.

The speaker termed it "the problem of the citizen" to understand who makes the decisions. He observed that the taxpayer often feels all electors persons are "passing the buck".

Mr. Donaldson considered the problems of small municipalities faced with lack of resources and rapid growth. He remarked that many of them cannot provide needed services such as sewage disposal and water because of their costs. "If a major proposal is brought into a small municipality, it's difficult for that municipality to analyze it," said Mr. Donaldson. He added that in all changes in local government taxpayers do not favor transferring their elected representatives further away from them.

The spokesman for the department of municipal affairs said that problems of urban growth and lack of co-ordination are "particularly acute" in the area from Windsor to Toronto and near Ottawa. He commented that urban growth is very rapid in these areas and added "It's here the program of regional government is aimed." Mr. Donaldson said that there is general acceptance of the fact that amalgamation is needed, to a certain extent, among the smaller municipalities.

Regional government, in the speaker's opinion, should prepare an area for growth instead of striving to catch up with backlogged growth problems. He referred to a lack of services created in Carleton county and said that it has mushroomed to a $200-million project.

Urban services were provided in Ottawa but the city was separated from Carleton county. This outside area must be serviced but this project is now a matter of "catching up" with rapid growth.

Mr. Donaldson noted that in areas where the growth pressure is lesser consolidation is considered. He mentioned the union of the cities of Fort William and Port Arthur, commenting it had "worked out exceptionally well." When the phase - in of these cities took place it was conducted with plans to retain municipal employees without "shocking out" income. Consolidation now is being considered by other areas such as Timmins, Kenora and Sarnia.

The speaker said that he is aware that Prince Edward County councillors prepared a brief which presents the entire county as one municipality. A committee of council met last June with former minister of municipal affairs, D'arcy McKeough to discuss regional government as it applies locally. Mr. Donaldson remarked that council was advised to proceed slowly since priority is given to areas with rapid urban growth. He predicted that regional government will be strongly emphasized in future and the natural growth pattern will be shifted. Agriculture remains an eastward movement of industry to the Port Hope and Cobourg areas.

UIC to Hire More Students

Noel Stockton, Ontario regional public relations officer, for the Unemployment Insurance Commission, has announced that "a considerable number of university and high school students will be hired as casual help for programs to be initiated during the summer months."

Additional staff, to supplement the regular 300 employees, has been approved with plans for implementation of the new Unemployment Insurance Act, expected to become law this summer. The act underwent its second reading in the House of Commons last week.

Mr. Stockton said that "as many as 700 are employed from the Quinte area" to carry the increased winter workload. Principally serving as computation staff, typists and manual employees are also hired.

"Normally in winter the claim load increases because of our seasonal climate," said the public relations officer.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission has not yet announced the number of students it will hire.

Saws, Drills Found in Car

Police have arrested six Quinte area residents after more than $500 in saws, drills and other equipment taken from Chilhom's Mills, Roslin, were discovered in a car last night.

Constable Thomas Stone of the Belleville Police department discovered the goods when he checked a car at the corner of Church and Dundas Streets at 12:33 a.m. today.

Awards Presented

PICTON (Staff) — Picton Kiwanian Roland Moore recently achieved a perfect two-year club attendance record but did not receive his attendance award last night. He was absent from the presentation meeting.

Mr. Moore was among nine Kiwanians receiving recognition from Kiwanis Lt.-Governor George Hume, Belleville. Perfect attendance for one year was reported for Kiwanians Willard Martin, William Hall and Ron Hoos. A two - year award was earned by Roland Moore. Honored for three years of perfect attendance were past president Donald Stewart and president Leslie Dudley.

A seven - year record was achieved by James (Scotty) McGinnis. Kiwanian Donald Stanton received a presentation for fourteen years of perfect attendance while past-president Chris Lockyer topped the honor roll with six-teen years.

Brand New School Favored by Board

Hastings county board of education is going to try to talk the department of education into a new school for the trainable retarded instead of a renovation job on Avondale School.

Avondale has been marked to replace William R. Dick School on John Street for some time, and Monday night trustees saw architects' plans for remodeling the school to suit the needs of the retarded.

But trustee MacDonald Smith of Belleville objected to the use of Avondale.

"There is no doubt that if the money were coming out of our pocket we would sell that school and build a new one and the money from the sale would make it a good deal," he said. "If it's a good deal for us it should be a good deal for us and the department of education together.

The ideal location of a school for the retarded, associate superintendent Frank Tate told the board, is Centennial Secondary School grounds where 26 acres are available near the facilities of OSID and the new Dick Ellis Rink.

Some trustees said that the floor area surrounding Avondale school was inadequate for playground activities.

Remodeling Avondale for a retarded children's school would cost $304,500, of which $202,000 would be a loan from the capital aid fund.

The old school, built in 1904 would be demolished and home economics, lunch, music, arts and crafts, principal's and mechanical rooms built. The five classrooms built in 1951 and 1953 would be retain-

Lewis Heads NDP

Leaving NDP leader David Lewis to ponder how to deal with the party's unruly Waffle group and its Quebec wing, Canadians may wonder what the party, once some semblance of unity is restored, will do to foster national progress.

On television Sunday night Mr. Lewis told us nothing new. Admittedly you cannot say much in a five-minute party political broadcast, but just the same we might have expected more than just a review of the country's tired old problems — unemployment, inflation, regional disparities, rural depopulation, urban crowding — and a vague offer, ultimately, of "serious suggestions" on how to cure them.

There was the inevitable reference to American influence on the Canadian economy and while we know Mr. Lewis would be happy if somehow the United States would just fade away, we know also (as he too must know) that without U.S. and other overseas financial and industrial initiatives here we would be of much lesser eminence than we actually are.

Besides that, Mr. Lewis talked about the "vigorous debate" which the party's leadership convention had served up, greater, he claimed than what the other parties generate, and to this we can only say that debate alone is not going to solve unemployment or anything else.

It will be interesting to see how Mr. Lewis tackles not only the current fragmentation of his party but also what he has to offer for the good of the country other than negative criticism. There is enough discontent in the land that the government must look to its laurels, faded as they are if both PCs and NDP are not to make considerable inroads in an election that cannot be far off.

Distant Dream

What's a Million, as the late F. D. Howe once exclaimed. Or $85,000 for that matter. Mayor Russell Booth believes the proposed urban renewal plan, obtained for the latter sum, was a waste of money.

"For $85,000," he said at a recent planning board meeting, "we could have been well advised to spend $10,000 locally. With the balance we could have bought a Rembrandt to decorate city hall."

The Mayor acknowledged it was a good (urban renewal) plan, but "it offers great encouragement for people to go into the planning profession."

Well yes indeed . . . and yet the deed is done and the money spent. Urban renewal meanwhile remains some far distant dream, with thorny problems arising the way toward realization. Problems of expropriation, gaining acceptance from absentee owners and the like, as outlined in this newspaper last week. The only sure thing about our problem today is that it is there and that it has seen little change in many a long day. There has been a fire here and a fire there, and some new commercial enterprises have been established, but basically Front Street is unchanged. Ambitions ahead of us may see some transformation, but it looks as if the process of evolution toward a new image is going to be slow.

Times Past

Photographs from the "good old days" are always a source of fascination. The Picton Gazette had one on its front page recently and it showed the band and firemen of the day — 1889 — taking their ease on the shores of Forester's Island on the Bay of Quinte near the Skyway bridge.

The occasion is believed to be an early rally of the International Foresters and the scene is a leisurely one of those times, with soberly-clad, straw-hatted gentlemen in row-boats at the water's edge, a group of ladies in their long Victorian attire on the beach and shaded by some trees surrounding a fine mansion in the background. Another group, parasols in their hands to protect them from the sun are spaced out rather formally (no doubt at the behest of the photographer, himself stationed either in a boat or on a dock) in a clearing amid the trees.

The picture of a day long vanished, light years away in terms of customs, morals, means of transportation and much else. We have in our possession a booklet of The Silver Islet region of Thunder Bay's Sibley peninsula, with pictures of similar outings around 1909. There are the boats, citizens enjoying the outdoors and the same calm and unruffled atmosphere.

These were around the times described by Jerome K. Jerome in his classic Three Men in a Boat. Now they belong to history, a nostalgic past.

In the Security of the Senate

Air Canada and the CBC Get Hauled Over the Coals

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — There is a plus in the Senate that in the House of Commons can be a minus.

It is the utterly unfettered freedom to say anything and everything you may want to get off your chest, even if it sometimes comes straight off the top of your head.

With or without documentation or even any substantial foundation in fact, or the faintest hint of a sense of responsibility.

Few Senators do it. But it has happened. There have been shocking exhibitions of bigotry, petulance and prejudice.

But mostly there has been good, substantial work done with reasonably considered and well-based views.

No matter, though, which it is, good, solid, contribution in the best tradition of the parliamentary process, or a shameful abuse of the liminality from retribution, it can make no difference to a Senator's tenure of office.

He is there for life, if he was appointed before the recent retirement requirement became applicable — and if named in the Senate since the resignation rule was made operative, remains until 75 and then lives out his days on an adequately generous pension.

The taxpayers can never get at him, no matter what his mistakes, regardless of his worth or lack of it, irrespective of his attendance which can be as little as one appearance on the Senate floor each session.

It is the greatest club in the world — appointment to it, said famed newspaper editor Grattan O'Leary before he himself was named Senator, is better than winning the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes.

But to the poor Member of Parliament.

Consider his tenure of office.

Never sure. Always worried about the next election.

To remain active in national political life, he must make it back to the House of Commons — while just down the long marble corridors of the Centre Block, the lucky Senator has it made for as long as he lives.

How can this freedom be used?

Here are two of the better examples displayed recently in the Senate, both by Albertans, one Liberal Senator Donald Cameron of Banff, the other, former long-time (it was a record) provincial premier Ernest C. Manning, now first and only Social Credit Senator, of Edmonton.

Both Senators tore strips off crown corporations.

One made it a personally-based attack.

The other a publicly-directed assault.

First Senator Cameron. He made it personal.

Doing a lot of flying — Senators are allowed expenses — he said weekly travel to and from their homes — Banff's Cameron has been running a check on Air Canada's punctuality, and finds the service "late at least 70 percent of the time."

He recently told the Senate he had made his 581st cross-Canada flight, mostly by Air Canada between Ottawa and Calgary and "mainly," he insisted, despite expense - covered Senate travel, at his own cost.

Late flights irritating to such a seasoned traveller?

Of course, but so have been other things with Air Canada.

Like the cross, and he told of being served an "alleged Cornish hen," which, as an ex-farm boy, he spotted as a Leghorn in the disguise of "chicken - and-ham" wrapping.

"... I called the stewardess," he related to his fellow-Senators, "and asked her if she would wrap it in tinfoil and send it to (Air Canada President) John Baldwin."

Annoying, too, complained Senator Cameron, was the lack of "esprit de corps and smartness" of some of the stewardesses.

It was all so irritating, he reported, that "a lot of former Air Canada passengers," who apparently would rather switch than fight, were flying a rival airline "every chance they get."

Now for Senator Manning.

There was nothing personal in what he said, instead, he insisted, he spoke of the CBC "as we all have seen it".

Seen what?

The network's "excessive cattering to violence," provision at public expense of a "forum for radicals and revolutionaries to disseminate their propaganda at hate and terror in undermining the rule of law on which society depends for its survival."

Anything else? Plenty.

The network promotion of "the wide-spread acceptance of the supposedly sophisticated belief that morality is out of date with everyone entitled to make his own rules and be free to do his own thing."

And finally, among any number of other indictments on the Senator's bill of CBC complaints: ". . . the policy that anything pertaining to moral standards or spiritual values is to be ridiculed and made the butt of snide jokes, while situations that are immoral and obscene are inconsistently played up and exploited."

Two different Senators, two different styles, and two of the different motivations. Which one appeals to you?

And would you not like to be in the Senate where the embalmed ceiling worked in gold leaf is no way in the sky-high limit of oratorical flights?

Inflation Still Threatens

Quebec Le Soleil: The severe measures Canada adopted in 1970 to fight inflation brought us price increases that were among the highest in the Western or industrialized world.

But now that anti-inflationary measures have been eased somewhat, to stimulate the economy and reduce unemployment, the spectre of inflation is rising again.

In the first quarter of 1971 prices increased by 1.2 per cent, the biggest increase in consumer prices in 10 years. . . .

In view of the partial failure of voluntary controls on prices and wages, should we move to the second stage of anti-inflationary strategy and impose rigid government controls on price and wage increases?

So far, few Western governments . . . have settled on such a solution. Where it has been imposed, as under Mr. Wilson's Labor government in Great Britain, the coercive control of prices and incomes has not been a smashing success.

However, as inflation becomes more menacing and the classical ways of fighting it more costly, on the level of unemployment for example, pressure for coercive control of prices and incomes is getting stronger. . . .

When confronted with two evils, the problem is to choose the lesser. Following the partial failure of voluntary restraints on prices and incomes, coercive controls, despite their inconveniences and their complexity, appear to be the only solution to the war declared on inflation.

B.C. View of Ontario's Civil Rights Probe

Vancouver Sun

The province of Ontario may not be quite the hotbed of law reform that it sometimes seems to people beyond its borders but as a generator of exciting ideas it is unquestionably a gripping concern.

One reason for this is that the province's royal commission inquiry into civil rights under ex-chief justice James McRuer gave Ontario an impressive headstart over most of its neighbors. British Columbia's own law reform commission under the former federal justice minister, Davey Fulton, tends to be obscured by the McRuer inquiry's dust.

And although far away fields admittedly look greener, an other reason is that the Ontario legislature gives off an aura, at least, of being a mature deliberative body - illusive or not, that's something that distance hardly would impart in the B.C. House — and the government of being receptive to constructive advice.

Yet another reason is the presence in the Ontario legislature of the humble Morton Shulman, a boat - rocker of a quality in short supply in provincial politics, and the author of proposed legislation to provide for compensation to people found not guilty on criminal charges.

That the NDP member and former Toronto coroner is on to a worthy cause is shown both by the support it is getting from individual Liberals and Conservatives and the wide public discussion it has generated in Ontario.

There can be no getting around the fact that innocent people can suffer hardship at the hands of the law. Their losses can include legal and other costs, salary, job and, just as the truth never seems to catch up with the lie, their good reputation. Although the Crown fails to prove them guilty, it accepts no responsibility for the damage it has done.

The harassment of the Georgia Straight newspaper in Alberta provides a case in point. Last July, police in Edmonton seized copies of an issue and charges were brought against the Straight under the obscenity section of the Criminal Code. After many adjournments the case came to court in mid-February and the Crown dropped the case. As we said in an editorial at the time, it is a dangerous thing when the Criminal Code can be used as "a form of informal censorship". But hardly less serious was the fact that the seizure, and the legal and other costs to which the newspaper was put, added up to a considerable financial loss for the Straight, with no provision for compensation by the Crown.

When a person is wrongfully arrested and malice can be shown, he can sue for damages wrongfully imprisoned, it is the practice for a legislature to pass a bill providing compensation, an ad hoc remedy at best. But except for a rarely-used section of the Criminal Code permitting courts to award set legal costs to either Crown or defendant in certain instances, the victim of a frivolous trial is plain out of luck.

What Dr. Shulman would do about this obvious injustice is this: a provincial board would be appointed to consider applications for compensation the board would winnow out the "genuinely innocent" from the "probably guilty" who've beat the rap on technicalities an award would be made from the public purse for losses suffered.

It is the mechanics of granting compensation, rather than the principle involved, that is drawing criticism. It is said, rightly, that the compensation hearing would amount to "a trial of a trial," in that it would have to determine the degree of guilt or innocence, a distinction that is not made by the courts. It is said this could lead to a "double vision" of justice, especially if the board's finding left an implication of guilt after a court's pronouncement of non-guilt. How these objections can be met, while still compensating the people who've suffered through the Crown's bad judgment, is something to be watched with interest.

Bilingualism

High Cost and Little Return

Winnipeg Tribune

Only 10 per cent of 22,000 public servants who started the federal Government's second series of language - training courses have finished them, a Commons committee has been told. More than three times as many — 7,000 — gave up before the end. Reason for the high dropout rate is given as "weak motivation."

These are startling figures. Total cost of courses is $30 million, or about $14,000 for each student graduated. Yet, of 270,000 posts coming under the Public Service Commission, only about 27,000 carry a bilingual requirement, mostly in the Ottawa area. Thus one in every 11 persons taking the course qualifies to compete for one in every 10 positions in the civil service.

To date, so far as is known, some 200 civil servants have completed the course at Level 3 and thus were considered bilingual. That means each person so far promoted has cost the Canadian taxpayer an estimated $140,000.

This is a high cost to bear in the name of bilingualism.

In this day of ever-increasing taxes and high unemployment, Canadians might do well to ask if they can afford the price.

Bayside Opening Delayed Until 1972

Bayside Secondary School, scheduled to open in September, won't be ready until January, 1972, and its students will have to double up with Trenton High School's on a shift system for the first four months of the school year.

The question is: what sort of shift system is best — a split week for each school's students? Hastings county board of education heard the two choices Monday night and sent the matter to a committee for further consideration.

Everyone but Middleton Park parents appears to favor a split week system, by which Trenton students would attend school Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Bayside students would attend Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays for the same length of time.

The other choice is a split day system, by which Bayside students would attend school from 8 a.m. until 12:45 p.m. and Trenton students would attend from 1 until 5:45 p.m.

J. C. Garrett, principal of Trenton High School, told the board that parents, with the exception of those in Middleton Park, teachers, and students favor the split week program. But the parents of the 330 THS students from the air base object to the weekends being spoiled by school on Saturday. About 90% of these students will be enrolled at Bayside Secondary School.

Trenton High School will have an enrolment of 1,300 next year and Bayside 750. All Bayside students will be bused to school, but all Trenton students will come from the town and none will require busing.

As a compromise, trustees suggested a 2½-day week for each set of students, with Bayside and Trenton students each attending school for a half day Friday. This would eliminate busing school on Saturdays.

Mr. Garrett told trustees that provincial law requires students to go to school for a minimum of five hours a day. If Friday's were split, the students would put in only a 4½ hour day. However, due to the pressing circumstances the department of education might accept the shortened day for the 75 days involved.

Trustees decided that the principals and administration needed another two weeks to work out the various schedule choices and consult with the department. A committee of the two principals and the five trustees concerned was set up to study all the choices.

The trustees on the committee are Ryloh Weaver and Mrs. Jean Hotchkiss of Trenton, John Forbes, separate school representative for the county, Raymond Rowe of Frankford and Donald Williams of Stirling.

Fire Destroys Wing of House

BRIGHTON (Staff) — Fire destroyed a wing of the frame home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hadwen at Hilton, five miles north of here last night.

Brighton's fire chief W. V. Tuckaberry who led the fight against the blaze said flames were racing up the east wall of the large residence when his department's two trucks arrived on the scene at about 7:30 p.m.

Mrs. Hadwen and two children were in the house when the fire erupted and dashed to safety at a neighbor's home.

Chief Tuckaberry said this morning he believes the $12,000 blaze began in the home's wiring system.

He credits the Force's new water truck with saving the main portion of the house. Acquired three weeks ago, it has a 1,500 gallon capacity and a handy addition for rural fires.

Education Philosophy Outlined by Williams

By BARRY McCULLAGH
Staff Reporter

Hastings County Education Board chairman Don Williams of Stirling told Belleville Rotarians yesterday that he personally was in favor of provincial cost guidelines. Not so much for Hastings which had been below the ceiling, "but certainly in some boards throughout the province costs have been sky-high and some ceiling had to be established." At the same time he suggested that perhaps some warning should have been given of the government's action.

Noting that the county's $20 million plus budget meant cost - per - pupil of $337 in elementary schools and $1,035 in secondary schools, compared with the provincial figures of $345 and $1,000 respectively, Mr. Williams went on to note the comparisons made recently by Ontario Premier Davis, with regard to what the public spends on cigarettes, liquor, cars and gasoline.

The public said Mr. Williams, was becoming very aware of costs. Twenty per cent of all taxes collected in Canada went into education and it was recognized that there were other priorities such as medical plans, old age pensions and transportation, all of which were demands upon the tax dollar.

Mr. Williams noted that the press attended board meetings and "we enjoy having them," but there are community colleges and universities . . . and "I don't think we really know what it costs per pupil in them."

He did not think the press got into these institutions, yet they were supported from public funds also. It would be interesting, he said, to know what the cost per student was at Loyalist and at universities.

Mr. Williams refuted the idea that the system employed "too many" supervisors and consultants. Actually there was one fewer than under the old system. He spoke of the difficulties of providing equal opportunity for all students in an area extending from Belleville north to Maynooth, and from Trenton to Deseronto. The board had started along the road but had a long way to go.

Providing bus transportation Mr. Williams described as a "real problem." It cost a million dollars a year and for many students involved getting up at 6.30 a.m. and not getting home until 5.30 p.m.

The board chairman spoke of developments such as open classrooms, of the easy atmosphere in them, with a "nice murmur going on" between students and teachers and a greater sense of freedom. However, the objective was, as education director Eric Runacres had put it, "freedom, but accountability too." Students should still have a broad education and he hoped that it would be broad enough that there would remain an element of struggle.

Seventy per cent of students were now staying at high school and Mr. Williams said he did not agree students should be allowed to drop out when they wanted. Young people went through changes and phases and educators had to make school interesting enough that students would stay.

Teachers might like to have students who were well - motivated, polite, and interested, but part of the teacher's job was to push the slow learners and average students.

"We have a lot of excellent teachers," he said.

Generally speaking, Mr. Williams said he was impressed by the teenagers. Young people today were more concerned about the environment, about peace and war and so on than were their parents. Too many parents had opted out, but he did not think young people had all the answers. Moreover they should be made aware of this. He cited the events in Indian culture whereby the braves would listen to the advice of their elders. The Scriptures afforded similar parallels.

Suggesting that we should say "No" to the teenagers where necessary, Mr. Williams said that more should be heard from the "silent majority," for as someone had said, all that was necessary for evil to prevail in the world was for good men to say nothing.

IAN E. REILLY

Labor Post To Reilly

The Union Label Trades Department of the Canadian Labor Congress has announced the appointment of Ian E. Reilly, as national president, succeeding Stan Clair of Waterloo.

Mr. Reilly, vice - president for Ontario for the past three years, was appointed Sunday to fill the vacancy left by Mr. Clair, president since 1954.

The new president, who resides with his wife at 411 Dundas Street West, Belleville, will serve in this capacity until next April when the Canadian Labor Congress convention and election of officers will be held in Ottawa.

Mr. Reilly became active in labor work in 1937 when he served as secretary-treasurer of the Trenton Labor Council.

Careless Driving Fine Total $229.

Joseph Leslie Reynolds, 22, of Lindsay, Ontario, was fined $225 and $4 court costs in provincial court yesterday when he pleaded guilty to careless driving.

The charges arose following a two-car collision on Highway 62 March 19. Total damage was estimated at $3,800 and one passenger sustained a broken ankle. Others involved received only minor injuries.

Resignation Announced By Trenton Treasurer

TRENTON (Staff) — The treasurer of the town of Trenton, Peter De Groot, has announced his resignation, which will become effective May 15.

Town council met privately with Mr. De Groot last week and reluctantly accepted his decision based on health reasons, says Mayor Duncan McDonald.

The 46-year-old Netherlands native has held the treasurer's post since 1965 and leaves to accept a job here with a local business concern.

Trenton's administrative board has been working in consultation with an auditing firm to establish job qualifications for the position and the search for a replacement will begin shortly, with advertisements being placed in the local press and municipal affairs periodicals.

In the three weeks before his departure, the treasurer will be completing his 1971 town budget . . . now virtually finished except for the budget projections of one department.

Railway Balks At Moving Tracks

City council's request for removal of the Canadian National Railway's spur line from Great St. James Street has met with something less than acquiescence on the part of the railway.

The request of council was for the railway to investigate the possibility of removing the spur line from Stokes Street to the end of the line at National Grocers Ltd. on Pinnacle Street.

But the railway replied the line was needed to serve National Grocers and possible additional customer if a new tenant went into the former Glen Roy Creameries property.

The railway said, however, if National Grocers relocated in the year to come and no further use of that section of the spur line was contemplated, then it could again take a look at the matter.

But the stand of the railway didn't sit too well with some aldermen.

Alderman Orr said the letter seemed to close the door on removal of the tracks, but noted that not too many years ago there was track a long Pinnacle Street which was also considered essential.

"But the tracks were removed from Pinnacle Street," he said. "We need more information."

Alderman Arthur Keegan, chairman of the city traffic committee, agreed.

"Maybe we should contact National Grocers to see if they could move goods by truck," he suggested.

On recommendation of Alderman Donald Soutter, the matter was tabled until such time as the north-south arterial traffic survey is received by the city from consultants Totten, Sims and Hubicki.

Research to Be LORDC Topic

Research projects designed to attract industry and tourism to the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council area will be discussed at a committee meeting in Belleville Wednesday night.

For the first time since the committee was established one year ago, high schools and planning committee of LORDC will be meeting in this area.

In an effort to involve young people in the aims and goals of the provincially-inspired sponsored organization, representative students from the area's high schools have been invited to attend the 7:30 meeting at the library at Loyalist College.

The research committee has recently completed a brief on the Toronto - centred regional concept put forward by the provincial government in its "Design for Development" series. One of the possible affects implementation of such a plan would have on the area falling under the geographical influence of the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council. This area roughly stretches from Peterborough down to Lake Ontario and east along the shoreline to Napanee.

The council will be holding its 15th anniversary conference in Peterborough on May 19-20.

Preparing Dog for Show Requires Plenty of Patience

MONTREAL (CP) Behind every prize-winning dog is a patient master—the type who doesn't mind spending hours rolling long, silky canine hair on curlers.

Back-combing the ruff of a pekinese or manoeuvring a leg-legged afghan hound into pajamas is all in the line of duty, says Peggy McCoy, a former breeder who runs obedience classes for dogs in suburban Hudson.

Maintaining the coat of a show dog is probably the most time-consuming chore of an owner, she said in an interview. Poodles are an outstanding example, as their wool not only has to be brushed into a pattern but additional costly trimmings must be scheduled prior to each competition.

In the case of long-haired animals such as the pull, a sheep dog, the coat must be carded before the dog will even rate a second glance from the judges.

Despite such care, show dogs are supposed to appear entirely natural and, even chalk, the life-saver of owners whose white dogs have rolled in mud just before a show, is frowned on.

"Because they cannot run free or even wear a collar in case it harms their coat, show dogs lead isolated and somewhat unnatural lives.

But Mrs. McCoy is convinced they don't mind.

"Every dog thrives on personal attention—that's what they crave most. And no dog gets more than during the period prior to a show when extra-special care is paid to everything, including his diet."

Amateurs who buy a dog thinking it is good enough to show would be well advised to obtain the services of a professional handler, Mrs. McCoy said.

Firstly, unless the new owner joins a kennel club and learns about dogs through experience, he is not likely to have much success in the ring. On the other hand, judges come to know good handlers and will consider any dog more seriously simply because of the reputation of the person showing it.

"After all," Mrs. McCoy said, "the judges have only a split second to look over each animal, and everything that will attract their attention helps."

Secondly, there may be an advantage in having the dog shown by a relative stranger. Dogs are often nonplussed by unfamiliar voice commands, she said, and are more likely to follow them.

This also applies in obedience classes, where a dog may "turn off" its owner because he is nagging too much or vice versa when the dog becomes playful or obstinate.

One characteristic that all judges look for is alertness and vitality. Here, short haired dogs such as terriers may have the edge over larger dogs because they are pulled up light on a leash and forced to walk smartly around the ring.

If a dog isn't perfectly formed, but its owner still wants to enter it in competition, obedience trials and tracking events should be considered.

In the latter categories, the dog's appearance does not count in ratings, although naturally no one would enter a mangy or unkempt dog. The animals are judged and awarded points solely on their performance of standard commands.

Tracking, where all but the dogs with "pushed-in" muzzles can participate, is increasing in popularity throughout North America.

A sig-zag track is laid out approximately one hour before the competition begins.

Wine-braised Beef for Male Fans

By MARY MOORE

The male cooks in this audience cracked the whip and sent me flying to a winery.

The complaint was that I did not have enough recipes using wine in cookery.

To do the job right I started at the beginning and had a personally conducted tour of the oldest winery in Canada, founded 96 years ago.

I stood at the base of one of the original oak casks the size of an average room, still in use, and was as proud as my guide of its mellow beauty.

The delicate balance between excellent wines and those that are not superior is maintained by scrupulous cleanliness. The cement floors are washed every day. Did you know that the walls of wineries are painted silver? This is to quickly reveal any spill or splash so that it may be washed off immediately to eliminate any random bacteria in the air.

I learned more about Canadian wines in 2 hrs. than I had absorbed in a lifetime.

On my return to home base I had to make a decision: What would I make with wine and what wine would I get to make it with?

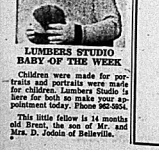
What do men like? They like beef. Beef meant red or rose wine. After four critically tasted reds I have what I am calling wine-braised beef for our male fans. You girls will love it too.

(Serves 5)

2 lbs. stewing beef cut into 1" pieces
2-3 cup medium dry Still Rose wine
2 3 cup water
2 tbsps. butter or margarine
1 cup chopped onions or ½ cup dry bottled onion flakes
½ tsp. pepper
2 tsps. salt
2 tbsps. flour
1 1-3 cups hot water

Marinate the beef in the wine and 2-3 cup water 24 hrs. if possible, in cool place. If you do not have time 15 - 20 min. soaking produces good results too.

In large frying pan melt butter or margarine and to it add squeezed - out meat. Reserve wine and water mixture. Add onions to pan and sear over medium-high heat until golden. Do not burn onions. Stir in pepper, salt and flour and then add 1 1-3 cups hot water and reserved diluted wine, mixing well. Turn into baking dish or casserole, cover tightly (if necessary with foil) and bake at 300 deg. Fahr. 2 hrs.



This results in tender beef rich with full-bodied flavor and when served with fluffy mashed potatoes or rice or noodles is a man's idea of a perfect meal.

NOTE: Most of our readers know that all alcoholic content is evaporated off in cooking. What remains in the meat is the rich wine flavor.

Home And School News

BAYVIEW — HARRY J. CLARKE

The main feature of the Bayview and Harry J. Clarke Home and School Association meeting held Tuesday evening was a panel discussion dealing with the perceptually handicapped and slow learner.

Members of the panel M. Godin of the psychological services, Jack Dixon of guidance, Mrs. D. Blakely, program consultant, Mrs. Alexander and Mrs. S. Carr, special education teachers, discussed the problems these children encounter, such as visual and audio handicaps.

It was obvious from the presentation that great progress was being made in all aspects served, but that much more could be done if it were not for the financial situation.

During a coffee break parents were able to view different methods of teaching for grades kindergarten to Grade 8. A number of items dealing with this phase were on display.

In conclusion a number of questions were directed to the panelists after which a spirited discussion took place.

During the business plans were made to send delegates to the annual convention of the Ontario Federation of Home and School in Toronto, May 7, 8 and 9.

New Officers Elected at Synodical of WMS

Toronto-Kingston Synodical of the Women's Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church Canada (W.D.) was held in St. Columba Presbyterian Church April 20-22.

Tuesday evening the officers and delegates gathered for a brief time of fellowship, registration, committee meetings, and refreshments.

Wednesday morning annual reports were reviewed by the regional secretary Miss Lois Powrie, and spoken to, by the respective secretaries. Comments gave helpful suggestions how some improvements could be made on future annual reports.

The treasurer dealt in detail with the total givings for the year, and was pleased to report a considerable increase for 1970.

The literature secretary presented a brief but interesting resume of the various new editions of helpful books for devotions, women's meetings, missionary stories and children's books. These and many others were on display at the literature table.

Luncheon and the afternoon session was in St. Andrew's Church Hall. Work shops highlighted the afternoon session. These were moderated by members of the synodical executive and administrative council of the Presbyterian church — Mrs. J. M. Burnett, Mrs. Harold Keefer, Miss Gladis Kelly, Mrs. K. D. Taylor and Miss E. Matthews. Items were discussed of vital interest and concern to the WMS of the Church, regarding overseas and national work to a board of world mission. Some positive steps were sought that this society may take at all levels to present the total mission of the church at the same time enlisting the support of others.

A panel question and answer period, by the previously named leaders showed that more communication was necessary at all levels of the society. Team work in all areas of the church is needed. Careful reading and study of Glad Tidings and the Presbyterian Record provide information re the work of the church. Careful reading and study of articles in church magazines will provide information and progress re the vital issues of total mission of the church.

Mrs. G. Williamson president of Kingston Presbyterial presided for the banquet in St. Columba Church Hall Wednesday evening. Greetings were extended by Rev. Ian Murphy, Rev. A. Calder, Moderator of synod, Mrs. J. M. Burnett president of council. Following dinner Miss G. Kelly "transmitted" her audience to the Holy Land and through an illustrated talk made many Biblical scenes become almost a reality.

Mrs. R. Hough sang a selection.

Mrs. J. M. Burnett's morning devotions opened each day with a message of deep inspiration. Mrs. John McFarlane president of Synodical, presided at all business sessions.

At the conclusion of Thursday's session Rev. D. Murphy conducted a most impressive communion service.

Officers for 1971-72 were installed by Miss Kelly as follows:

Honorary president Mrs. N. W. G. Baker of Toronto and Mrs. Harold Tate, Millbrook RR1; president, Mrs. John McFarlane, Toronto; 1st vice, Mrs. John Shepherd, Galt; 2nd vice and corresponding secretary, Mrs. Vernon Weir, Belleville; recording secretary, Mrs. J. Dustin — Wilson

On Saturday April 17, at 12.30 noon, Linda Dianne Wilson daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Wilson, RR 5 Stirling was united in marriage to Kevin Joseph Dustin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Al E. Dustin of Belleville. Rev. A. Evans officiated at the ceremony in Emmanuel Baptist Church. Wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Arnold Reilly.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a full length empire styled polyester crepe wedding gown with the bodice featuring a square neckline in front and scooped at back and long lily point sleeves. A self covered bow accented the waistline and the back of the gown was further accented with a flowing train of Chantilly lace. Her bridal veil nylon illusion veil was caught to a cluster of Chantilly lace edged with seed pearls and centred with aurora borealis sequins.

Miss Caroline Wilson as maid of honor wore a peasant styled gown in yellow chiffon over taffeta with white organza bodices and sleeves tightly cuffed at the wrists. A roll collar and ruffles of white organza down the front to waist of dress lent further highlights. She carried a bouquet of mauve mums and sweetheart roses.

The bridesmaids Miss Mary Tummon, Miss Marilyn Kennedy and Miss Janet Wilson were similarly attired but in contrasting lilac shade and carried bouquets of yellow mums.

David Raycroft attended the bridegroom, while the ushers were Barry McGarney and Bruce Gibbons.

A reception was held in the Foxboro church parlors where the bride's mother greeted the guests wearing a pink crimplene sheath and coat ensemble with green and beige accessories. She was assisted by the bridegroom's mother who wore a pink flowered dress with pink accessories and a corsage of deep pink sweetheart roses.

On return Mr. and Mrs. Dustin will reside in Belleville.

One Must Believe in Oneself to Be A Success

By DORIS CLARK

We need a sense of self-worth, if we are to accomplish anything notable in this world.

If we don't have it, whatever we attempt is likely to be steered in the direction of failure before it gets off the ground. We doubt the usefulness of anything we think up.

If we believe in ourselves our ideas have a chance. Even when it looks as if we aren't getting anywhere, we will hold on if something in the back of our minds tells us that what we do is worth something; that the creative we have thought up will win through.

How do we get this self-worth? The best way I know is to be born into a family where Mother and Father love you and each other; where what you do is just tops with them. And where they have the good grace to say so, often.

Without this, the battle is harder. Yet even then, we can find a sense of self-worth by gradually building on small successes, and by unlearning habits with life's overall purpose.

As one man put it, "I must have been got on the wrong side of the bed this morning." Dr. Norman Vincent Peale has been getting letters for some special purpose. I'm going to keep on trying, and one of these days I will find out what it is!"

Dear Doris: The initial phase of the plan for a Drop-in centre in Ridgeway, Ontario is rapidly nearing completion. As soon as the building is approved, the volunteer clean-up group will start to work. They will tear down and build up; scour and paint, hammer and saw. They will change the drab and empty building into a sanctuary for kids with problems.

The kids will find something more important than the relaxing atmosphere and recreational facilities. They will find young people who will volunteer their time and energy to helping the kids, listening, taking an interest in them.

In a recent column, you spoke of an organization call Alcohol and Drug Concerns, Inc. If the volunteers are to understand clearly the problems of teenage abusers and be more able to help them, I think more knowledge concerning alcohol and drugs is needed.

Please tell me how to contact this organization. — Pennie

Dear Pennie: More power to the Ridgeway project, and its Kiwanis sponsors! Drop-in centres are helping tremendously with lonely or lost youth. The address of Alcohol and Drug Concerns Inc., is 15 Gervais Drive, Suite 601, Don Mills, Ontario.

They will be glad to send you the periodical "Concerns" and to counsel you by letter about any questions your volunteers may have.

Dear Doris: Do you have any information on what styles of clothes are best to wear on a five-foot-seven, 105 pounds, flat figure? — Flat

Dear Flat: Don't forget that it's the tall, willowy girls who look great in pant suits, or the midi-skirt. You can wear things that make shorter girls look top heavy, too — like heavy collars, ruffled blouses, can take high waistlines, and chunky jewellery.

But judging from your height and weight, you could stand to gain several pounds. I'm sending you my "Chart For Curves".

When writing in, allow Doris four weeks for private reply, which will be sent if a six-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed.

Two Letters Debate Advice on Pantsuits

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I know you read a lot but you can't possibly see everything. I am enclosing two letters to the editor of the Norfolk, Virginian - Pilot.

Dear V. P. Editor: I could hardly believe the Ann Landers advice on pantsuits. She said, "Since your husband has stated such strong opposition against them, that should settle it for you, Petunia." Such advice would have been common during the crusades, the era of the chastity belt, or before 1920, when male heads of households cast ballots for themselves and their spouses. It depresses me as a journalist to think that women staff members must print such trash as Miss Landers' opinions on pantsuits.

ANN LANDERS

If females were considered equals there would be none of this nonsense about who can wear pantsuits. They are not only comfortable and practical, with styles and fabrics for all, but they have been popularized as a reaction to the ugly and cumbersome midi which a woman-hating designers tried to cram down our collective throats. What does Petunia's husband wear? Kilts? — MRS. MARGARET DeBOLT (National Organization for Women, Va. Beach.)

A Norfolk woman responded in the same column:

Dear V. P. Editor: I enjoy dressing to please my husband. I appreciate my husband earning the living. I have a ball spending his money. I love being a mother. I relish time to read, to go to club meetings, to work in politics, and occasionally I do some private nursing. I don't want to go to work every day. I don't want to go to war. My husband says he likes women's pantsuits if they are styled properly. If he did not like them I would not wear them. What a small price to pay for the pleasure of his company and his support. — MARY BETH RAISCH (Norfolk.)

So there you have both sides, Ann Landers. Please say something about these two colliding positions. — MUDDLED IN THE MIDDLE.

* * *

DEAR MUD: I have said something, but I'll say it again. The basis for a successful marriage is friendship. Too often when a man and woman marry they are lovers — but not friends. Friendship means consideration for the other person's feelings, his point of view and his integrity. It means trying to please — putting his wishes first. The woman who does this is going to find a more responsible, generous, easier-to-get-along-with guy. She will also find that he will insist on putting her wishes first. This is one piece of advice I can give with complete assurance that it works because it is born of personal experience.

A wife who wears pantsuits despite her husband's intensive dislike for them is making a statement. The statement goes like this: "I don't care what you like. Your approval doesn't mean anything to me." Such a woman should not be surprised when she learns her man is finding approval somewhere else.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please get it through to your readers — somehow — that they don't need to be nuts to get help from a psychiatrist. Just four visits changed my life. I want to shout it from the housetops.

I now know that when a person cannot get along with someone close to him — a mother, father, sister, brother, child, wife or husband, it might be that the difficult relative is really the nutty one and what is needed is to insulate one's self against the problem and learn how to cope with the situation.

My anxiety and confusion were caused by a family situation that was driving me crazy.

After talking it over with a person trained in behavioral problems, I realized that the problem that was ruining my life was not my fault. I had to learn to think objectively and face the realities of the situation. Now I know what you mean when you say — "Get professional help." I'm ashamed it took me so long to do it. — ANONYMOUS IN OREGON

DEAR AN: Thanks for a good letter. And now, to those of you out there who accuse me of copping out when I say, "Get professional help" — how d'ya like those apples?

Manitoba Rates $35 to $142

Car Insurance Plan Unveiled

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's NDP government Monday released details of the compulsory, state-run automobile insurance plan under which the province's motorists will be covered effective Nov. 1.

As indicated earlier, the Manitoba Public Insurance Corp. will provide a basic package—to be known as Autopac—which will have to be purchased for all vehicles. Additional premiums will be levied on purchase of all driving licences, whether or not the purchaser owns a car.

For pleasure-plus-business, Greater Winnipeg rates not including driver premiums run from $65 for pre-1960 models to $122 for new luxury cars; rural Manitoba from $35 to $85 and the north from $40 to $142.

Driver premiums are $7 for males and $3 for females aged 25 or over, and $22 for males and $7 for females in the 16-to-24 group.

In addition, extra driver premiums will be levied on a demerit system based on traffic offences ranging from $50 for six demerit points to $300 for 20 points or more. Highest demerits, 15 points each, are for conviction of criminal negligence or leaving the scene of an accident.

Additional unspecified surcharges may be made on review of the records of accident-prone drivers.

The basic plan, tabled in the legislature by Municipal Affairs Minister Howard Pawley, is for $50,000 third-party liability including passenger hazard; $200 deductible all-perils coverage, payable on a no-fault basis; death benefits to a maximum of $10,000, dismemberment or impairment benefits up to $6,000 and medical benefits to $2,000, all on the no-fault principle; and loss-of-income payment of up to $70 a week.

Additional coverage will be available either from the government plan or through private companies.

For purposes of rates, private passenger cars are divided into nine categories related to age and class of vehicle. The bottom category is for 1959 cars or older, known as group zero.

They also will be rated as "pleasure" or "pleasure plus to-and-from work" with an additional charge of about $20 on the second group. This group also will include cars formerly classed as business vehicles, which account for only about five per cent of registrations.

Geographical factors also apply. Rural Manitoba drivers get the cheapest rates with Greater Winnipeg in the middle and northern Manitoba, north of the 53rd parallel, at the top.

Boeing Details Not Told

TORONTO (CP) — A breakdown in communications resulted in two near-collisions eight months ago in the air corridors controlled from Toronto International Airport, a spokesman for the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association said Monday.

William Hill said Toronto air controllers weren't told about a change on United States aircraft in the coded electric signal given off by a device called a transponder.

"All of a sudden, we weren't making out half their planes on our screens," said Mr. Hill, who said the Toronto controllers called Cleveland International Airport themselves to find out about the changes.

A report from the association's safety committee said controllers also had not been told officially of the operating characteristics of the Boeing 747 before its initial flight Sunday.

Tweed District Personals

TWEED — Members of the Elzevir Township Council presented William Credicott of Actinolite with a plaque recently at an evening meeting of council, in appreciation of his 20 - year service to the municipality as assessor, clerk and councillor. The presentation was made by Mr. Kenneth Smith, reeve of Elzevir Township and warden of Hastings County Council. Mr. Smith spoke highly of Mr. Credicott's work on behalf of the municipality during the past 20 years.

A bridal shower was held recently at the home of Mrs. Hilliard Brouse's, in Plevna, in honor of Miss Linda Jackson of Toronto. A large crowd attended and a good time enjoyed by all.

Murder Involved In Deaths

THUNDER BAY (CP) — The Thunder Bay police department is investigating a "multiple murder" in connection with a house fire last Thursday which killed four members of a family.

Police Chief Omer Harty said in an interview Monday: "We are involved in a case of multiple murder as a result of this fire."

He said he could give no details of an investigation by police and the Ontario fire marshal's office which led to suspicions of foul play.

"We know what is involved, but we are not in a position to say. But this is definitely a case of murder."

Killed in the fire were Irene Boyce, 39; her son Patrick, 14, and Kelly, 14; and a 16-year-old daughter, Laura.

In hospital are the father, Edward, 40; Patrick's twin brother, Marshall; a daughter, Leslie Shannon, 17, and a son, Norman, 16. The two younger survivors are reported in serious condition.

War Crimes Said Committed

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unofficial U.S. congressional war crimes inquiry summoned new witnesses today after hearing former regular army officers say they saw Americans torture prisoners, shell unarmed villages and terrorize civilians in Vietnam.

The inquiry, headed by Representative Ronald V. Dellums (Dem.-Calif.), listed as witnesses today five former military intelligence agents and Lt.-Col. Anthony B. Herbert, a career officer.

However, Herbert, who lodged charges against superiors for alleged coverup of civilian slayings and torture in 1969, said Monday night the army won't let him testify.

A Pentagon spokesman declined comment.

The hearings Monday attracted a dozen anti-war congressmen, but had to operate under a broadcast news blackout imposed by Speaker Carl Albert of the House of Representatives. House committees may open meetings to radio and television coverage by a majority vote of their members, but Albert ruled the unofficial group could not.

In Monday's testimony, former Capt. Robert B. Johnson said he saw shelling of unarmed villages, personally called in air strikes on some of them and participated in 13 search-and-destroy missions to burn South Vietnamese homes and food supplies.

"It became clear to me that we were waging a war not against a specific ideology but against the Vietnamese people," he said.

Former Capt. Ron Bartek, 26, said an American intelligence team tortured an old Vietnamese man by attaching electrical wires to his groin and applying current from a telephone generator. He said this occured near the commander's headquarters in the centre of an American base.

Former Capt. Fred Laughlin, 27, said he was taught to sever the ears of dead Communist command soldiers to verify "body count." His platoon mortally wounded an old man in an uncontrolled burst of fire on an unresisting village, he said.

McKeough Says Ottawa Aids Poor Regions at Ontario's Expense

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough accused the federal government Monday of attempting to reduce regional disparities by weakening Ontario's economic strength and standard of living.

Mr. McKeough said in his budget speech, tabled in the Ontario legislature, that the provincial government must "reconsider, in a fundamental way, Ontario's basic role in Canadian federalism."

In a hard-hitting attack on federal fiscal policies, the 38-year-old provincial treasurer said Ontario's regional needs "have obviously been neglected," by the Liberal administration in Ottawa.

"Federal economic and fiscal policies have been aimed deliberately at the curtailment of economic growth in this province.

"The severe deflationary policies of the federal government have driven the Ontario economy far below its potential and created unemployment levels that are the highest in a decade."

Mr. McKeough said Premier William Davis's Conservative administration is "convinced that national policies detrimental to Ontario are also detrimental to the national interest."

The Trudeau government "is firmly bent", on a course of greater centralization and concentration of fiscal power in its own hands, while Ontario "has been singled out for a reduced role in the building of our national commitments to these established programs."

Coupled with this is an escalating federal invasion of provincial jurisdiction in fields such as consumer protection and securities control, "notwithstanding the practical difficulties this will create and the significant progress already made in inter-provincial uniformity and co-ordination."

Citing national tax reform as "the single most important issue facing Canadian federalism today," Mr. McKeough said the key objectives should be equity and economic growth.

He outlined Ontario's tax reform proposals—a selective approach to low income tax relief, an incentive system for small businesses and abandonment of proposed integration of personal and corporate taxes.

The federal government, said Mr. McKeough, has modified "its harsh initial proposals" in Finance Minister Benson's white paper on taxation because of pressure from the provinces.

But Mr. McKeough urged Ottawa to go still further in its new tax legislation, expected next month.

"The new federal legislation should incorporate tax credits and selective low income tax relief measures instead of universal tax exemptions, the integration proposals should be abandoned entirely; the federal surtaxes should be removed and the remaining reforms should be implemented on a priority basis and in manageable stages."

The key issue in tax reform involves restructuring of federal-provincial fiscal arrangements—not a "fiscal mismatch" that leaves Ottawa with a preponderance of tax resources "while the provinces and their municipal partners face the largest and fastest growing expenditure commitments."

"Under the present division of taxing powers the federal government commands vastly larger revenue resources than it needs to finance its expenditure programs," said Mr. McKeough. "The provincial-municipal sector by contrast is chronically underfinanced."

Mr. McKeough said the only sensible solution is to transfer tax resources to the provincial-municipal level.

"This is what is required to contain total tax levels in Canada, to ease inter-governmental tensions and to reverse the trend towards central domination of the Canadian federation."

The provincial treasurer said the "financial impasse" between Ottawa and the provinces lies at the heart of problems existing in federal-provincial constitutional discussions.

"Until there is substantial progress in tax sharing and unless the provinces achieve better financial arrangements with the federal government, I can see major obstacles in the way of any substantial advance in other aspects of the constitutional review."

His First Budget

It's Election Budget
Few Irritated

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Treasurer Darcy McKeough presented a budget Monday that left Premier William Davis with room to manoeuvre for the calling of an election either in the spring or fall.

It was what might best be called a happy budget, ruffling few feathers, except for beer drinkers in Southern Ontario who may experience some minor pains in having to pay more for a bottle of beer —less than a penny more.

Selected tax credits to corporations and deficit financing were the tools Mr. McKeough, 38, used to spur the economy, which was the general theme of his first budget since taking over as minister March 1.

One major proposal that might be viewed as indicating a June election was the provision for including nursing homes and home nursing care under the medical care insurance plan.

But the plan, to cost the province $50 million, exclusive of federal contributions, doesn't take effect for another year, which means Mr. Davis might use it as an election ploy for a fall vote. He does not have to go to the people until 1972.

Two other major programs —aid to municipal transit systems and changes in allocation of unconditional grants to municipalities—were announced only in passing. Mr. McKeough said later these programs would be explained in the legislature in detail by the ministers responsible at some future date.

The budget also played a cautious tune with two of the most contentious political issues of the day—regional government and aid to separate schools. A total of $5 million was granted to regional governments, the bulk of it for establishing police forces in the regions, but no new funds.

There was no money in the budget to pay for more aid to separate schools.

Even the five-per cent ceilings for wage increases in the civil service announced in the budget were played down. Mr. McKeough told reporters he was certain the civil service would not object to the ceilings, while warning that the province would not be bound to accept above-ceiling increases granted by arbitration boards.

Mr. McKeough set the tone of the budget when he warned that its success or failure in stimulating the economy would depend on federal tax reform proposals due to be made public by Ottawa next month.

This gives the province an important option because it can always blame Ottawa for any economic slowdown which would adversely affect Ontario's plans.

Mr. McKeough probably will make political gains for the party with his remark that the province went ahead with its own plan for nursing homes and home nursing care benefits without waiting for Ottawa which has not yet determined if there will be federal participation in this type of medical care.

Mr. McKeough is aiming for full employment—which he determines would be three per cent or less of the total labor force—within two years. The rate this year is expected to be about four per cent.

To achieve this, he said it will be necessary for the economy to continue to grow and for Ontario to come through with more tax room for the provinces.

If one of this works, he hasn't counted out the possibility that Ontario will have to impose its own personal income tax.

Ontario to Resist Stoutly Further Shared Cost Plans

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough said Monday the Ontario government will "resist vigorously" any expansion of federal provincial shared-cost programs by Ottawa.

Mr. McKeough said Ontario wants the option of taking cash equivalents from the federal government and warned that any move by Ottawa to unwind opting-out rights to Quebec must also be granted to Ontario and the eight other provinces.

"The existence of shared-cost programs demonstrates the essential contradiction in our system," Mr. McKeough said in his budget speech. "The federal government has the money while the provinces have the responsibilities."

The treasurer noted that Ottawa has come up with a number of new cost-sharing formulas for such fields as health insurance and post-secondary education.

"The one obvious feature is that they reduce the future federal financial commitment in these established shared-cost programs.

"If these formulas were implemented, the provinces would find themselves in an even worse financial predicament while the federal government would acquire an added capacity to invest new programs and to further encroach on other governments' responsibilities."

Accordingly, "I wish to state now our clear intention to assume complete responsibility" for existing shared-cost programs "in exchange for fiscal equivalence."

OHSIP Will Cover Nursing Home Care

TORONTO (CP) — Nursing homes and home-care services will come under Ontario's medical care insurance program starting April 1, 1972, it was announced Monday in the Ontario budget.

The new benefits, long sought by Ontario residents who now are paying between $14 to $18 a day for the service, will cost the province more than $50 million.

To help pay for additional charges, the budget statement says there will be a $3.50 daily fee charged to those "who can afford to pay." There are 19,000 nursing beds available in the province.

Treasurer Darcy McKeough, who announced the new program in the budget, estimated the net cost of the new service will be $100 million by 1975. For fiscal 1971-72, the total gross projected cost of medical care will be $549 million, of which the province will pay $300 million, and the federal government the remainder.

There was no mention in the budget of any plan to decrease or increase premiums for medical care, already the highest in Canada.

Monthly premiums under the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan are $14.75 for a family, $11.80 a couple and $5.90 single. Under the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, fees are $10 a family and $5.50 a single.

In his statement, Mr. McKeough said the additional nursing benefits could not be implemented immediately because it takes about nine months "to bring new facilities on stream."

He said the new program should relieve individual families of a heavy financial burden and ease demands for active-treatment hospital beds. As Ontario does not participate in this type of additional benefit under the federal - provincial agreements, entire cost of the new program will have to be borne by Ontario.

Two Incentives Offered To Stimulate Business

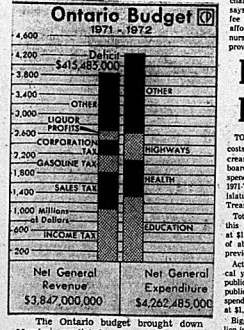
TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough included two tax incentives for business in his 1971-72 budget Monday to stimulate a sluggish economy.

He told the Ontario legislature that the government tax policy was "the key initiative in this budget to stimulate a revival of economic growth and job opportunities in Ontario."

One aid to corporations will be a five-per-cent tax credit for investment in machinery and equipment ordered after 12PM this evening if ordered and purchased and put into use between today and March 31, 1972.

The other incentive permits companies to deduct interest cost in money borrowed to acquire shares in other corporations.

Mr. McKeough said he anticipated a $125 million revenue loss for the tax credit plan and an unspecified loss was expected in the interest deductions.



Other forms of relief included an increase in exemptions in succession duties, reduction of beer prices for Northern Ontario residents and elimination of $3 fishing licence fees for residents.

The treasurer said he would have liked to reduce personal income taxes "but for several reasons this option is not realistically open to us."

He said the government can afford only a temporary tax cut where a permanent reduction is needed, and under terms of the federal-provincial tax collection agreement, Ontario can't change its personal income tax rates until Jan. 1, 1972.

Mr. McKeough said the five-per-cent tax incentive "will assist in the modernization of capital stock to increase the long-run productivity of Ontario industry."

The government's plan to allow tax deductions for money invested in other corporations was aimed at offsetting the tax advantage enjoyed by foreign firms which are bidding to take over Canadian companies.

The Ontario budget brought down Monday, predicted a record deficit of $415,485,000 for the 1971 - 72 fiscal year.

Higher Education Costs Largest Spending Boost

TORONTO (CP) — Education costs, mainly in the form of increased aid to local school boards, were the largest single spending increase in Ontario's 1971-72 budget tabled in the legislature Monday by Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough.

Total education spending for this fiscal year was estimated at $1.277 million or an increase of about $230 million over the previous fiscal year.

Actual spending in the last fiscal year won't be known until publication of the government's public accounts, but education spending in 1970 was estimated at $1.125 million.

Biggest part of the $230 million increase is an additional $72 million to raise the province's share of local school board financing to 55 per cent this year from 51 per cent in 1970-71.

The percentage increase is part of the government's continuing programs to restore 60 per cent of school costs by 1972-73.

Last year it cost the government $86.6 million to increase its percentage of school costs to 51 from 46 per cent. This year's increase of $72 million reflected Mr. McKeough's intention to restrain costs.

In addition, many school boards have been struggling to meet government spending ceilings this year.

A shift in education spending came in Mr. McKeough's announcement that the provincial government will pay grants of $25 a pupil to municipalities where colleges of applied arts and technology are located.

Previously, the colleges came under the department of education but this year they will be under the wing of the department of university affairs.

Education estimates constituted 42 per cent of the budget last year and will be about 42 per cent this year.

What Budget Means To Man-in-Street

Beer-drinkers

It will cost more in the south and less in the north. Effective May 1, prices go up 15 cents a case of 24 bottles in southern Ontario and down 11 cents in the north. That will equalize price a case across the province at $4.06, excluding the 50-cent bottle deposit.

Fishermen

The $3 licence fee for residents is no longer required, retroactive to Jan. 1.

Widows and Widowers

Succession duties on estates are changed. Exemption for widows and widowers is increased to $250,000 from $125,000 and the 15-per-cent surtax for close relatives is eliminated.

Taxpayers

There are no new taxes.

Relief from some of the burden of municipal taxes will filter back through an increase to $5 per cent in provincial tax support to school boards, hikes in grants to colleges of applied arts and technology and grants in lieu of taxes to municipalities in respect of parklands.

Nursing patients

Home and nursing home services are to be included in the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan without a fee of $3.50 a day for "those who can afford to pay," effective April 1, 1972.

Students

A total of 14,000 summer jobs will be provided in the Ontario government this summer at a cost of $18 million.

More Aid Planned To Municipalities

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario plans to spend $109 million to assist municipalities during this year, Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough said in his budget Monday.

He told the Ontario legislature the government plans to spend $78 million in new tax reforms plus an additional $31 million for existing programs.

Most of the new money—$72 million—will go to increase support to school boards. New assistance to regional governments will total $4.8 million; $1.1 million will be in the form of grants in lieu of taxes on colleges of applied arts and technology and provincial parklands, and $400,000 will go to mining municipalities as a result of a revised tax formula.

He said the municipal tax reforms have lowered the increase in municipal tax rates to school boards since 1968 compared with an average increase of 5.4 per cent from 1960 to 1967.

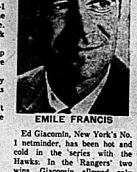
Francis Drops Hint Changes Could Be Made

CHICAGO (CP) — Emile Francis, general manager-coach of New York Rangers, says his club's strategy for its encounter tonight with Chicago Black Hawks is no big secret.

"It's simple," Francis said Monday. "We have to score more goals than Chicago does".



Tonight's contest is the fifth in the best-of-seven semi-final series between the two National Hockey League clubs. The Hawks throttled the Rangers 7-1 at New York Sunday to even the series at two games apiece. They meet again at New York Thursday.

Francis said no lineup changes for tonight's game have been made—yet.

Then, as if to hint there may be some changes, Francis added:

"I'm not saying there won't be changes. I'm saying we won't make that decision until tomorrow (Tuesday)".

Francis also said that New York's starting goaltender wouldn't be named until the club meeting.

EMILE FRANCIS

Ed Giacomin, New York's No. 1 netminder, has been hot and cold in the series with the Hawks. In one of Rangers' wins, Giacomin allowed only two goals. But Chicago got three past him in their first win and four goals against him before he was yanked at the end of two periods Sunday.

Francis' alternative could be to start Gilles Villemure in goal tonight. Giacomin and Villemure combined through the regular season to give New York its first Vezina Trophy since 1940.

The Black Hawks, on the other hand, have been clairvoyant about the absence of left wing Gerry Pinder who failed to show at Monday's practice.

Pinder, a 13 goal scorer in his sophomore season with the Hawks, was apparently irked at not being used in Sunday's win.

His only appearance in the series was a brief turn on the ice in the third period during the second game of the series, won by the Hawks 3-0.

Pinder appeared to be the only unhappy Hawk.

"Let them (New York) play with their backs to the wall for a while", said Hawk forward Jim Pappin. "They had us going a little bit but now it's their turn. See how they like it."

Bobby Hull, Chicago's high-scoring left winger, said he isn't bothered by the extra attention he's drawn from New York checkers, particularly Ranger captain Bob Nevin.

Hull, who notched 44 goals and assisted on 52 others during the regular season, picked up his first point of this series Sunday, earning assists on three goals.

"That's fine with me," Hull said. "Do you really think I care whether I get a goal or somebody else does?

"Just as long we get it," he added. "that's all that matters."

Galt Rallies Again

GALT (CP) — Galt Hornets took a 5-3 victory Monday night to gain a 3-1 lead in the Eastern Canada Allan Cup hockey final over Grand Falls Calatracts.

Fourth game of the best-of-five series will be played tonight with the finish, if necessary, Thursday night. The entire series is being played here.

Galt trailed by a 3-1 count midway through the first period but rallied for four unanswered goals in the final 50 minutes before a near-capacity crowd of 3,202.

The Hornets, Ontario Hockey Association Senior A champions, tied the score at 3-3 before the first period ended and then scored single goals in each of the second and third periods.

Twenty-one-year-old centre Dave Cressman scored once and assisted on two other goals to lead the Hornets. It was his goal which launched the comeback after Galt fell behind by two goals.

Captain Vance Millar, Cec Hoekstra, Ron Smith and defenceman Mike Doersam counted the other Hornet goals against Jean Marc Morissette.

Jim Dawe, Bern Fitzpatrick and Jack Faulkner scored for Grand Falls, the Maritime Senior champions. All their goals came in less than four minutes early in the opening period.

Morissette played his third strong game in a row in goal for Calaracts as Hornets held a commanding advantage in shots on goal, 38-22.

After Miller gave Galt a 1-0 lead at 5:19, Grand Falls bounced back with three goals in three minutes and 31 seconds.

Dawe started it at 8:11 on a power play, wheeling in alone on a perfect setup from Jim Beckman.

Fitzpatrick scored after a corner faceoff 64 seconds later and then Jack Faulkner capitalized on a two-on-one break at 11:42, moving in alone with Dawe's setup pass.

Hornets rebounded on goals by Cressman and Doersam to tie it. Cressman nabbed John Beechey's rebound at 12:56 and Doersam banged home a loose puck after making a rink-length dash at 13:57.

Galt had a 13-9 shooting edge in the first period and a 13-6 advantage in the second but couldn't make it pay off until near the 7-minute mark.

Good goaltending by both Hurley and Morissette kept the rest of the period scoreless.

Beliveau Content To Play

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Beliveau says this is one of the most gratifying seasons—not because he is playing well, but because he is playing.

"When you reach a certain age, you never know when your legs will give way," the 39-year-old captain of the Canadiens said Monday night on the eve of the pivotal fifth game in the Stanley Cup semi-final series between the Canadiens and Minnesota North Stars.

"I am happy to have gone through the season. I still feel good. A little tired maybe, but still good."

Beliveau, like many of his team-mates, is impressed by the excellent showing of the North Stars in the series so far. Minnesota tied the best-of-seven affair Sunday night at 2-2 with a 5-2 victory in Minnesota.

"Yes, you've got to give them credit," said Beliveau. "But we knew from the beginning that we would not walk through."

"And with good reason. First, judging from the way they beat St. Louis, they must be good. Not only that, they've got some good scorers in (Dennis) Hull, (Jean-Paul) Parise and (Bill) Goldsworthy.

"Look at Murray Oliver. He's playing the best hockey he's ever played in his life. Also, Bobby Rousseau is playing well."

He also said the North Stars are working together as a team.

"You will notice they always have one or two men covering up. They're skating and forechecking well."

Beliveau feels the Canadiens played well in their two games at Minnesota and would have won Sunday if they capitalized on breaks.

"It could have gone either way. One thing: We are in better shape today than when we left for Minnesota.

"By winning one game there, now it's a best-of-three and we have two games at home."

Beliveau also feels that the West Division of the National Hockey League will be as strong as the East Division "pretty soon.

"The universal draft should even things up soon. Not only that, some of the players in our division will retire."

The Canadiens arrived home late Monday morning.

Coach Al MacNeil was mum on any planned lineup changes and as he has done throughout the playoffs, declined to name his starting goaltender.

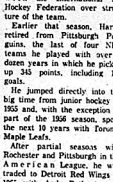
Ken Dryden, former all-American at Cornell University, has played all 11 play-off games for Montreal.

Meanwhile, the North Stars arrived here late Monday afternoon without two injured veterans—defenceman Doug Mohns and goaltender Lorne (Gump) Worsley.

Mohns has missed the entire series with a knee injury and Jackie Gordon, the rookie North Stars coach thought it would be better to leave Mohns at home.

Worsley suffered a groin injury in the pre-game warmup Saturday and his place was taken by Cesare Maniago. Maniago also played Sunday and will be in goal tonight with rookie Gilles Gilbert acting as h's backup.

Billy Harris Could Coach Swedes



TORONTO (CP) — Billy Harris, smooth-skating playmaker of 12 National Hockey League seasons who never achieved the star status predicted for him, leaves tonight for Stockholm, Sweden.

The 32-year-old Toronto native is a candidate for coach of Sweden's national team, a vacancy created when former coach Arne Stromberg and his entire team directors quit after the recent world championships."

Harris said in a telephone interview Monday night he will spend several days in the Swedish capital "listening to their proposals."

"We haven't even discussed anything," said Harris.

Harris said he understood applications from Russian and Czechoslovakia are also being considered "so this is an interview in which they'll find out about me as well as I'll find out about the situation."

BILLY HARRIS

Harris also he first knew of Sweden's interest in him two weeks ago when a friend of one of the Swedish team's directors, living in Toronto, approached him.

"That's why I think their initial approach originated in Toronto, plus the fact that I played in that tournament in Moscow a year ago December."

"That tournament" was the last European hockey junket the Canadian national team took before it disbanded after a dispute with the International Ice Hockey Federation over structure of the team.

Earlier that season, Harris retired from Pittsburgh Penguins, the last of four NHL teams he played with over a dozen years in which he picked up 345 points, including 126 goals.

He jumped directly into the big time from junior hockey in 1955 and, with the exception of part of the 1956 season, spent the next 10 years with Toronto Maple Leafs.

After partial seasons with Rochester and Pittsburgh in the American League, he was traded to Detroit Red Wings in 1965 with Andy Bathgate and Garry Jarrett for Marcel Pronovost. Larry Jeffrey, Ed Joyal, Lowell MacDonald and Autry Erickson.

In the 1968-69 expansion, California Golden Seals, formerly Oakland, drafted him from Detroit and he was traded to Pittsburgh in November, 1968.

After quitting the Penguins' camp at the beginning of the 1969-70 season, Harris joined the ill-fated Nationals.

Harris, who operates a string of hockey schools with former Leaf team-mate Dave Keon, turned his talents to coaching this year, taking over a dissension-riddled team at Hamilton in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

But under his guidance, the Red Wings responded and carried a strong Ottawa 67s team to seven games before bowing in the quarter-final playoffs.

"I really enjoyed it," said Harris of his coaching experience. It was really gratifying. The kids went as far as they could go."

Smythe Appeals Fine

TORONTO (CP) — Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, confirmed Monday that Stafford Smythe, president of Toronto Maple Leafs, will appeal a $5,000 fine assessed his club following a playoff donnybrook at New York April 8. But there was some question about whether the Rangers will appeal a similar club fine handed down by the NHL president despite New York president William Jennings original intent to do so. Campbell said in a telephone interview from Chicago, where he will view tonight's fifth game of the Stanley Cup semi-final between New York and Chicago Black Hawks, that "Toronto has appealed; Rangers have not." He said that both clubs had 10 days from April 12th, assessment of the fines to file an appeal. He said the fines will be discussed at the next annual meeting, early in June in Montreal. The NHL president, who has held office for 25 years, has not had a decision reviewed by league governors since he suspended Ted Lindsay of Detroit Red Wings in 1955. The governors supported Campbell's decision to suspend Lindsay for four games after he hit a spectator with his hockey stick.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — It had to come. University of British Columbia earlier this year imported Anatoly Tarasov, coach of Russia's national team, to lecture a coaching clinic. Now Fred Muller, co-owner of St. Catharines' Black Hawks, is going to the United States to search out players for his Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series team, "in five years there'll be a big switch," said Muller. Black Hawks currently lead Toronto Marlboros 2-0 in their best-of-seven series final.

"We'll be getting our players from the U.S. . . . providing the Americans don't put in a rule prohibiting transfer of their players to Canada." Muller first got the idea that there must be hotbeds of hockey talent in the U.S. after watching Bobby Sheehan, a native of Boston who played his early Canadian hockey at Halifax before moving to the Black Hawks. That was two years ago. Sheehan now is with Montreal Canadiens in the National Hockey League. Last year, Muller brought in Bill Ellis from Michigan to play and this year invited four or five youngsters from Brooklyn, N.Y., to the Hawks' camp. They played with St. Catharines' Junior B club and one of them, Max Hansen, scored five goals in a 7-6 win.

HAMILTON (CP) — Hamilton Mountain Bees edged Dixie Beehives 3-2 Monday to even the best-of-seven Ontario Hockey Association Junior B final series at one win each. Third game is scheduled for Dixie Wednesday with the fourth here Friday. John Bailey tied the game for Hamilton, breaking a 2-2 tie with a goal three minutes from the end of the third period.

DETROIT (CP) — Four goals by Doug Ross and three by Bob Dobek were the difference as Detroit Junior Red Wings romped over Charlottetown Islanders Monday night, 8-3, to keep their playoff chances alive in eastern Centennial Cup final play. Charlottetown maintains a 2-2 edge in the best-of-seven series with action shifting to Prince Edward Island Thursday. John Asadoorian and Marty Howe got the other Wings' goals.

St. Louis Serenity Shattered by Bowman?

REGINA (CP) — The Leader-Post says in a copyright story that Scotty Bowman has resigned as general manager of St. Louis Blues of the National Hockey League.

The newspaper said it learned Monday afternoon Bowman resigned in the midst of what appeared to be a power struggle involving his coaching authority.

It was reported that Bowman, who has been with the club since it entered the league in 1967, fell into a dispute with a member of the Solomon family which owns the club.

The newspaper says the result was an ultimatum to Bowman: Do things the Solomon way or not at all.

Coach Al Arbour and chief scout Frank Mario are both proteges of Bowman and could end up on the outside should the upheaval go beyond the position of general manager.

Arbour stepped into the coaching job after retiring as a Blugs player at the end of the 1969-70 season. Mario, a former coach of Regina Pats of the Western Canada Hockey League, became the head talent hunter when Bowman left his team manager-coach.

It's probably too early for an accurate indication of who will succeed Bowman, but defenceman Carl Brewer was mentioned as a possible candidate.

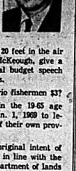
Aussie Netters Absorb Dunking

TOKYO (AP) — The amateur tennis fortunes of Australia took another dip Monday when Japan eliminated the Aussies in the Eastern Zone Section A finals of Davis Cup play.

Toshiro Sakai completed the upset with a dramatic 6-1, 13-11, 8-6 victory over John Cooper in the deciding singles match, giving Japan a 3-2 triumph in the best-of-five match series.

Not only was it Japan's first victory over Australia in 50 years, it also assured the Australians of missing the Challenge Round against defending champion United States for the third consecutive year. Previously, the Aussies had a record of 25 consecutive Challenge Round appearances.

Japan is scheduled to go against India, the Section B champion, in the Eastern Zone finals in Tokyo May 14-16.



NEW DELHI (Reuter) — India today claimed an uncontested victory in its Davis Cup Eastern Zone tennis tie against Pakistan. R. K. Khanna, secretary of the All-India Lawn Tennis Association, said Pakistan persistently refused to play the tie on political grounds. If the default is confirmed, India will meet Japan in the Eastern Zone final.

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Brazil defeated Chile 3-2 in the South American zone finals and qualified for the American round of Davis Cup tennis play.

Thomas Koch assured Brazil of victory Monday when he defeated Orlando Jaime Fillol 6-3, 6-2 and 6-2.

Before you toss your tackle-box 20 feet in the air and have three cheers for Darcy McKeough, give a little thought to Monday's provincial budget speech abolition of resident angling licences.

It is the move really saving Ontario fishermen $37

That's what provincial mules in the 19-65 age bracket have been paying since Jan. 1, 1969 to legally fish in the lakes and streams of their own province.

Now the government says the original intent of the legislation — to bring user fees in line with the costs of services provided by the department of lands and forests — no longer holds water.

Nearly one out of every four males over the age of 18 in the province — some 603,000 of them — purchased one of the new permits during the 1969 breakin months. And a slightly increased sale brought $1.8 million during 1970.

Quinte MPP Dr. Richard Potter, who opposed resident fishing licences from the beginning, says the net revenue has not justified the program.

"The Department of lands and forests said they wanted one and a half million dollars for generally improving the lot of fishermen — by stocking lakes and that sort of thing — which the government instituted this thing," the Minister without Portfolio said today.

What About Pollution?

"Now they've found the results haven't justified the general inconvenience caused by the program. I was talking to the Minister of Revenue a few weeks ago, and I would guess — just as an off-the-head figure — that these licences are only raising a net of $1 or three-quarters of a million dollars a year."

Heavy administrative costs eat up the rest, not to mention the 25 cent per-licence commission collected by 3,500 issuers that has accounted for about $200,000 annually.

I suggest abolition of the resident licence is a governmental retreat in the face of public knowledge that fish from many of Ontario's lakes can not safely be eaten. I mean, is it fair to ask resident anglers to pay $3 for the privilege of a pickerel dinner in the days when the flavor was spiced up with tartar sauce, rather than a mercury content?

Dr. Potter was quick to reject that line of reasoning. "No, pollution's got nothing to do with this. We've got a pollution problem, all right, and we know it. But the money raised from these non-resident licences just hasn't been worth the inconvenience to residents — and we do have to take that into consideration."

There is also sound reason for objecting to the budget speech insinuation that abolishing resident licences represents a saving to provincial taxpayers.

Surely funds for department of lands and forests lake-stocking and improving projects are needed now more than ever. Where are they coming from?

Money Still Needed

I have yet to talk with any fisherman who objected to the imposition of a resident permit — so long as he had the feeling the funds thereby raised would be used to make Ontario a better place to fish or hunt.

Many would probably be willing to even pay an increased resident's fee if they could be assured that concrete action was being taken to alleviate fishing waters polluted by everything from carp to cottage sewage.

Unless there are alternative fund-raising programs to ensure an increasingly conservation-conscious governmental attitude, Ontario outdoorsmen may rue the day Darcy McKeough "saved" them $1,800,000.

A large share of the department of lands and forests program costs will continue to be borne, as it should be, by the sale of non-resident fishing permits. In 1970, this figure was $4,247,000, including the sale of $8.50 season, $4 three-day and $10 organized camp permits for visiting anglers.

In 1969, there were a total of 630,000 non-resident permits sold, some 27,000 more than were purchased by Ontario anglers required to be licensed.

It would be difficult to ask non-residents fishermen to pay a larger portion. Their $8.50 permit for dropping a line for more than a long weekend is only part of their contribution to the provincial tourist trade. Don't forget such hefty expenditures as lodge accommodation, guide fees, boat rentals, and souvenir hunting touring anglers leave in their wake.

So how to raise the money necessary to keep Ontario's fishing bountiful, not to mention edible?

We could never complain about the under-19 or over-65 exemptions. Not even that hard-hearted crew at the Tweed District office would pinch junior and grandad for poaching the odd mudcat.

And charging women to fish? If we have to have them along, why in damnation pay for the privilege?

No, we think Mr. McKeough's budget speech missed the boat.

He could have kept the beer-price status quo, raised the resident fishing fee to $5, and every angler south of Callander would have been ahead of the game right across the board.

'Mr. Bowling' Entries Will Need 20-20 Vision

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Competitors in this year's "Mr. Bowling" tournament are going to require 20/20 vision if they hope to win the event.

For this year only the competition will consist of 20 games instead of the normal ten - game format, "I thought that since this was the 20th year it would be a natural to hold a 20 - game tournament", explained Bowl-O-Drome owner Bill Bateman who organizes the event. "Next year we'll probably return to the ten - game setup."

Wally Knapp of Trenton is the current "Mr. Bowling" titleholder winning the event with a sizzling 252.4 average last year to break the existing record by nearly ten pins.

One participant likely to provide a serious challenge to Knapp is Quinte Unlebold- er Ron Saylor, who won the event the first two years it was held and then added another pair of victories to rank as the only four-time champion.

The veteran participant, who started as a pin-boy 22 years ago, has bounced back to rank with the top bowlers in the city after several medi- ocre years. Saylor currently ranks fifth in the city averages with a mark of 233.

"I was going to night school for the past couple of years and didn't really have the time to spend on bowling," he explained his slump.

This season, however, Saylor is competing in three bowling leagues and should rate as a serious challenger for the title.

He feels that, "the 20 games could affect some bowlers, but I don't think that it's going to make that much difference."

One bowler who would definitely rank as a contender, three - time winner Jim McKenzie, will miss the event after moving to western Canada this winter.

Among the other top participants would have to be 1969 winner Jacko Calnan, currently sporting a city high average of 264 and Leo Labelle who has never won the event, but is averaging 261 this season.

Prizes will depend upon the number of entries with top money of $300 if the field reaches 70 bowlers. In addition the winner receives a wrist watch from O'Connor's Jewel Box and has his name inscribed on the Lloyd's Cleaners Trophy which was donated in 1961 after Saylor had been awarded permanent possession of the original by winning the event three times.

Only 20 entries have been received so far, but Bateman expects the usual last - minute rush of local interest and there have been indications that a number of out-of-town entries will be forthcoming.

The tournament will get under way at midnight Friday and is expected to wind up about 3 p.m. Saturday.

Pinder Quits Hawks

CHICAGO (AP) — Left winger Gerry Pinder in effect quit Chicago Black Hawks Monday, charging coach Billy Reay with "lies and bush-league tactics."

Pinder, 22-year-old native of Saskatoon, joined the Hawks in the fall of 1969 after playing with the Canadian national team. He scored 19 goals and 20 assists in his rookie season and this season got 13 goals.

Pinder failed to appear for Monday's practice at Chicago Stadium as the Hawks drilled for tonight's match with New York Rangers in a National Hockey League's Stanley Cup playoffs.

"I don't see how I could ever face my skates again for that man (Reay)," said Pinder. "I regret what I'm doing. I'm not proud of it. And I know I have'nt played well this season.

"I have the highest regard for the Black Hawks' organization and the rest of the players, but the coach has lied to me this season. He says it's nothing personal, but it must be.

Pinder fumed because he was not used in the Hawks' 7-1 romp over the Rangers in New York Sunday.

"I guess I'm not good enough to play when we have a six-goal lead," he said. "Near the end of the regular season, he (Reay) told me to be ready for the playoffs. I worked hard, very hard, but the day before our series opened against Philadelphia, he told me I wasn't going to play. I didn't suit up the entire series. But he never explained to me. He's hardly said hello to me in two months.

"The coach can ignore me all he wants. It's bush league. I feel I can play somewhere."

Reay said he would not reply to Pinder's accusations "until I talk to him directly."

General manager Tommy Ivan said he thought Pinder "was just upset—it's one of those things."

Some Room Left In Minor Baseball

Baseball players who don't like waiting are advised to get their Belleville Minor Baseball applications in before May 1st.

The minor baseball group, which has already received applications from over 300 boys this season still requires a few players in the peewee, bantam and midget divisions.

The tadpole age group (from 7-9 years) has had the most action with 95 players signing so far, while tyke applications have reached 70 and peewees 65.

The bantam section with 40 players and midget with only 16 require some bolstering before the season commences.

Each minor team will average about 14 players in order to ensure playing time for everyone.

Applications before May 1st should be made to Mrs. Jean Reid, 34 Maple Drive. Those received after that date will be placed on a waiting list until an opening is available on one of the teams.

Lucy Cooper Says:

Golf's Million Dollar Winner

IRONS FROM THE ROUGH

If the grass is more than a couple of inches high in the rough and the ball is settled well down, I think all but the most expert golfers should use irons to get the next shot back in play.

Use an iron with good loft and play the ball in the back half of your stance with your hands ahead. You'll want an abrupt backswing and downswing, so don't be afraid to break your wrists early going back. Slam the clubhead down into the back of the ball (finishing) with a firm left hand —and smile.

Don't be discouraged if you hit one into tiger country. Everybody does. Just determined concentration and pound your error by using an overly straight-faced club to try to get out. You just may leave the ball there.

Gibson Has Knocking Knees While AL Hitters Feel 'Blue'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The ailing Gibson suffered his sixth knockout in four National League starts Monday night. New York Mets rocked him for 10 hits and seven runs in 3 2-3 innings and routed the St. Louis Cardinals 12-2.

Blue, a hard-throwing 21-year-old southpaw, tamed the world champion Baltimore Orioles on four hits—he had a no-hitter for five innings—and Oakland Athletics made off with a 1-0 triumph on Reggie Jackson's RBI single in the sixth inning.

In the only other National League encounter, Philadelphia Phillies nipped Houston Astros 2-1 on an eighth-inning tie-breaking home run by Willie Montanez.

Elsewhere in the American, California Angels blanked Cleveland Indians 8-0, Detroit Tigers swamped Kansas City Royals 8-3 and Minnesota Twins defeated Washington Senators 7-2. Milwaukee Brewers at Boston Red Sox was rained out.

The New York-St. Louis affair was billed as an early season mound classic between Gibson and Tom Seaver. But the Mets jumped on Gibson for two runs in the first inning, one in the third and four in the fourth. Ed Kranepool paced the 17-hit attack with four singles while Tommie Agee had a homer and double.

Gibson injured his left knee sliding into a base last season and has had it drained twice. But the Mets weren't about to write off the veteran fireballer, who's won 193 big league games, even though Ken Boyer, a St. Louis coach, said it was "the hardest I've ever seen him pitch."

"Everybody knows Gibson wasn't throwing Bob Gibson stuff," said Agee.

Blue was in trouble twice against Baltimore. In the fourth, Frank Robinson reached third with one out on Sal Bando's throwing error but was out trying to to score on Paul Blair's grounder and Brooks Robinson fanned.

In the ninth, Merv Rettenmund and Frank Robinson singled with one down but Blair popped up and Brooks flied out.

Blue helped build his team's only run with a bunt single and Bert Campaneris did the same when the Orioles let his bunt roll and it stayed fair. Blue was picked off second and Joe Rudi grounded out before Jackson nicked Pat Dobson for the decisive single.

Montanez then gave Philadelphia's Rick Wise his first 1971 win with his lead off homer in the eighth off Tom Griffin, snapping a 1-1 tie at Houston.

California's Rudy May stopped Cleveland on three hits as the Indians suffered their sixth straight loss. Jim Spencer's two-run homer helped Detroit a four-run uprising in the fifth.

Detroit snapped a 1-1 tie with four runs in the third inning against Kansas City.

Harmon Killebrew and Tony Oliva supported Jim Perry's six-hit pitching with two-run homers as Minnesota whipped Washington. Perry has been the Senators 15 lines in 31 lifetime decisions.

Found Any Treasure Lately?
The most notorious treasure collector of them all, Captain Kidd, sailed from New York in pursuit of pirates and instead became one himself. He captured great riches but made the mistake of sailing back to New York where he was caught and hanged in 1700.
People are still looking for Captain Kidd's treasure. Find anything of treasure by selling the family's no longer used items with an Intelligencer Want Ad. It's as easy as dialing 962-9171, matey!

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I suffer from hives. They come and go. All the doctor does is prescribe calamine solution. It seems to help the itching for awhile. The hives may disappear for days or weeks, then return. He says he doesn't know the reason. What do you suggest? — Mrs. O.

* * *

Comment: Ask for consultation with an allergist. If he finds the cause, you can discard your bottle of calamine lotion. Hives is no joke. It can render a person until one takes sleep and equanimity.

Let me tell you about an old friend and patient I met a few days ago while he was on vacation. I had safely brought him through two attacks of coronary thrombosis, pneumonia and other major illnesses.

Listen to him. Not a word of gratitude about overcoming such life threats! He said: "You know, I'll never forget what you did for me years ago. Remember when I had that bad attack of hives that held on for a few weeks? You couldn't seem to do anything for me.

"Then you recommended that allergy specialist in New York. I flew there, saw him, and went into a hospital for three or four days. He found something; gave me something and I was well in a jiffy.

"What I appreciate, and will never forget, is that you knew when it was time to get help. Some doctors are afraid to admit to themselves — as well as to their patients — that they can't possibly know it. Yep! I'll never forget your decision to send me where I could get the best advice and help."

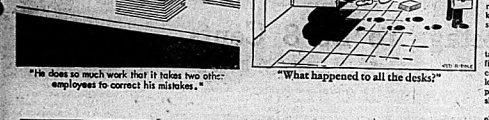
Perhaps, Mrs. O., this case history will help you decide to consult an allergist. Your trouble may be due to shell fish strawberries, or any one of dozens of other things you may be sensitive to. When hives keep on breaking out it is essential to discover the cause — if possible. Sometime taking tranquilizers is the miraculous remedy. For we know, that in some persons, emotional problems trigger these outbreaks.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 16, have had rheumatic fever, and a slight heart murmur. I take penicillin to prevent further attacks. I wonder whether I'll ever be able to marry and have children. My doctor says I will. — Miss B.

Comment: The following letter expresses my optimistic belief that it's certainly possible to have children after one has had rheumatic fever complicated by heart murmur.

* * *



Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I had a very severe attack of rheumatic fever with heart complications, and with each passing day, week, month and year for eight years I knew what it was like to live between life and death.

When doctors won't let you get up in bed, get out on a page in a book or get up except to use the bathroom, believe me you're sick. Once a month for eight years I had to take a certain type of penicillin shot. It was essential, and I know it was perhaps saving my life. At the time there was the question of whether I ever could be strong enough to have children.

* * *

Well, Dr. Steincrohn, after eight years with special love, medicines, wonderful doctors and God's help, I now live a wonderful and happily married life — which includes a beautiful 2-year-old daughter.

I will always have a heart murmur, but the damage has healed and I live every day in a normal way. I'm writing to give encouragement to people with rheumatic heart disease who think that an active life is all over for them. — Mrs. M.

Time Welfare State Included Poor - - Council

OTTAWA (CP) — "It is time we entered this welfare state to include the poor," the National Council of Welfare said today in launching an attack on the existing system and proposed federal government changes in it.

An immediate start is urged by the council on the payment of a guaranteed adequate income that at least assures everyone of poverty-line basics in food, clothing and housing.

The statement is the product of a six-month study by the council, a federally - appointed advisory body composed largely of welfare rights and poor people's representatives and voluntary agency workers.

It levels almost unprecedented criticism at federal policies and plans, especially attacking federal taxation and monetary policy intended to fight inflation as producing unemployed who were labelled deadbeats for seeking welfare assistance.

It indicts Welfare Minister John Munro's white paper on income security, tabled last Nov. 30 in the Commons, as likely to mislead people into believing something will be done to help poorer people.

The 33-page statement says Canadians should accept the principle that "every member of Canadian society has a right to a share of the national wealth sufficient to enable him to participate fully in that society."

It says the present system aims to help the aged, chronic less families, the disabled, the unemployed and the working poor but only results in disparities in levels of financial support arising from a patchwork of programs.

"The indefensible inconsistency of the results argues strongly for consolidation of income support programs, either in a single program or an integrated system of interlocking programs."

A first step should be to guarantee incomes of $2,000 a year for a single person, $3,000 for two adults, $3,900 for a family of three and $4,500 for a family of four.

The argument that the economy cannot now afford this and must instead invest in economic growth to end poverty tomorrow ignores the high social cost of poverty.

"The dollar costs of the products of poverty are infinitely higher than its elimination."

For example, the $38 to $100 daily cost of maintaining a child in an Ontario residential treatment centre is the equivalent of an annual income of $13,870 to $36,500, the annual cost of a person in a mental hospital is $3,200 and the cost per prison inmate is $6,000 a year.

The greatest inconsistency is that welfare mothers receive only $25 a month a child while foster mothers get $80 a month or more.

The real beneficiaries of government welfare programs are the corporate rich whose welfare is called economic growth incentives and covers mining subsidies, tariff supports, tax incentives—"money taxed from the poor and near-poor and given to the rich."

Through the tax system alone, such indirect subsidies cost the taxpayer $600 million—one-third more than the entire family allowance program.

Advocacy of a 10-per-cent tax cut across the board to spur the economy would return $330 million most substantially to the man in the highest tax bracket and least substantially to the man in the lowest bracket.

While the taxpayer believes his Canada Pension Plan deductions are financing a pension for himself, they really are producing enormous surpluses in the fund—more than $800 million in 1970—which are used for provincial government highway building and other activities.

By 1970, at least $2.8 billion had been loaned the provinces from this fund.

Sydney J. Harris Says

Women's Lib Curbs Births

I frankly do not understand the men who are worried about the "population explosion", yet at the same time ridicule or shrug off the "Women's Liberation" movement.

Because it seems clear to me that the latter offers the best hope of averting the former. We won't get our population growth down to where it should be until all women are encouraged to be more than mere breeders of children.

It is significant that, all rate is the highest precisely where the status of women is lowest. In poor, primitive, wholly male-dominated societies, the woman has nothing to look forward to but taking care of the house and having babies.

As nations become more affluent and more technicized, the opportunities for women expand, the liberties increase, and the birth-rate falls correspondingly. Wherever women are given free options, many of them choose careers over child - rearing, or at least balance the two.

And, as civilization becomes more technical and less physical, the biological differences between the sexes begin to make less difference. Men's size and strength no longer count for very much in keeping the society going; it is their brains that matter.

No one but a rank misogynist would deny that women's brains are just as good as men's. They are merely made of different temperamental abilities (even this is not certain, for what we think is "inborn" in women may be only a cultural modification), but the best intelligence tests we can devise show no significant gap between the sexes.

It is not the dissemination of widespread birth-control methods that will reduce population; women must be motivated to want them and to use them. And the most effective motivation is a social order that freely permits women to achieve the same status as men, that provides equal opportunities and equal reward.

In peasant woman in China or India has little future but in her children; a trained and educated woman will commonly marry later and have far fewer children, if her life is filled with broader goals. And she will be a more intelligent and interesting mother if she understands how her society works and contributes to its development by her individual skills.

We can no longer afford to keep our beliefs in air-tight compartments: to deplore the population explosion, in one breath, and in the next to fashioned notion about "woman's place." Woman's place is at man's side, not under his foot; and even her sexuality, I am convinced, will flourish when she gains this parity.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For April 28

Your birthday today: More responsibility, greater intuition in handling it is the story of the coming year. There are few serious obstacles in your path, so that it is mainly a matter of consistent endeavor, good intentions (which pave many places), and a will to build more meaningful relations.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Leave temperament to others this morning while you apply yourself to the tasks at hand. By evening everybody will have cheered up if you just keep doing your usual share.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Short-term views are hectic, confused. There's no reason to turn aside from long-range plans or well-worn habits — keep going as merely in your normal path as circumstances permit.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Round-about methods, detours may offer the better system of complicated situations today. By making a game of threading one's way through an obstacle course, one finds life is easier.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): If you can take the day off, do so; if you can't, strive for a detached outsider's view of what is going on.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Most plans run into crosscurrents during the prevalent order of things today. There is a chance to attend matters that have been neglected.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Rising above rivalry, one finds personal competition now is the only feasible course. Appearances seem to be less grand than reality.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): You find yourself between old and new, past and future, with an abrasive surface from both sides.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Real issues are quite hidden from view. Once you find them a few direct words to the point solve your share of the problem easily. Don't let elaborations affect your regular routines.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Think about costs and budgets this morning, as you may find some very tempting suggestions before the day is out.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Your tendency is to drift into circumstances where you cannot take firm hold of what ever is going on and manage things through momentary crises.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Co-operation, collaboration surround you, provided you give and take as an emotional equal. Nonroutine matters go well only with personal participation; see them through.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids...and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) discovered by a world famous research team. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

Stanfield Charges Government Neglects North

OTTAWA (CP) — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, his mukluks barely thawed out from an Alaska tour, castigated the government in the Commons Monday for dereliction of duty in both the development and protection of the north.

The House gave second reading to the Yukon minerals bill and sent it to committee for study, but not before Mr. Stanfield had used debate on the bill as a vehicle to tear into the government's northern policy.

Mr. Stanfield, who returned from Alaska late last week after studying preparations for the proposed Trans-Alaska Pipeline System, accused the government of uncaring ignorance of environmental tests and developmental initiatives that have taken place in the state.

People in Alaska and British Columbia, he said, were uncertain concerning the intentions of the Canadian government, because of the government's lack of policy.

Ministers were making conflicting statements on whether Canada intended to build an oil pipeline through the Mackenzie Valley.

"We have the government of Canada going around in circles and behaving like a windmill."

Alaska had been spending millions of dollars on vigorous studies on the effect of a pipeline, but the Canadian government had no observers there to learn from the studies.

It was clear to the Alaskans that a settlement of the native rights question was essential before any real development could go forward, and they were taking an honest approach to the solution. The Canadian government was not.

Canadian policy in the north was vague, and the government was being almost overwhelmingly callous.

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien denied the government was ignoring Alaskan developments, saying "we pretty well know the situation in Alaska," with department officials visiting there regularly.

The bill which afforded the opportunity for the exchange would increase the rate of royalties the government takes from mining companies in the Yukon, subject mining operations in the territory to land-use regulations that would keep them out of some areas, and require government approval to export raw minerals.

The latter provision is designed to increase the amount of processing done inside Canada.

The bill would also stipulate that mineral leases may be issued only to Canadian citizens or to companies incorporated in Canada—ensuring some degree of Canadian ownership.

That provision already is in effect in the Northwest Territories.

The opposition has criticized the bill for giving too much power to government officials and not providing for appeals to their decisions.

Mr. Chretien agreed when he introduced the bill in March that amendments should be made in committee to assure this.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton West) moved an amendment that would have required that a portion of all royalties from northern mineral development be put in trust as partial settlement of Indian aboriginal land claims, but it was ruled out of order.

After the bill received second reading, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey began second-reading debate on a bill to amend the Canada Labor (Standards) Code.

The proposed legislation would raise the federal minimum wage to $1.75 from $1.65 an hour July 1, and allow the government to increase it further by order-in-council at regular intervals.

Law forbidding pay differential based on sex would be strengthened and enforced by labor department inspectors. At present a complaint is required. Female employees in industries under federal jurisdiction would be entitled to at least 17 weeks of maternity leave.

Firms would be required to give between eight and 16 weeks notice for large-scale layoffs, the notice varying with the size of the layoff. Fines of up to $100,000 would face violators.

Individual workers would be entitled to a minimum notice of two weeks for dismissals or equivalent pay.

Employees with five years service who were dismissed, unless for just cause or retirement, would be entitled to two weeks severance pay, with the amount of severance escalating up to eight weeks pay for those with 20 years service or more.

Employers would not be allowed to hire workers because their salaries had been garnished by the courts. Many employers, said the minister, do this because they can't be bothered with the paper work involved.

Courts Will Settle Chicken Quarrel

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government intends to let the courts settle the so-called chicken-and-egg war, Justice Minister Turner repeated Monday in the Commons.

Federal lawyers would "appear" inthe test case that Manitoba is bringing shortly to the Supreme Court of Canada, directed against regulations established by a number of provnces including Quebec and Ontario to control and halt poultry imports from other provinces.

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) had asked whether the government would direct its counsel to oppose such legislation and state that it opposes such legislation as detrimental to Canadian unity.

Mr. Turner said the government will proceed through the courts and the timing depended on the courts.

Letter Postage to Be 8 Cents

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to raise the first-class letter rate, and help offset a post office deficit now in the $130 million range, was introduced Monday in the Commons.

The government bill would raise the first-class rate, six cents since 1968, to seven cents July 1 and eight cents Jan. 1, 1972.

Jean-Pierre Cote, minister responsible for the post office, announced plans to raise third-class rates as well if the bill wins passage.

Heath Macquarrie (PC—Hillsborough) said in an interview that the increases will be self-defeating. Postal service had been diminishing in effectiveness, buses were being used rather than parcel post, and "newspapers are going out of business because of high rates."

He said the great mistake was to drop Saturday delivery in 1968. It should be resumed.

Mr. Cote said he hopes better service will hold demand for the post office. The rate increases were needed to close a gap that would mean losses of $130 million this year and $140 million in 1972.

The increases would reap $37 million this year and $80 million next year.

"We'll still have a deficit of $60 million next year," he noted.

The increases would be made in stages to lessen the impact on the public, which has seen costs zoom since early 1968, when it cost five cents to mail a letter.

On first-class mail weighing more than one ounce but less than two, the rate July 1 would be 12 cents and Jan. 1, 14 cents. It now is 10 cents.

Current rate is six cents for the first ounce or less and four cents for each additional ounce.

The new scale would be 12 cents July 1 and 14 cents Jan. 1 for more than one ounce and no more than two; 18 cents July 1 and 20 cents Jan. 1 for more than two ounces and not more than four; 28 cents July 1 and 32 cents Jan. 1 for more than four ounces and not more than eight; 38 cents July 1 and 44 cents Jan. 1 for more than eight ounces and not more than 12; 46 cents July 1 and 54 cents Jan. 1 for more than 12 ounces and not more than 16.

The minister announced plans to increase third-class rates July 1, but said this wouldn't be done unless Parliament approved the bill. He may increase third-class rates by regulation.

The bill also would:

—Enable the minister to extend free postal service to the blind to include not only books but letters, tapes, records and so on.

—Allow members of Parliament four mailings each fiscal year of householder mail to constituents. Householder mail is usually known as junk mail.

Another clause in the bill would allow the post office to reduce rates for customers who prepare their letter mail in a way that would reduce postal costs.

Trotskyites Disrupt Meeting

MONTREAL (CP) — A noisy Trotskyist group disrupted the first Montreal hearing of the parliamentary committee on the constitution for about an hour Monday night, demanding that unemployment and social problems be the topic of discussion.

Shortly after one of them displayed a sign saying "Quebec independence is not for discussion," the meeting broke up in tumult.

While Montreal Mayor Jean Drapeau sat by committee chairman Gil Molgat, senator from Manitoba, a throng of demonstrators, reporters, photographers and spectators milled about.

The demonstrators demanded that Michel Chartrand, a labor leader and Quebec nationalist spokesman, act as chairman and that author Pierre Vallieres and teacher Charles Gagnon be allowed to speak.

Mr. Chartrand was not present and Vallieres and Gagnon are in jail on charges of supporting the terrorist Front de Liberation du Qebec.

The demonstrators, who numbered less than a dozen, earlier distributed handbills signed by the Young Socialist League saying the Canadian constitution made them vomit.

Of 12 briefs from the floor, nine were presented in English, including three from immigrants to Canada. They ranged from a sarcastic presentation by a newly-graduated engineer to a whimsical expression of faith in the monarchy by a film maker.

Mayor J. Russell Scott Will Not Seek Re-election for 1973

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Mayor J. Russell Scott last night announced he would not be seeking re-election as mayor of Belleville in the December, 1972 civic election.

He told the Quinte Branch of the Industrial Management Clubs of Canada, the job of mayor "isn't a lifetime job and it isn't my intention to run again.

"At the end of that term it will be five years and I think it's time that somebody else came in with a fresh view ... I've done all the correction or damage that I can do."

What does the future hold for Dr. Scott?

"If I feel, and if the people feel, that I can be of service to them in a greater way, then I will certainly consider offering my services.

"I'll help any party that helps Belleville and criticize any party that doesn't; and I've done so in the past," he stated this morning.

However, Mayor Scott is not interested in provincial politics.

With general concern surrounding a provincial election, which must take place before the fall of 1972, Dr. Scott emphasized, "I'm not concerned about provincial politics."

"This just isn't the time," replied Belleville's mayor of the past four years.

Dr. Scott's statement last night came in the wake of much recent speculation which has surrounded local politicians. With civic, provincial and federal elections possible next year, mayoral candidates will find the path clear locally and Dr. Scott will not be in the running for a seat at Queen's Park.

A busy medical doctor, Mayor Scott self-confessed he has "a busy life". An average day for the 58-year-old Kingston native starts at Belleville General Hospital with office rounds necessary before he turns to his busy civic duties.

Not only is the mayor of Belleville required to serve on more than 30 local municipal boards such as the Public Utilities Commission, planning boards and the police commission, but Mayor Scott is also president of the Association of Municipal Police Governing Authorities, a director of the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves,

Quebec Sells North Power

MONTREAL (CP) — The Gazette says Premier Robert Bourassa will announce the sale of $2 billion worth of electricity to Consolidated Edison of New York at a giant Liberal Party rally Friday.

The newspaper quotes a government source as saying that a contract for what would be the biggest hydro power sale in Quebec history has been signed or is about to be.

The report says the electricity is to come from a proposed hydro-electric project on James Bay and Hudson Bay and has been "prepaid."

The electricity will be delivered "at a later date," it says.

Money from the power sale will be used to finance the first phase of the hydro project which the newspaper says, will cost $7 billion.

A new government agency will be set up for development of the area of the hydro project, which will include mining and forestry operations, the newspaper says.

The report says the hydro project is expected to create 100,000 jobs over the next 10 years.

It says plans call for the damming of 10 rivers flowing into James Bay and changing the course of five others.

Miss Dora Cook — Ray Peacock

Foxboro Woman, 80, In U.S. Peace March

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A Foxboro resident has returned from a two-day, 1,600 mile train trip from Belleville to Washington, D.C., to participate in a peace march protesting the Vietnam war.

So what's so unusual about that in this day of long distance travel?

Nothing, perhaps, except that in this instance the peace marcher was a woman — who some time ago passed her 80th birthday.

The energetic Foxboro peace marcher was Miss Dora Cook, who left Belleville last Friday morning at 8 a.m., arriving in Washington at 10 the next morning by way of Toronto, Buffalo, Albany and New York.

This left her just enough time to walk from the Washington railway station to the big Lafayette Park opposite the White House where she joined the thousands of other protesters for the march to the Capitol.

She missed out on connections with the United Women's Contingent from Detroit, with whom she expected to march.

Instead, she joined a college student group from Youngstown, Pennsylvania, and after the march acted as tour guide for the students on a visit to the Lincoln and Washington monuments.

"They hadn't been to Washington before, so I told them I would show them the way," Miss Cook modestly noted.

Then at 4 o'clock — only seven hours after arrival in the Capital City she was back at the railway station to start her return journey to Belleville.

Why would an 80-year old woman from Canada make a 1,600 mile train trip to join a peace march in another country?

"Because I feel the Vietnam war has been going on far too long," returned the Foxboro octogenarian. "I am tired of wars."

She also took part in the first Vietnam peace march in Washington back in 1965.

Miss Cook wasn't a bit faked when at the park opposite the White House she couldn't link up with the Detroit women's contingent.

She merely introduced herself to the college students, asked them if they minded her joining them and went along on the march.

The only difference was the age disparity and the fact the students were dressed for the march in jeans and sweaters while she was wearing a dress and coat.

But Miss Cook demonstrated much the same enthusiasm as one of the girl student marchers who, when her boss wouldn't allow her the time off quit her job to take part in the Washington rally.

A native of Tyendinaga township, Miss Cook taught school in Melrose and Point Anne from 1911 to 1918. She then moved to Detroit where for more than 30 years she worked for the Burroughs Adding Machine Company.

In 1954 she returned to Canada and has since lived at Foxboro where she takes an active part in church work.

Although she maintains her own apartment at the village, for the past two years she has been acting as housekeeper for a Sidney township farmer west of Foxboro.

But she accomplished her purpose of taking part in the peace march.

She has kept her "Peace in Vietnam" button and says "I'd do it again."

President Re-elected

SEOUL (AP) — President Chung Hee Park of South Korea won a third term by a big margin Tuesday, but not as big as the last time.

Park, 53, an army general who took over after a military coup in 1961, won his first presidential term in 1963 by 156,000 votes. His winning margin rose to 1.3 million votes in 1967, but his plurality was running some 300,000 votes less this time.

Ailing Queen To Keep Date

Palace Denies B.C. Trip Off

LONDON (CP) — The Queen's health has raised a question in one London newspaper whether she will be able to fulfil her 10-day tour of British Columbia, but a Buckingham Palace spokesman emphasized there will be no cancellation of the trip.

The palace was flooded by telephone calls after The Evening Standard, a Beaverbrook paper, said in a front-page story today that an announcement postponing the British Columbia tour "is a possibility not to be discounted."

The spokesman said the palace expressed rage over the story and insisted that even if the Queen's health is not improved, she will still go to Canada as planned.

The Queen, accompanied by the Royal Family, is scheduled to flY to Canada Monday on a 19-day, 4,200-mile tour to participate in British Columbia's centennial.

She has been suffering from a bad cold and heavy cough which has been lingering since early last month. Her doctors advised her to cancel all her engagements for the next three days and rest at the royal retreat at Sandringham.

The spokesman said she plans to return to Windsor Castle during the weekend and prepare for the Canadian journey.

"There is no question of the trip being cancelled," he said. "Even if her cold does not improve, she will still go."

The Standard said the question of the Queen's health—she is 45—"has been a matter of some concern from time to time to her advisers and family."

"It is sinus trouble which appears to be at the root of the Queen's particularly troublesome colds. She appears to have a slight weakness of the breathing passages, such as the sinuses."

The Royal Family planned to fly directly to Victoria from London, to be met by Prime Minister Trudeau and Gov.-Gen. Roland Michener as well as Premier W. A. C. Bennett.

For part of the tour, the royal Yacht Britannia will serve as an official residence for the Royal Family. Three nights will be spent in the interior of the province, with stops planned at Fort St. John, Dawson Creek and Williams Lake among other communities.

The robbery at the Bank of Montreal's Vancouver General Hospital branch took place 40 minutes after it opened for the day's business.

India, Pakistan Draw Away From Diplomatic Showdown

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — India and Pakistan appeared today to be drawing away from the brink of a diplomatic showdown over the East Pakistan crisis.

Officials of both countries conferred at length here Tuesday on ways of solving the impasse over the repatriation of their diplomats from Calcutta and Dacca which has been a major factor in the growing tension between them.

India accused Pakistan of holding its diplomats in Dacca under virtual house arrest although it was not clear how the government had received information from the East Pakistan capital.

In Calcutta, West Pakistani diplomats were kept under what was called "police vigilance."

The Dacca and Calcutta missions were closed Monday after East Pakistani diplomats defected to the breakaway republic of Bangla Desh and a New Pakistani deputy high commissioner ran into angry demonstrations.

The dangers arising from the war of words and refusal of either side to allow the other's diplomats to leave except on the basis of reciprocity still exists.

But there now seems to be a realization that some solution has to be found, observers said.

It is believed that India may have suggested that the diplomats and their families be brought out by road or by an airline of a third country rather than through Karachi as Pakistan has insisted so far.

Pakistan is expected to reply to the Indian proposals within the next 24 hours or so.

Panelists Agree — Too Much Talk About Drugs

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

BRIGHTON — Students are getting fed up with being talked at about the evils of drug use, according to John Metcalfe, a department of education health consultant.

One of five panelists at a drug seminar here last night, he indicated that classes on drug education in the schools just are not working out and the teachers are coming through as "moral entrepreneurs".

Mr. Metcalfe cautioned against the hard sell approach of telling students what to do.

Agreeing, Peterborough social worker, William Robb, said in the classroom environment non-users do not want to listen to drug dialogue and drug takers do not want to talk about the subject.

Contrary to the view of some of he seminar's organizers that knowledge is the answer to the drug problem, Mr. Metcalfe said he disagreed with the premise "if we can only tell people about drugs, we can stop it."

"What about cigarettes? Everyone knows the effects of them but people keep on using them," he said.

The consultant advised allowing young people to judge for themselves with regard to drug use but suggested they be requested to submit their decision-making to a rigorous analysis. He said in making the decision, one should ask himself 1) what will be the best possible result? 2) the worst? 3) the degree to which the result is predictable? 4) what are the alternatives?

Belleville Police Chief Douglas Crosbie told the audience of 150, in dealing with drug users, it does not matter if they are experimenting once or they are frequent takers, young people are still liable to receive criminal records for their misdemeanors.

"And a criminal record is a pretty serious thing," he said. The Chief said that crime had increased significantly in Belleville during the last year but did not relate this to drug use which he said is "more a problem in affluent areas" of the city.

The media have a lot to do with it," he said, adding that municipalities like Brighton and Belleville no longer live in isolation because of the impact of television and speedy communications generally.

He said that such communities are receiving good influences from the USA and metropolitan Canada but also bad ones — like drugs.

"The most important thing is to know your young people, at least talk to them," Chief Crosbie advised.

Accessibility of drugs is a prime factor in their proliferate use, Brighton physician Dr. David Lintern contended.

"If there had been drugs a century ago, people would have taken them," he said.

Dr. Lintern said he did not believe drugs to be a large problem in Brighton, although he predicted that use of them would increase.

Drugs have only been easily available here for the last two or three years, he said, and in the last year no more than two dozen users had come to him for medical attention.

Although he said he could not gauge their use in the community as a whole, the doctor emphasized that drunkenness is more of a social problem here.

Chief Crosbie indicated that the drinker is still more of a problem in Belleville, where he said some individuals have five cards, with 37 entries on each one for their liquor-control violations of the law.

On the subject of liquor, Mr. Robb mentioned "kids in Peterborough were injecting wine intravenously. Chief Crosbie said there had been a case of this in Belleville two weeks ago.

The city's chief constable stated he is "not satisfied there has been enough in depth research on marijuana."

Although not condoning its use, Dr. Lintern concluded "there is a lot in the case that the world would be better off with marijuana than alcohol."

He pointed out that a student may have watery eyes, a runny nose, and hoarse throat — but what has he got — a cold.

Public Hearing Will Discuss Wellington Sewerage System

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

PICTON — A provincial sewage works program proposed for Wellington village will be the subject of an upcoming public hearing.

Wellington reeve Douglas Hilliard said yesterday that a hearing date will be confirmed following a meeting between village councillors and members of the technical committee of the area water and sewage advisory board. He remarked that council first submitted its request for consideration of this sewerage project to the Ontario Water Resources Committee in 1968. Plans were drafted accordingly when Quinte Milk Products Ltd. examined the proposal that withdrew support since their plant operations were closed. "By September of 1970 Quinte Milk was out of the picture completely," commented reeve Marvin.

The proposed program has been developed in two stages at a total estimate cost of $1,305,932. It would be financed over a 40-year period at an interest rate of nine per cent.

MORE

The initial works will include a sanitary sewer collector system on local streets as described in Schedule A to the frontage rate bylaw to service the developed portion of the village. The system would include approximately 361 service connections with an estimated 342 placed in use initially.

A service connection consists of a pipe running from the collector sewer on the street to the property line. Each property owner is responsible for providing a sewer pipe from this service connection at the property line to the building on his land. He must also furnish the necessary connection to his house plumbing system.

The collector system features two underground prefabricated sewage pumping stations, each with two pumps. The first pumping station would be constructed on the east side of the creek, west of West Street, near the lakeshore.

The second station would be located on Belleville Street, also near the lakeshore. Sewage would be pumped through approximately 2,880 feet of eight - inch - diameter mains to sewage treatment facilities. Sewage treatment works include a 16 - acre waste stabilization pond to be located in Wellington at an undetermined site. Effluent from the lagoon would be discharged into a nearby creek.

The second stage of the proposal is the construction of a sanitary sewer on Belleville Street from Niles Street to the CNR tracks. This phase of the program would be implemented approximately 10 years after its initial stage.

Mr. Hilliard remarked that it is doubtful this step will be taken since the described area is predominately suburban.

The total estimated capital cost of stage one is $1,159,389. The municipality's share is approximately $579,694 or a rate of 50 per cent of the estimated gross capital cost, would be provided to Wellington village. Stage two will cost an estimated $46,543 if it is implemented in future.

A report by the Division of Project Developments of the OWRC states that it is assumed in the first year of operation there will be a per capita daily sewage flow of 50.5 gallons. This figure represents a calculated average only. It is predicted that 60 per cent of Wellington's population would join the sewerage system instead of continuing to use septic tanks. This figure, in projected statistics would increase by five per cent annually until 95 per cent of all villagers are connected in eight years. It stage two is effected, 100 per cent participation is expected.

If Wellington village council accepts the terms of program and if the Ontario Municipal Board approves the plan, the works could be operational by July 1, 1972. Charges would be based on a service rate, a connection charge and a frontage rate. It is estimated that a typical home owner's charge where the owner occupant pays frontage and connection charges on an annual basis instead of prepaying them would be $147.97.

Frontage charges are calculated at 30 cents per foot for an average 100 foot frontage. This permits a charge of $30 per home. A fixed connection charge of $25.56 will be levied each year. Sewage use charge is estimated at $92.41. These figures combine to provide the typical home charge of $147.97 annually.

Reeve Marvin commented that many village lots do not have a 100 foot frontage. He assumed that villagers would be billed for sewage services on a bi-monthly basis. The municipality will be billed only for the user rate portion of the revenue.

It was noted that using consultants' estimated figures of 10.7 million gallons in the first year, a rate of 107.4 cents per 1,000 gallons of sewage, the billing would total 120,000. The municipality must turn over all frontage and connection revenue to the OWRC since the user charge recovers only enough revenue to meet the annual sewage rate billing. If surface water enters the system through leakage, the municipality will be billed according to the total required revenue figure is approximately $38,600.

Reeve Marvin stated that Wellington village council has made no decisions concerning the OWRC proposal because members want more facts. "Council hasn't committed itself yet, we're still seeking more information," he stressed. He added that the water system also may be taken over by the province.

Wellington village now has debentures as well as an operating charge for its water system. This water system is tentatively owned by the village. Under a new proposal, the province would own and operate the lake - to - village water to Wellington for resale to villagers.

The province of Ontario, not Wellington village, would be responsible for capital outlay. Reeve Marvin stated, "This created a bit of a burden last year when the Niles Street water mains were extended to service new homes in that area." This extension was made at the expense of the village.

Reeve Marvin suggested that a public hearing would reveal villagers' reactions to the proposed sewerage works program. He added that there was a previous hearing but no cost figures were available for discussion. Facts concerning the project have been prepared by the Division of Project Developments of the OWRC and handled under a provincial sewerage works program which allows Ontario to apply grants not previously available.

Mixing Work with Pleasure

Dennis Fralick, Harry Keating, Mike Reed and Steve Ross carry a heavy bench, one of the stage props used in the Belleville Theatre Guild play Luv which opens tonight at the Pinnacle Playhouse. To lighten their burden, in a figurative if not literal sense, they give Sheila McCrystal a free ride, just for the fun of it.

Luv Opens Tonight at Playhouse

Artafest '71 will begin the final round of its program of cultural activities when the Belleville Theatre Guild makes its first presentation tonight of Luv, a satirical play by Murray Schisgal, at the Pinnacle Playhouse at 8:15 p.m.

The play will be a landmark in the history of the Belleville Theatre Guild because for the first time, the Belleville public will have an opportunity to see a play being acted on a raked (slanted) stage set. The set, designed by Tony Lassing, represents a street scene with a bridge in the background and the realistic effect is heightened because the set slopes downward from the back to the front.

This is because the play calls for a simple set and features only three characters and so it would have more visual interest for the audience if presented in this way. This type of set was commonly used in England, but it is an innovation in Belleville.

The play, which stars Lois Summerville, Ron McPherson and John Shaw, consists of two parts in the life of the three characters separated by an interval of a few months.

With typical Schisgal wit, the play satirizes many contemporary values and cliches connected with love, romance and marriage. Every kind of humor is apparent in the play from the slapstick variety to devastating satire. The author employs all kinds of vaudevillian tricks such as quick entrances and exits, blackouts, disappearances, singing and dancing.

Originally planned for presentation at Centennial Secondary School, for three days, the play will now run for 10 days at the Pinnacle Playhouse, starting tonight instead of Thursday night. The last-minute change of plans was made due to certain technical difficulties that cropped up in presenting the play at the school.

Larry Ewashen, director, says that patrons can reserve seats for any night that they wish to attend the play by phoning the Pinnacle Playhouse.

Lions Help Retarded Raise Funds

Belleville Lions Club is doing its bit to see that a group of retarded children will go to the special Olympics in Toronto in June.

At its last club meet last week the Lions raised $224 for the fund. Part of it came through the generosity of a Lion from Iroquois. Al Rogers, visiting the Belleville club, won $27 in the 50 - 50 draw. He donated his winnings to the fund to send the 12 Belleville athletes to the Olympics.

The Belleville and district Association for the Mentally Retarded has set a goal of $1,000 for the 12 participants and supervisors who will compete in Toronto. The money will cover transportation, meals and lodging. But this is an appeal that isn't a campaign. The association is a member agency of the United Appeal, can't ask for extra donations, William R. Kirk School as part of the Hastings county school system, can't run a campaign either.

So the association is depending on people like the Lions, who just happen to want to make a contribution to see 12 happy young people off to their own games.

Madoc Has New Oil Truck

MADOC — The Madoc Co-Operative Association can now promise fast, efficient deliveries of petroleum products since the arrival of their shiny new oil truck last week. Allan Curtis, who handles all the oil deliveries for the association, received the keys last Friday morning.

Covering thousands of miles during its service in the area, the old truck was worn beyond repair. Having a 1,200 gallon tank, it also necessitated the purchase of a truck with more tankage.

The new tank has a capacity for 1,900 gallons, which will enable the deliverer to make less frequent stops for refills and thereby visit more customers per day.

Although the rush of the season is over, the new truck has already been to the roads and has made a number of deliveries.

Belleville to Be UIC Training Hub

The Unemployment Insurance Commission is "centralizing a lot of training in Belleville and we intend to make a greater use of Belleville for training of supervisory personnel," said Lester Stevens, director general of operations in Ottawa, responsible for UIC operations in Canada.

LESTER STEVENS

In a telephone interview Monday, Mr. Stevens said establishment of the UIC data processing centre in Belleville was made with the "idea of making it into an administrative headquarters and training centre . . . a pioneer centre."

A major course is presently being organized by the UIC for 330 supervisory personnel from across Canada, and additional facilities for another 330 are being sought.

The training sessions, to run July 12 through Sept. 7, will be held at Loyalist College. John Legate, a Loyalist College master, explained that classes, averaging 30 different persons per week, would be operated from Monday to Thursday — a 24 hour week.

A pilot course, taught by Courtenay Alexander in Nov. 1970, proved successful but expansion will include supervisory personnel from across the country. Mr. Alexander has been named the most probable choice for head of this extended course.

In addition to courses taught at Loyalist College, UIC staff from across Ontario are being trained weekly at the Dundas Street headquarters. Of major importance at these informal classes is implementation of the new Unemployment Insurance Act expected to become law July 1, 1971.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission is presently negotiating for use of the Bell Canada - Four Seasons facilities to accommodate an additional 330 UIC trainees.

Noel Stockton, Ontario regional public relations officer, said that the personnel would reside at the Four Seasons and other area hotels.

Anti-polluters Plan Campaign

The Belleville and District Anti-Pollution Committee has decided to start a publicity campaign for a cleaner environment.

The group has organized a committee to draft proposals for citizen participation. They will be considered at the next meeting May 31.

BCI student Charles Cox has suggested that secondary students in activities that shower results would encourage young people to take a more important role in anti-pollution efforts.

Mr. Cox noted that many city residents would welcome a river free from rubber tires tin cans and glass.

"Student projects provide a chance to do something besides talk about pollution," he said.

A group headed by David Harcourt will look into the feasibility of publishing a water-pollution index of the Moira River within the city limits.

Today's Economics

Prime Minister Trudeau is convinced in his own mind that inflation has been cured — for the time being at least — so here he is with a proposal of legislation to give MPs a 50 per cent pay increase a year, to $18,000, and a 33 per cent boost in their tax-free expense allowances, to $8,000.

Nobody need be surprised by such a proposal although if it is not inflationary we do not know what is, or as the new leader of the NDP, David Lewis, put it, "I cannot begin to see an increase of 50 per cent in the salaries of Parliament at the same time as the Government and the Prices and Incomes Commission tell the workers of Canada that they cannot have an increase of more than six per cent."

But then, where was Mr. Lewis earlier in the month when the locomotive engineers won a three-year contract providing for annual pay increases of 8 per cent in each of the first two years and 7 per cent in the third?

Or, more simply, the 6 per cent guideline of the Government and Prices and Incomes people has long since gone by the board. In our fluctuating and competitive economy nothing stands still, notwithstanding the shocked protests of the likes of Mr. Lewis.

Meanwhile in Ontario, Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough, in his budget, has placed a five per cent ceiling on average salary increases and limited growth in the size of the civil service to 1.6 per cent. At the same time Mr. McKeough is also aware of the realities of today's economics and concedes that the legislature may have to accept some salary increases exceeding five per cent if they are awarded by arbitration boards.

So much for those guidelines of a while back. How, moreover, does the Prime Minister reconcile his "inflation is licked" theories with the continual erosion of the dollar by higher costs, which in turn have resulted from higher wages? A penny extra here and a penny more there, on some article or service. It is happening all the time. And for another example, the postal rates are to go up again soon.

In matters of earnings these days it is more and more a case of government of the people by the people for the people, and that old devil, inflation, take the hindmost.

A Deadline

Today's cartoon speaks for itself. The annual tax agony is drawing to a close, with only the computers in Ottawa left to do their checking, processing and — if necessary — further mangling of the taxpayer. One wonders why this convoluted system has to be afflicted on citizens largely ill-equipped to unravel it. Even if you venture to the local tax office for help, the staff, after doing some scribbling, will dash off to a dark corner where it is to be hoped The Calculator. And there is a note of reverence in the way they speak of it that makes one think, well, if they need a calculator, what about the rest of us? Any semblance of tax reform it seems to us that some means of streamlining the method of collecting is necessary. As we have suggested before why cannot everyone be assessed a certain percentage, and none of this conglomerate of demands that are made in the tax form year-in-year-out.

College's Reputation

Albert College's "Glow and Sparkle" program at the weekend provided the community with another opportunity to tour this fine establishment, talk to students and staff, and witness the examples of school activity.

The traditional Gothic lines of the building, with its chapel as focal point, has all the appearance of a school of distinction. But this would be as nothing without high grade staff and students to give it human qualities beyond mere bricks and mortar.

Small Courtesies

Three young ladies, students all, came into this office recently to have a look at our files. When they had finished they returned the files to the main office, and since no one was there, they left a note of thanks. Well we appreciated that. In an imperfect world, a simple word of thanks and the thoughtfulness behind it, says much. It says much for our three young visitors.

Deep South Outpaces Other Regions

The Ironies of Desegration Patterns in the U.S.

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — The decreasingly-segregated cities and suburbs of the North got a double reprieve this week, as both the United States Supreme Court and the U.S. Senate decided to limit their attacks on racial discrimination to the former slave states of the South.

The irony has not passed unnoticed by southern politicians and northern liberals.

After resisting desegregation bitterly for years, the South has been quietly dismantling its old racial structure at a pace that leaves the northern and western states behind.

Both senators and justices were aware of this. But both had — or found — valid enough reasons to avoid ventilation now on to what is likely to become the greatest racial battlefield in the U.S., the metropolitan regions of the North and West.

Chief Justice Warren Burger, writing for an unusually unanimous court, set out guidelines for district judges throughout the South to end segregated schooling patterns where there is a "system that has been deliberately constructed and maintained to enforce racial segregation."

His definition deliberately left uncertain how the Supreme Court will rule when it is confronted—as it inevitably will be, before long—with a case involving racial segregation in the schools as a result of what U.S. commentators call, with delicate objectivity, "residential patterns."

"All things being equal, with no history of discrimination, it might well be desirable to assign pupils to schools nearest their homes," the chief justice wrote. But "all things are not equal" in the South, he said.

The Supreme Court advocated the use of even "bizarre" measures—including carrying children far from home by bus—to end historic school segregation built up with the complicity or consent of state and local officials.

Whether the court would order long-distance "busing" of northern pupils to achieve desegregation is an entirely different question.

Its answer will have to await some other court case that touches more explicitly on racially-segregated schools which arise without official connivance—as whites abandon the disturbed and decaying cores of American cities to Negroes and flee to the suburbs.

It was this type of "de facto" segregation which Senator Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut tried to get his colleagues to wrestle with. He failed, but only after rallying an astonishing coalition of southern segregationists and northern civil-rights advocates to his cause.

"Shall we have a double standard in the United States, shall we have desegregation only in the South?" Ribicoff asked, and castigated some fellow northern senators for hypocrisy.

The Senate was considering, and later approved, a bill providing up to $1,500 million to help southern schools desegregate. Ribicoff wanted to add an amendment giving every metropolitan area in the U.S. a 10-year deadline to produce more than token mixtures of black and white students in both city and suburban schools.

Recent census figures indicate that the South, with its greater numbers of small towns and informal racial mixtures, has recorded significant progress in breaking down many of the barriers between the races and white that survived from the confederacy.

In the current school year, 38 per cent of the black pupils in the South are going to schools where whites are in the majority.

The North, whose racial preaching and civil-rights activists have long given southerners a pain, was shown for the first time to be trailing the South. Only 27 per cent of black students in the North attend schools where whites are in the majority—a figure barely changed from the previous year.

Southern senators backed the Ribicoff amendment, hoping the whole bill would be defeated as a result in the House of Representatives or by presidential veto. The northern liberals in the Senate were divided between those who feared the bill's defeat and those who took Ribicoff's words to heart. The bill passed without Ribicoff's amendment.

President Nixon has made his position clear. He does not favor federal efforts to integrate the white suburbs, and he spoke out last year against unusual efforts to achieve racial balance in the schools.

The Supreme Court—which still has three appointees of the late President Eisenhower, for whom Nixon was vice-president, plus two of Nixon's own nominees—has clearly rejected some of the president's views on school integration.

There will be much greater anguish, in Congress and court, before the knotty problems of segregation resulting from "residential patterns" is resolved.

BBC Radio Offers Sex Education

BBC London Letter

The BBC school radio program "Where do babies come from?" has been awarded the Jury Prize of $500 in the 1970 Japan Prize competition. It is one of two radio education programs in the series 'Nature' produced for the primary schools embarking on sex education. It was entered in the category for School Radio (Primary).

The Japan Prize is an annual international contest for sound broadcasting educational programs. It was instituted in 1965 on the initiative of Nippon Hoso Kyokai (NHK) and attracted entries from 58 countries.

The award - winning program answers the question in the title "Where do babies come from?" with the reply 'From inside their mother's tummies, that's where babies come from'.

In very simple language it describes the physical differences between boys and girls, intercourse pregnancy and birth. The colored filmstrips are made from specially-commissioned paintings which are vivid and life-like.

Teachers using these programs in schools had the benefit of specially-prepared notes describing ways in which they might be included in a scheme of classwork. The notes also provided an extended vocabulary and the complete text of the broadcasts. Schools using the program had the tape-recorded broadcast and the filmstrip purchased from BBC Publications.

Haiti Could End Up as Another Communist Outpost

By ROD CURRIE

WASHINGTON (CP) — The United States is watching nervously the political developments in Haiti, the tiny republic with vast potential for disorder in the vacuum left by the death of dictator Francois Duvalier.

So far all is outwardly calm as pudgy, 19-year-old Jean-Claude Duvalier, politically naive and tentatively picked for the job, takes over his father's title as "president for life."

Much still is unknown about who really has grasped power but observers generally agree that Jean-Claude is more a figurehead than anything else in the setup that has emerged since the senior Duvalier's death at 64 last week.

Naturally the prime but generally unspoken U.S. fear is that if the present regime fell the U.S. could possibly end up with a second Communist neighbor, just south of Premier Castro's Cuba.

Many of the ingredients for such a revolution are present in Haiti, observers suggest, except possibly the revolutionary leadership that Castro brought to Cuba.

The vast majority of Haiti's 4.5 million population is unbelievably poor. Thirteen years after Duvalier seized power, per-capita income is about $75 a year; about 90-per-cent are illiterate, many are plagued by yaws, tuberculosis and malnutrition.

In his years in office the ruthless dictator instead spent much of his efforts ensuring his own stability. Such was his power, after years of eliminating his enemies, reducing the influence of the military that he was able in 1961 to declare himself president for life without so much as a whimper of objection.

It was this act that finally caused the U.S. to crack down and the previous $15 million-a-year in aid was trimmed to $1.5 million, specifically aimed at an effort to eradicate malaria.

Until then the U.S., counting on Haiti as a strong anti-Communist ally in a strategic area, had given the corruption-ridden government some $50 million and had flown in a team of specialists to treat Duvalier after a near-fatal heart attack in 1959.

With the uncertainties of the new situation U.S. Ambassador Clinton E. Knox in Haiti has predicted "continued improvement" in relations with Haiti and suggested concern in the U.S. aid. Specifically he mentioned a $750,000 two-year outlay for reforestation and other rural developments.

Even before the senior Duvalier's death Communist influences were at work in the area of the Caribbean republic. Duvalier had expressed concern in Knox last month, the ambassador reported, over propaganda broadcasts from Havana and Moscow.

Duvalier was known also to speak English, French and Spanish.

Mayor Scott:

American Investment 'Good for Belleville'

The Quinte chapter of the Industrial Management Clubs of Canada was warned last night not to arbitrarily spurn American finance in Canadian business.

Mayor J. Russell Scott told members of the club, "economic nationalism is a very good thing, but I think sometimes we can go too far. I think if we can invest in our own businesses, we should do that, but as far as going off half-cocked on straight nationalization, we're killing the goose that lays the golden egg."

Putting his comments on the home front, Dr. Scott had nothing but praise for recent industrial developers in Belleville.

"We have had nothing but co-operation from the recent industries that have come into Belleville. With the exception of Brooke-Bond, they are American subsidiaries . . . fine people.

"They work, they increase our economy, they supply good jobs and they supply good pay to our people."

The mayor warned of cutbacks in allowing American investment. "Over the years we have, in our little city of Belleville, exported hundreds and hundreds to the United States that we have educated in our schools because we didn't have employment for them here.

"I think we have to be just a little bit careful on this economic nationalism as far as going too far because they have been good to us," he said.

Mayor Scott quickly outlined improvements and attractions available to industry needing a site on which to locate. He informed the members of the Ft-man IMCA club that suitable industrial land has been made available through council's investments in properties "This has worked out," he said, stressing that "none are sold at a loss, but only a slight profit.

"We don't kite it.

"In our area we are in an excellent position. They (industrialists) don't have too much choice other than here, if they don't want to go north or east of Toronto.

"They know we do have facilities and our people want them here."

The mayor narrowed down the choices as he indicated industry will locate in communities with a fair-sized population. They don't want to locate in a small community and "upset the applecart by being the one big industry," he said.

"Brockville is too small. Kingston is too institutional. Cornwall is too far from the market. Oshawa has comparatively high wage ratios . . . the Oshawa-General Motors complex," and there is little market area north of Peterborough.

"Belleville is the logical place to develop and expand and go."

But what about the future, asked a club member?

"I would be very disappointed if we don't have at least two new industries this year," replied the city council head, indicating expansion of existing industries is also in the offing.

During the question period which followed the mayor's speech, another industrial management club member asked about the possibilities of regional government in Belleville's future.

Mayor Scott stated that regional government in Canada had not proved successful. In fact, "I don't think there's anybody happy where regional government has been imposed. In Toronto they would throw it out tomorrow."

He also cited the cases of St. Catharines, Ottawa, Thunder Bay, and Kitchener-Waterloo, communities dissatisfied with regional government. To back up his statement, Mayor Scott produced a recent study by the city of St. Catharines, condemning regional government. According to Dr. Scott, this southern Ontario city would like nothing better than to withdraw from this system. "But they can't," he emphasized.

"We can come up with some other answer without a second tier of government."

In the light of recent objections to extensive expenditures of $85,000 for an urban renewal plan provided by a Toronto consultant firm, Mayor Scott said he had, for the past two years, attempted to attract a consultant firm to Belleville. "There are three things we need in Belleville," he said.

Not only has the mayor indicated the urban renewal plan might better have been done by city planners, but he predicted trouble ahead when the plans come up for approval.

"If you think the OMB hearing on the shopping plaza was something, you'll want to see the hearing on the urban renewal plan. People are going to object, but that's democracy," he forecast.

the Ontario Municipal Association and director and chairman of the pollution control committee.

"It's full time," he said.

Interest in "serving the people" and in public affairs took a definite step forward shortly after the second world war. A 1941 Queen's University graduate, with a doctorate in medicine, a degree as master of surgery and a post-graduate degree in business administration and economics, Dr. J. Russell Scott, MD, CM, served in England as a hospital plastic surgeon.

Civilian practice for the young doctor began immediately after the war.

As his family grew to six, Mayor Scott said he decided "to take an active part and contribute" to their education and as "a service to the community". For 12 years he served as trustee on the Belleville Public School Board, including terms as chairman.

Dr. Scott, as a member of the Belleville Agriculture Society, and past president and a life director of the Belleville Fair Board, was chosen as general chairman of the International Plowing Match of 1961.

"I'm just a farmer at heart," chuckled the mayor, whose interest in agriculture is no secret. In fact, he is the process of becoming the first North American to import the rare breed of Kerry Cattle, from Ireland.

"I guess I'm one of the few mayors that would know how to set a skimmer (special blades on a plow)."

Four years later, in the fall election of 1965, Dr. Scott was elected as an alderman.

His future in politics was firmly planted in Centennial year when he polled a record number of votes to win election as Belleville's mayor.

Successful Living

Those with Hang-ups Hang on to Fags

By DORIS CLARK

More men than women quit smoking. This is the report of a research survey sponsored by the U.S. Public Health Service. Between 1965 and 1970 there was a 10 per cent drop in male smokers but less than four per cent drop for the gals.

There are other things too. During the past 13 years smoking has increased among women while it has declined among men. And the women who do quit suffer a relapse rate about 25 per cent higher than men.

Why? For one thing, they are not being reached as effectively with the doomsday news about tobacco. But even when they do hear the news they choose to ignore it.

It seems women smoke for different reasons from men. Cigarettes are a gesture of independence — still. Psychiatrists say the ladies use cigarettes to handle their anger and their role-confusion.

It is not that a cigarette eliminates anger. But it may keep a frustrated woman from venting her rage on someone else with a tongue lashing or worse.

I still say the habit is cultivated at the serious risk of health and a shorter life. Ladies — why don't you take up target practice or nail hammering or piano playing when you feel like blowing a fuse?

Dear Doris: My husband and I are about to have our second child.

I have been told by several sources that it was both proper and improper to send out birth announcements for a second child. — Set Me Straight

Dear Set: Maybe some think it isn't quite decent to boast about it if you get more than one. Or that, like a second marriage, you don't put on as big a show as the first time.

Certainly send out announcements. If your friends care about you, they want to know about all Little Home Improvements.

Dear Doris: I read your column every day, and enjoy it, but I am sick and tired of the diet fads, especially the one in yesterday's paper, "Trying to Diet". She says she has even tried to commit suicide because she is fat. So my letter is directed to her.

I am 46 years old and was thin until eight years ago, when I suddenly began to get fat, and soon weighed 182 pounds which I weigh today. I feel fine and I am proud of my fat.

I say, with a specialist from Montreal, and I quote: "Fat is beautiful".

Nuts to people who diet! I think they all have a screw loose in their heads. — Fat and Happy

Dear Fat: Then there are a good many loose screws.

Perhaps your Montreal doctor has wrestled with some of the over-zealous dieters who get obsessed with losing weight until a screw or two does come loose. A good argument for what the Greeks used to urge: Moderation in all things. Which has much to be said for it.

If you enjoy being fat, o.k. Statistics tell us the thin ones generally live longer.

Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 10 cents and a large six-cent-stamped, self - addressed envelope, unless otherwise specified.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Father: "I really shouldn't take the afternoon off, but I'll try to get home early and take Johnny off your hands. We'll go for a hike."

Mother: "I'm glad you can give him some special attention. He seems to demand so much more since the baby came."

When a new baby arrives, an older child needs special attention and reassurance that you are not forgetting him. However, the attention does not have to be in the form of inconvenient outings. Talking with him, making plans with him, even working together will serve the same purpose.

Father: "Johnny, let's clean up the basement this evening. I think we could paint the store room and make it into a good gym for you and your friends. Mother has an old mattress that would make a good tumbling mat."

Head Lettuce Salads Popular

By MARY MOORE

Spring is here but the earliest of our fresh fruits and vegetables are not. So we must keep up our vigilant search for winter foods that provide vitamins and minerals.

Fresh crisp head lettuce heads the list in availability and popularity and is attractive in its simplicity.

Remove the outside dark green leaves, wash and dry them and use them shredded in tossed salads for they are high in chlorophyll, iron and vitamin A.

The firm head can be cut into wedges or slices and served with a variety of dressings. I am giving you three of my favorites which I hope will make head lettuce salads popular with your crowd.

Annual Reports Given by Marysville Group

MARYSVILLE — On Tuesday the Marysville CWL held a meeting in Holy Name of Mary School. Mrs. Don McLaren president opened the meeting.

Brief reports of the work accomplished during the past year were given by the chairmen of the standing committees.

A letter of thanks was read from Mrs. Thomas Brown of Kingston on receiving a completed afghan and explaining the continued need of these in the missions home and overseas. The members voted in favor of sending a contribution to 'Holy Fund', to help the needy in the Diocese. Mrs. Jack Murphy will have a quilting this week. A contribution was also given to Mrs. Leo McAlpine to assist in the 4-H work.

A newsletter from the Diocesan CWL was read regarding the convention to be held in Belleville May 29 and 30, the theme of the convention "Study of the Christian Family" should be of interest to all. As many as possible were asked to attend.

Mrs. Francis Callaghan will be making arrangements for the dinner meeting in May, all members wishing to attend were asked to contact her.

Mrs. John Whalen chairman of the nominating committee presented the slate of officers for the coming year as follows: past president, Mrs. Don McLaren; president, Mrs. Fred Farrell; 1st vice-pres., Mrs. Francis Callaghan; 2nd vice-pres., Mrs. Kenneth Power; 3rd vice-pres., Mrs. John Whalen; secretary, Mrs. Francis Maloney, and treasurer, Mrs. John Roach.

Ill-fitting Shoes Cause Foot Defects

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: When I read the plea from the girl who was miserable because she wore a size nine shoe, I decided to sit down and write the letter I've written in my head 40 times. I hope every parent sees this and takes it to heart.

Did you know that nine babies out of ten are born with perfect feet, but by the time they reach ten years of age, the feet of nearly half of these children are defective? When the feet of high school students were checked in twenty cities, it was learned that over 80 per cent of the students had foot problems.

The reason: shoes that did not fit properly — usually they were too small. Mothers allow themselves to be talked into buying shoes the kids like regardless of how they feel. Then there are the unfortunate children who must wear cast-off shoes, purchased to fit someone else's feet. These can be real cripplers.

Please, Ann, tell your readers that it is the responsibility of parents to see to it their children go into adulthood with healthy, normal feet. All it takes is shoes that fit. — TOO LATE FOR ME.

* * *

DEAR TOO LATE: Thanks for the message. I hope the shoe stylists read it as well as the parents. I hate to think of how many women are suffering today with bunions and other deformities caused by those miserable four-inch spike heels with pointed toes. That crazy style went out just in time to save Yours Truly from crutches. The lower, broader heels are much better, not only for the feet but for the back.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 17 and very mixed up. I've dated loads of guys and thought I was in love at least a dozen times. Now I'm sure it was just infatuation because five months ago I met a boy who turned me on like nobody else. The feeling was mutual and we hit it off great. On the third date we had an argument. He used some pretty rough language and I slammed the door in his face. I saw him at school the next day and we made up. We've seen each other a lot since then but it seems as though we can't be together for more than 30 minutes before we get into a fight. Last week we broke up three times.

I have tried to forget this clown and get interested in some one else but it won't work. They say true love never runs smooth. Can this be true love? — BILLINGS BLUES.

DEAR BILLINGS: Some people enjoy fighting because it feels so good when they make up. It's amazing how many people can't get along with each other, but can't get along without each other. I don't call it love, but they do, and often they get married — and fight for 40 years.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My sister and I were raised by a wonderful aunt. For years this aunt and her darling husband were like parents to us. Ten months ago, after 39 years of a beautiful marriage, Uncle Jim died.

Would it be appropriate to send our aunt a card or flowers on her wedding anniversary? It seems wrong to ignore the day. We now live in a distant city and can't take her to dinner. Please advise. — WANT TO KNOW.

DEAR W.T.K.: Don't send an anniversary card to commemorate a union which has been terminated by death. Instead, send her flowers with a note saying, "We are thinking of you on this day" — or a letter to that effect.

READ CWL

READ — Mrs. J. Jordan presided for the annual meeting of Read CWL held in St. Mary's School last Tuesday.

A number of items were discussed during lunch and these included the decision to send a donation to the League of the Sacred Heart; also a letter was read from Mrs. B. O'Connor pertaining to the Development and Hope Fund for which a collection was taken at the close of the meeting. Funds to be used for some worthy cause in the diocese, mainly education.

The dinner meeting of the group will be held at Sun Lock Gardens on June 16 and all members who plan to attend this dinner are asked to inform the convenors. Plans for a tea and bazaar to be held in May were discussed and convenors of the various committees gave their reports. And it was noted from these reports that a great deal had been accomplished during the past year. Mrs. Jordan also reminded members to plan to attend the convention in Belleville in May.

All enjoyed coffee and dessert at the close.

MR. AND MRS. ROY J. HOSKIN

Hoskin — MacMillan

Roslin United Church was the setting for the recent wedding ceremony performed by Rev. L. Bigby, when Heather Sandra MacMillan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James MacMillan, White Lake, Ontario was united in marriage to Roy John Hoskin, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Hoskin of Plainfield. Mrs. M. Harrison played the wedding music and accompanied the soloist Miss Corrie Avery.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of white silk moire with nylon overskirt and sweeping chapel train. A shoulder length veil of silk nylon was caught to a satin crown headdress adorned with white satin leaves and sequins. She carried a prayer book crested with shrimp and mauve roses with cascading streamers.

Maid of honor Miss Lorna MacMillan and the bridesmaid Miss Sylvia Parkinson were identically attired in floor length mauve crepe dresses trimmed with mauve and white daisies and each carried a bouquet of shrimp colored roses. Miss Tracey Daunter as flower girl wore an empire styled gown of mauve crepe trimmed with mauve and white daisies and carried a prayer book crested with flowers identical to the bride's.

A reception was held in the Plainfield Women's Institute hall where the bride's mother received the guests wearing a turquoise blue lace coat and dress ensemble with black accessories and a corsage of blue tinted roses mingled with lily-of-the-valley. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a rose crimplene dress with matching jacket trimmed with white, beige accessories and a corsage of pink roses and lily-of-the-valley.

For the wedding trip to New York State, the bride chose a beige crepe dress with vest coat of brown tweed, brown accessories and a corsage of shrimp shade roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Hoskin will reside in Belleville.

Nova Scotia's High Fashion Designer Still Does Her Own Cutting

HALIFAX (CP)—Vasilka, perhaps Nova Scotia's best-known high fashion designer, is so busy that she employs three seamstresses to sew the clothes she designs for her customer.

However, she still does her own cutting.

The wife of Chris Wilson, a clarinetist with the Atlantic Symphony Orchestra, Vasilka went into fashion designing in Toronto in 1967, the same year she and her husband moved to Halifax.

She sold outright to boutiques in Toronto, but after the move here stopped designing for Ontario stores because "long-distance selling just doesn't work in a small business."

Last year she sold to Maritime boutiques but this year she is designing for individuals. "I rely on word-of-mouth advertising, I have a lot of customers."

Vasilka grew up in an atmosphere of designing and sewing. Her parents were Bulgarian and she is a first-generation Canadian, born in Toronto.

She started making her own clothes at the age of 10—"I didn't like what my mother was making for me"—progressed to Vogue patterns at 12, began altering them, and by the time she was 15 was designing, cutting and making her own clothes.

Before going full-time into designing, she taught school for six years.

Vasilka's clientele ranges from the working girl who wants a "good" dress through the wealthier woman who wants high-quality fashion and the older woman who can't find anything to wear in the stores.

"I am phasing out my cheaper materials—it is much more fun and rewarding to work with people who know and want quality clothing," she said.

She buys imported fabrics costing up to $20 a yard.

"I try to help my clients. We discuss fabrics, the type of design wanted, and I show them materials in their price range. Sometimes I have to impose my judgment on someone who is going to make an expensive mistake."

She said the newest thing in fashion right now is the return to the classical look.

"Hot pants are fine, but not everyone can wear them. What I am designing for a lot of women are little jumpsuit-type hot pants of a stretchy material with a matching skirt to snap around when they go out."

She wishes women would forget their shape and size and wear what they like and be happy.

"So much is said about wear this and that, to disguise your figure faults, yet when you are finished, it is not you in that dress, it's just a body in camouflage."

Annual Reports Given at St. Joseph's CWL

The monthly meeting of St. Joseph's Parish Council was held in the Parish Hall.

Annual reports were given by conveners of the standing committees — proving again that this has been a pleasant and successful year.

The annual Diocesan CWL convention is to be held in Belleville this year and hosted by St. Joseph's. It will take place in late May at the Sun Valley Motel. Convener, Mrs. W. Buckley, gave her report and preparations are well under way.

The president, Mrs. Helena Clarke, reminded members to save their used household articles for the sale to be held early in May.

Mrs. A. Eves, chairman of the nominating committee, presented the new slate of officers. The incoming president is Mrs. A. Eves; first vice-president, Mrs. E. J. Barrett; second vice-president, Mrs. R. Park; third vice-president, Mrs. R. Nagodé; recording secretary, Mrs. D. A. Hurley; corresponding secretary, Mrs. C. Murphy; treasurer, Mrs. O. J. Kruger.

The new officers were installed by the director Rt. Rev. J. Carley, who presented Mrs. Eves with the president's gavel.

Mrs. Helena Clarke presented Mrs. Eves with the president's pin and thanked members for their support during her two year term of office.

The evening closed with an enjoyable social hour.

It was also noted the Senior Citizens' convention is to be held in Toronto August 24, 25 and president Kathleen Adams and treasurer Elsie Jackson will attend as delegates.

Type-castings Too Prevalent

OTTAWA (CP) — "The male does, and the female is done to."

That message is driven into Canadian children enough to help create psychologically crippled women that our society regards as normal, a study released Thursday by the royal commission on the status of women maintains.

The study, called Sex Role Imagery in Children: Social Origins of Mind, was prepared by Ronald D. Lambert, associate professor of sociology and psychology at the University of Waterloo.

Based on a survey of 7,500 Canadian children, it assesses how structured behavior in the home and within peer groups creates myths in the minds of young people that often result in the creation of the so-called natural role and personality of the male and the female.

The author's premise is that these type-castings have to be destroyed for women to achieve an enriched self-image.

MRS. R. MacVICAR, 6 Whitehorse Terrace, Brockville, COMES MAXI DISCOUNTING AT LOBLAWS— AND SHE COMES OUT AHEAD.

Mrs. MacVicar, who shops for four, says, "I have not been a regular Loblaws shopper in the past but lately, I do notice there's quite a big difference in Loblaws. I find now that Loblaws is cheaper than where I had been shopping and I'll be coming back—not just for the lower prices but because of the meat—we really like Loblaws meat. Actually, I don't watch prices all that closely, but my husband does, and he passes the information on to me. He was the one who got me coming to Loblaws for our meat—he likes Loblaws meat—he likes the price of Loblaws meat—and he likes the quality and variety of the meat we can get here". Asked to estimate her MAXI DISCOUNT savings in dollars per week, Mrs. MacVicar says, "We figure we're saving between $3 and $4 a week by coming to Loblaws now and we like the fact that we're saving that much on quality food; things we really enjoy eating".

Hard Year in Quebec

Grit Jalopy Shows Dents

QUEBEC (CP) — A year ago Thursday, Robert Bourassa's Liberals roared into political power in Quebec like a kid screeching into a hamburger stand in a shiny, hot new car.

A year later, the car bears the dents of several collisions and appears headed for more rough driving.

Mr. Bourassa, 37, Quebec's youngest premier ever, led the Liberals to a sweeping victory in the Quebec general election last April 29 only three months after he was chosen to succeed former premier Jean Lesage as Liberal leader.

He came to power with 72 of the 108 seats in the Quebec national assembly after a campaign in which he promised to re-start Quebec's stalled economy and create 100,000 new jobs in 1971 to reduce unemployment.

The thin, stoop-shouldered lawyer with the dark-rimmed glasses perched on his long nose presented a no-nonsense image of an efficient, competent Liberal administration that would run the province in a business-like manner, and the voters accepted it.

Since the election, however, Mr. Bourassa and his mainly-inexperienced government have had to face crisis after crisis, and serious problems still lie ahead.

The first crisis came in August with a province-wide strike by construction workers, the latest episode in a complex dispute in the construction industry which first arose almost three years ago.

Special legislation ordering an end to strikes and lockouts restored temporary order in the construction industry while the government, management and labor began attempts to work out a solution.

The construction dispute had barely quieted down, however, when the government encountered difficulties putting the medical care insurance plan into effect.

The Quebec Federation of Medical Specialists refused to agree to the terms under which its 4,000 members would participate in the plan.

Then, on Oct. 5, the most serious crisis of all began with the kidnapping of British envoy James Cross in Montreal by the terrorist Front de Liberation du Quebec.

Five days, later, Labor Minister Pierre Laporte, Mr. Bourassa's right-hand man in the cabinet, was kidnapped, bringing the crisis into the heart of the government.

The slaying of Mr. Laporte Oct. 17, the day after the Invocation of the War Measures Act to fight terrorism, struck a numbing blow at the government and left it badly shaken.

It was not until late December that the government truly recovered from the shock of the October events, but a new crisis was already at hand.

Winter brought severe unemployment to Quebec, which, vied with the Atlantic provinces for the highest jobless rate in the country.

With the help of a hurriedly-planned winter-works program of housing and road construction, the unemployment rate was kept from going even higher, but it is only now starting to decline again with the onset of spring and a resumption of economic activity.

Last month, the Bourassa government presented a budget providing for record expenditures of more than $4 billion in an all-out campaign to strengthen the economy.

English Demand Rights

MONTREAL (CP) — Over a constant background of heckling, English-Canadian speakers kept hammering at the theme of their rights in Quebec before the parliamentary committee on the constitution Tuesday night.

A contingent of about 50 young hecklers at the back of a hall in the west-end district of Notre-Dame-de-Grace enlivened the proceedings with noisy but generally good-humored comments. About 350 persons attended.

Of 10 formal briefs read to the committee, nine were from English-Canadians and most called for extension of minority language and education rights to the other provinces to match the rights the English-speaking minority enjoys in Quebec.

Some were clearly apprehensive about the future of these minority rights in Quebec.

Most of the 17 speakers from the floor were French-Canadians and a majority expressed the opinion that the federal system is worn out and Quebec should secede from Canada.

A young French-Canadian got a thorough going-over by the hecklers when he said he was proud of being a Canadian and said federalism was the best guarantee of democracy.

A formal brief from a woman identified as Mlle. Lepage reiterated the plea for minority French language and education rights in other provinces to match those of Anglophones in Quebec.

Montreal Publisher Made CRTC Member

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacques Hebert, 47, Montreal publisher and broadcaster, has been appointed a member of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, Pierre Juneau, commission chairman, announced Tuesday.

Mr. Hebert replaces Pierre Dansereau of Montreal who has resigned.

The new commission member is head of the Montreal Publishing firm Les Editions du Jour and has been a broadcaster on the CBC radio and television networks for 15 years. Mr. Hebert gives up his activity as a broadcaster as a condition of joining the CRTC.

McKeough Can't Estimate Number of New Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough faced a barrage of opposition questions on the job-creating ability of the government's five-per-cent tax rebate on machinery purchases Tuesday but would not estimate how many jobs it will provide.

Asked in the Ontario legislature by Stephen Lewis, leader of the New Democratic Party what effect the tax measure would have on jobs, Mr. McKeough replied:

"I'm not going to answer that question because I am not going to get into the numbers game."

He said Ontario wants to create 150,000 jobs to get down to an unemployment level of three per cent and the tax credit on machinery purchases, announced in his budget speech Monday, is one method to stimulate the economy.

Mr. Lewis, who was not satisfied that the government hous ing prograth announced in the throne speech would provide enough jobs, retorted:

"The throne speech was a disaster and now the budget speech is a disaster."

He said the $125 million the government expects to lose on machinery-purchase tax rebates indicates that $2,500 million was going to be spent on machinery and that a Dominion Bureau of Statistics report forecast that $2,000 million was going to be spent on equipment in Ontario this year anyway.

Vernon Singer (L—Toronto Downsview) asked whether the government plans to restrict the tax credit to machinery purchased in Canada.

Mr. McKeough said the equipment "will supply jobs wherever it goes to work" and where it comes from doesn't matter.

Mr. Singer also said machinery tends to automate plants, meaning jobs would be lost.

Mr. McKeough said the government is concerned that increased productivity can reduce jobs but if Ontario is going to be competitive in world markets its plants must be modern.

Donald Deacon (L—Toronto York Centre) said the tax credit should apply only if the machinery is purchased in Canada unless it is not available here.

"What we want is a simple, uncluttered program to get the economy rolling," replied the treasurer. "And we want to get it rolling today."

In other business:

—Royal assent was given to the amendment to the Planning Act aimed at eliminating a loophole which allowed subdividers to break up large land parcels without approval from planning authorities;

—Mr. McKeough also said that the $30 million set aside by the government for parkland in its 1971-72 budget is mainly for provincial rather than municipal purchases;

—Fernand Guidon, minister of tourism and information, said there will be an increase in advertising to encourage Americans to fish in Northwestern Ontario;

Marketing Schemes Advocated

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario farmers can't expect to get higher prices for their goods until they eliminate oversupply situations, Agriculture Minister William Stewart told the legislature Tuesday night.

He also called for more national marketing plans for various commodities. Milk, he said, can't be driven down in price because it is marketed under a national dairy council.

But if egg producers had better supply management, they would be getting 33 to 37 cents a dozen rather than the 26 cents they receive today.

Trail Bike Riders Risk Their Necks and Machines for Fun

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

For no particular reason other than good fun and maybe for the love of a thrill, a group of Quinte area men spend their weekends as motorized acrobats.

At least, that's what they look like when they're mounted on the back of their off-road motorcycles sipping over sand dunes, flying across ditches and wallowing in a mudhole. The latter provides each member of the Bayside Trail-blazers with a chance to show their real worth . . . possibly points are counted for lack of mud.

Shades of the exploits of Steve McQueen in that epic movie The Great Escape, when he attempted to jump his BMW over a fence!

Jim Hunter, vice-president of the Bayside area club, said their obstacle course is not as dangerous as it might appear to the novice. "The terrain is fairly easy, nobody ever gets really hurt. Oh, a few minor bumps and bruises, but nothing serious."

Himself an expert rider with a few tricks up his sleeve to thrill members of the club and visitors, Mr. Hunter took time out from recent Observe Trials, to relate some of the objectives of the club.

"It's a fun club for ourselves; it gives us a chance to encourage the sport." The hurly rider said most of the club members, numbering a baker's dozen, were from Belleville, Trenton, Bayside, Carrying Place and Codrington. The machines they mount for trail-blazing range in size from a small 250 cc, up to a matchless single 500 cc bike.

This week, the club becomes affiliated with the Canadian Motorcycle Association, with their trials and field trips already based on CMA rules.

Other members of the club joined in the discussion to emphasize they are very concerned with their image. "We always wor kit so we're away from residents and if someone annoys the population, we have a word with him . . . you can do your own thing because you can get away from people."

The undisclosed terrain location . . . somewhere in Hastings County . . . boasts sand dunes, mud wallows, water courses, deep and medium ditches and jump sections. Each of the machines is equipped with mufflers and lights. "They're not stripped," said the club vice-president. With most of the members providing service for their own machines, the cycles are kept in top - notch running order, able to build up good torque in lower power ranges for climbing over rough terrain.

Organized nearly four years ago, club president Wayne Cooley said it was all a matter of finding "somebody to get the ball rolling." An enthusiastic group of cycle enthusiasts and motorized acrobats, even the ladies get in the act.

Although none take part in the rough riding, we "couldn't get along without the girls at our trials . . . they provide a yeoman service at the trials and keep a small canteen on the grounds," said Mr. Cooley.

The club president said the members were worried about forthcoming snowmobile trail legislation. "We're really watching the noise this year but we cut down on the horse-play in residential areas in any case. We're not a public relations club, but we'll skirt the outside edges of fields and close fences behind us . . . it's common courtesy."

Knobby tires chew mud; sand spews in all directions as the high - clearance machines leave terra firma. Soaked to the skin, mud to the eyes, it's all sheer fun for the Bayside Trailblazers.

But when it came to the subject of newspaper reporters gleaning first - hand information from the back of one of these mechanical beasts, enthusiasm was sparked with a sense of caution. It is safe to note that speeds in this instance were lacking, all due caution exercised as 45-degree hills were undertaken.

At the end of the trials, members lounged on the grass, some tinkered with their machines, and one enterprising bog-rider was busy loading his bike into the family hearse.

Fund Goal Is $4,339 For Arthritis Society

The Quinte area chapter of the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society has announced an area campaign goal of $4,339 for 1971. At the Ontario division campaign conference, held at the Westbury Hotel, Toronto, April 17 and 18, the provincial goal for 1971 was set at $825,000.

Ian Brady, chairman of the Quinte committee, joined more than 200 Ontario volunteers at the conference. Included in the activities was a tour of the University of Toronto rheumatic disease unit, Western Hospital division.

Mr. Brady said funds raised across the province go toward research for improved methods of arthritis and rheumatism control. During their tour, volunteers were shown equipment being styled for patients with particular problems, fitted to meet individual needs. Not only was it a tour, but "the hospital staff made an effort to teach us something".

During 1970, CARS physiotherapists provided 20,793 treatments to patients and rheumatic disease units at university teaching hospitals supported by the society admitted 1,661 patients.

The Belleville clinic, operated at the Belleville General Hospital, is open for arthritic and rheumatic patients on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 6 p.m. Since the re-establishment of the Quinte committee, "our clinic has been extremely busy and almost at capacity". During the past year, 874 patients were seen at the clinic, 312 treated at home, and 220 patients were referred to the rheumatic disease units.

The Quinte committee is one of the participating agencies of the Belleville United Appeal Campaign and as such their 1971 goal of $4,339 will be raised during the 1971 United Appeal.

O'Hara Mill Visit To Be Repeated

Senior citizen club members from the Moira river watershed will again this year be invited to attend a picnic at the old O'Hara Mill northwest of Madoc—compliments of the Moira River Conservation Authority.

The O'Hara Mill picnic was initiated last year for senior residents of the authority and was so well received that members of the authority education and advisory committee have decided it was worth a repeat effort.

The date for this year's picnic has been set for June 23 and invitations will be forwarded to senior citizen clubs in Belleville, Madoc, Tweed, Foxboro and Canniftos as well as to residents at Hastings Manor.

Robert Nixon Here For Liberal Convention

Robert Nixon, leader of the opposition in the provincial parliament, will be the guest of honor at the Prince Edward - Lennox Liberal Association convention.

"At the coming meeting, Mr. Nixon will sit for a question and answer period rather than the standard speech," said Barry Young, Liberal spokesman.

The convention will be held in the Prince Charles School auditorium, Wednesday, May 5 at 8 p.m.

Candidates for the Liberal nomination are Allan Bailey, Dan Neilsen and Barry Young.

Approximately 250 voting delegates will be attending the convention as well as the 200 alternate delegates, said Mr. Young.

"This is apart from the citizens who might want to attend," Mr. Young added.

West Hill Residents Wary of Apartments

More than 300 West Hill residents bordering the Wellington Crescent playgrounds are petitioning city council to save at least part of the site to assure a safe play area for their children.

The Wellington Crescent area, which has been used as a playground for nearly 15 years, is being offered for sale by the Albert College owners and residents are alarmed that high density apartment construction could take place.

City planning director Bert Kenny told council that the area was zoned R which allowed residential construction up to high rise apartments.

Douglas Preston, Charlotte Street, as delegation spokesman, said already there were several apartment buildings in the immediate area.

The petition asked that the city purchase sufficient of the Albert College property for continued use as a playground.

Alderman Robin Jeffrey said the West Hill residents had a valid point in asking for provision of playground area and cited the situation on the East Hill where no play areas have been provided.

"It is a worry to these (West Hill) residents that their children may have no place to play," she said.

Albert College has called tenders for the sale of playground property with bids to be in by the end of April.

If the property is sold, there would have to be an application to the committee of adjustment for a land split.

Council directed that deputy city clerk Earl Dafoe enter into negotiations with Albert College with the view of purchasing some of the playground property.

Plan's Problems Straightened Out

TRENTON (Staff) — Problems with Trenton's new official plan were finally resolved here Monday and the document has been forwarded to town council for consideration.

Wrestling with objections to a change in land-use from highway commercial to R-7 residential along Dundas St. East, an earlier special meeting Friday of Trenton and Suburban Planning Board was called off when consultant Dennis Flood of Project Planners, was contacted.

The board was in doubt whether to write a list of exceptions to the new ruling into the plan itself or deal with them later when it defines zoning schedules in the area.

A list of 27 commercial premises along Dundas had been prepared Friday, but the question was raised whether it would be necessary to read other exceptions to the land use scheme into the plan.

Dennis Flood instructed the board, over the weekend, it is a zoning matter, . exceptions do not have to be included in the official plan.

Councillor Paul Tripp contended last night, by zoning some of the properties along Dundas as C-1 commercial, "it will give them more freedom than they have now." It would allow a businessman to sell his premises for any commercial use, not just its existing one.

However, Mr. Tripp speculated, if anyone wants to buy out any of these Dundas East properties for a high - rise, there is going to be a big rush to have them changed to R-7 . . . what the board had originally contemplated.

Beliveau Big Helper

Jean Beliveau picked up three assists Tuesday night in Montreal Canadiens' 6-1 romp over Minnesota North Stars to move into the lead in the National Hockey League playoff scoring race.

He now has 18 points, including 13 assists, and a one-point lead on team-mate Frank Mahovlich who was held to his 10th playoff goal.

Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks and Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer remained deadlocked in third place each with 15 points. Hull had a goal—the winner—and an assist in the Hawks' 3-2 overtime win over New York Rangers.

Rangers Get Taste of Overtime Medicine

CHICAGO (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks gave New York a taste of their own medicine Tuesday night when they edged the Rangers 3-2 in overtime to take a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven National Hockey League semi-final series.

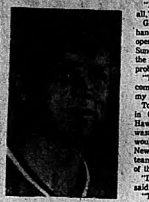
The Rangers won the opening game of the series at Chicago when they erased a 1-0 lead with less than four minutes in regulation time, then won it in overtime.

"We won a couple like that and now we know what it feels like to lose one," Emile Francis, New York general manager-coach, said after the game. "It was a case of one shot, one win.

"It was a tough one to lose and a great one to win," Francis added. "That kind of game is up for grabs."

The Hawks took a 2-0 first-period lead but the Rangers tied the score before the second period ended and the game went into overtime after a scoreless final period.

It was Chicago's Golden Jet, Bobby Hull, who notched the winner at 6:35 of the first overtime period when Pit Martin beat New York's Walt Tkaczuk for the faceoff. Martin got the puck back to Hull, who whipped it past Rangers' goaltender Ed Giacomin for his first goal in the series.



"Pit Martin made the play," Hull said. "He got the puck real clean to me off the faceoff and I just put it in in one motion.

"The shot caught Eddie flat-footed. He didn't have a chance. It went to his left, just inside the post."

Martin said Tkaczuk had given him problems with the faceoff for most of the game.

"He was beating me all

night," Martin said. "But finally in the third period I seemed to be getting my timing back.

"Bobby was patient," Martin added, "and it finally paid off.

"I made a move for it," Giacomin said of Hull's blast that won the game, "but I missed it.

"I couldn't reach it—that's all," he explained.

Giacomin was asked if his left hand, cut for five stitches in the opening game and re-opened Sunday when the Hawks beat the Rangers 7-1, gave him any problems.

"The hand feels good," Giacomin said. "It didn't hamper my play any."

Tony Esposito, who has been in Chicago's net for all nine Hawk playoff games, said he wasn't sure if the overtime win would help his club's play in New York Thursday when the teams meet for the sixth game of the series.

"I can't really say," Esposito said. "It's a funny situation.

"They'll be giving—but we'll be giving too," he added. "I'll just hope for the best."

Esposito straightened things out on the Rangers' tying goal that was awarded to Rod Seiling but which some observers felt should have been credited to Tkaczuk.

Seiling's goal was his first in the playoffs and climaxed a New York comeback. Defenceman Pat Stapleton and Chico Maki opened the scoring for the Black Hawks in the first period before Rangers' Vic Hadfield counted his eighth of the playoffs.

Tkaczuk took a shot from the side of the Chicago net and the puck ended up behind Esposito.

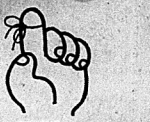
"I got a piece of it," Esposito explained. "It hit my stick and then bounced away and Seiling put it in."

The Hawks had 32 shots at Giacomin, outshooting the Rangers 7-1 in the overtime session. The Rangers tested Esposito 29 times.

Bowman Denies It

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Scotty Bowman, general manager and coach of St. Louis Blues, denied Tuesday night he has been fired or resigned from the National Hockey League team.

The 37-year-old chief of the National Hockey League Blues indicated, however, he would have more to say on the subject following talks in the next two days with Blues' general counsel, James D. Cullen.



The Regina (Sask.) Leader-Post said in a copyrighted story Monday it learned that Bowman, who coached the Blues to three NHL Stanley Cup finals, had resigned.

Basis of the resignation, the newspaper said, was a row which had developed between Bowman and Blues' owners Sidney Salomon Jr. and Sidney Salomon III

"I have a contract to honor and I intend to do so," said Bowman, who has three years left on a five-year pact with the Blues.

The Salomons declined comment on the report, but refused to say if Bowman would be with the club next season.

North Stars Game for First 50 Minutes

MONTREAL (CP) — The fifth game of the Stanley Cup semi-final Tuesday night between Montreal Canadiens and Minnesota North Stars was tightly contested for 50 minutes but then the roof fell in on the North Stars.

The Canadiens won 6-1.

The teams battled through a scoreless opening period and after 40 minutes, Montreal held a 1-0 lead on a goal by Peter Mahovlich and the North Stars held an 18-11 edge in shots on goal. Canadiens now lead the best-of-seven series 3-2, with the sixth game scheduled for Minnesota Thursday night.

"It was good hockey until the third period," said North Stars coach Jackie Gordon. "We had a letdown . . .

And that was putting it mildly.

Guy Lapointe scored at 1:14 of the third period to put the Canadiens ahead 2-0, but 25 seconds later Danny Grant scored for Minnesota to put them right back into contention.

At 10:10, Peter Mahovlich scored his second goal of the game and fifth of the playoffs, tipping in Lapointe's shot from the point.

At 12:50 John Ferguson scored for Montreal. Then Frank Mahovlich notched his 10th goal of the playoffs at 13:41 and 54 seconds later Yvan Cournoyer rounded out the Canadiens' scoring splurge with his fifth goal of the playoffs.

"We got a goal back 26 seconds after they went ahead 2-0 in the third and then we flattened out," Gordon said.

"I think the key to our troubles was the chances we missed early in the game—that bothered us.

Grant said that both he and the right winger Bill Goldsworth had great chances early in the game, "but you have to give credit to Ken Dryden, he kept that puck out."

Dryden, the former All-American at Cornell, who was the key factor in Canadiens' upset win over Boston Bruins in the quarter-finals faced a total of 27 Minnesota shots.

He stymied Jude Drouin, Bobby Rousseau and Bill Goldsworthy in the first period after they each had worked their way free of Montreal defenders.

He also made good stops on shots by Lou Nanne, Drouin and Rousseau in the second period.

One of Dryden's saves on Drouin resulted in an ugly, red welt on the goaltender's right shoulder.

"It just caught me up here, where you don't really have much protection," said Dryden, pointing to the spot.

Dryden also said he was not really ready on Grant's goal.

"I thought Drouin had lost the puck and I was surprised to see Grant get it."

Grant, a former Canadien, took Drouin's centering pass and fired the puck past Dryden from the lip of the crease.

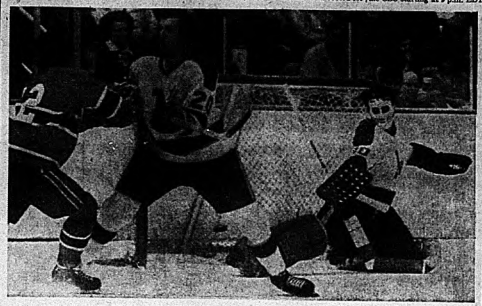
"We played a little tighter tonight. In the first two games we lost, we gave them power-play goals early.



"We skated and forechecked and when we are doing that, we usually play well.

Jean Beliveau set a record for most assists in the playoffs with his three assists in the final period, bringing his total to 94.

His three assists also tied an NHL mark held by several different players.

Canadiens' left winger John Ferguson was taken to hospital for overnight observation as a result of a sprained thigh muscle and will be examined today to determine his availability for the sixth game Thursday night in Minnesota.

The game will be televised on the CBC starting at 9 p.m. EDT.

Kicked Out

Minnesota North Stars' goalie Cesare Maniago kicks away puck as defenceman Tom Reid (20) holds off Montreal Canadiens' Yvan Cournoyer in fourth game of NHL semi-final playoff series, won 5-2 Sunday by Minnesota. Montreal currently leads the best-of-seven series 3-2. (AP Photo)

Aaron Likes to Save Big Moments for Wins

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Records are made to be broken but, winning Hank Aaron and Willie Stargell, is the name of the game.

"I was looking forward to hitting it in a winning game," said Aaron after becoming the third player in baseball history to hit 600 home runs. Atlanta Braves chowever, lost to San Francisco Giants 6-5 on Willie Mays' 10th-inning single Tuesday night.

"So what did it get me?" asked Stargell after belting his 11th home run of the season in Pittsburgh Pirates' 7-5 loss to Los Angeles Dodgers, wiped out the April record of 10 set in 1956 by Frank Robinson of Baltimore Orioles and matched last year by Cincinnati Reds' Tony Perez. "I'd rather have won."

Elsewhere in the National League Tuesday, New York Mets edged St. Louis Cardinals 2-1, Cincinnati trounced San Diego Padres 6-1, Houston Astros nipped Philadelphia Phillies 1-0 and the Montreal Expos-Chicago Cubs game was called off due to cold and wet grounds.

HANK AARON

Aaron, whose 600 homers trails only Babe Ruth's 714 and Mays' 653, started his memorable evening with a run-scoring double in the first inning. It was his 542nd and tied him for eighth place on the all-time list with Harry Heilman.

The big home run came in the third inning on the first pitch from Gaylord Perry following Ralph Garr's infield single. The towering drive carried an estimated 350 feet.

"I knew the moment I hit it was gone."

The 37-year-old Aaron isn't thinking about 700, though. "My next goal," he said, "is to hit the next one.

"If I get on a hot streak, the home runs will come."

Mays' game-winning hit followed singles by Hal Lanier and Chris Speier.

Willie McCovey erased Atlanta's lead with a fifth-inning homer and then put the Giants in front with a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

The Dodgers wiped out a 3-0 Pittsburgh lead with four runs in the seventh, including Jim Lefebvre's two-run single, and added three more in the eighth, with Manny Mota contributing a two-run double.

The Mets snapped Steve Carlton's four-game winning streak Tuesday. They pushed across two runs off the Cardinal lefty in the third and Jerry Koosman, with relief help from Ken Sanderlin and Danny Frisella, posted his first victory.

Joe Torre of the Cards got three singles and stretched his hitting streak to 21 games.

Cincinnati's Gary Nolan needed help from Clay Carroll in the eighth but also got his first triumph.

The Reds scored twice in their half of the first inning to overcome a 1-0 Padres' lead on Lee May's RBI single and a sacrifice fly by Tommy Helms. Johnny Bench stole home and Helms scored on a delayed double steal in the third and Pete Rose snapped an 0-for-14 slump with a run-scoring single in the eighth.

Curt Quits Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Curt Flood has quit baseball again.

The once-great player who was talked out of retirement while his $3.1-million suit against baseball was pending, left Washington Senators unexpectedly Tuesday and was reported en route to Europe.

Short, manager Ted Williams and his team-mates said Flood's departure was caused primarily by personal problems and not the poor spring he's had in a baseball uniform.

Flood quit baseball in 1969 when he was traded from St. Louis Cardinals, for whom he played 12 seasons, to Philadelphia Phillies. He refused to report.

He sat out the 1970 season in Copenhagen, Denmark, while suing baseball over its reserve clause which binds a player to one club for life or until he's traded.

Flood had a lifetime average of .293, with 1,854 hits, in 12 years with the Cardinals. He was hitting .200 with seven hits in 35 times at bat in 13 games with Washington this season.

CURT FLOOD

Indians Cut Off At Pass

Ray Lamb, who works occasionally as a movie extra when he's not pitching for a living, made his first major league start Tuesday night as a stand-in for Cleveland Indian ace McDowell . . . and upstaged California Angels for eight innings.

But Lamb left the scene in the ninth and his own back-up men took a beating as the Angels rallied for two runs and a 2-1 victory that stretched the Indians' winless string to five games.

In other American League games, Baltimore Orioles trimmed Oakland Athletics 6-2, Washington Senators blanked Minnesota Twins 2-0, Milwaukee Brewers stopped Boston Red Sox 4-2, Kansas City Royals whipped Detroit Tigers 8-1 and New York Yankees edged Chicago White Sox 4-3 in 12 innings.

Lamb, a 26-year-old right-hander who resides in Glendale, Calif., and has appeared in several Hollywood films, pitched against the Angels as a last-minute replacement after Indians manager Alvin Dark decided to give McDowell an extra day of rest.

Used exclusively in relief during two seasons with Los Angeles Dodgers, he made the most of his initial start, scattering three hits and nursing a 1-0 lead through the eighth.

But Dark yanked him after Alex Johnson singled with one out in the ninth. Veteran Camilo Pascual came out of the bullpen and was rocked by Tony Conigliaro's double before giving way to Steve Mingori, who walked Jim Fregosi intentionally to fill the bases.

Chuck Machemehl became the fourth Cleveland pitcher in the inning and pinch-hitter John Stephenson delivered the tying run with a sacrifice fly, Conigliaro taking third after the catch. He scored the game-winner on Ken McMullen's single.

Newfies Even Set

GALT (CP) — Grand Falls Cataracts squared the best-of-five Allan Cup eastern finals at two games each Tuesday night with a 3-1 victory over Galt Hornets.

The fifth game will be played here Thursday night, with the winner meeting Calgary Stampeders for the Canadian senior hockey championship.

Galt received some bad news after the game when Ron Herbert, their 28-year-old defenceman who led the team in scoring championship and was named the league's most valuable player, went to hospital with a possible separated left shoulder.

He was injured in the third period.

Jim Dowe, 27, of Grand Falls, was also injured in the third period. About 10 minutes before he fired the clinching goal into the empty net, he suffered a broken nose when accidentally struck by a stick.

A pair of early goals and some outstanding goaltending by Jean Guy Morrissette led the Cataracts to their win before 2,700 fans. Morrissette stopped 43 shots, including a third-period penalty shot.

First-period goals by Al Dwyer and Alex Faulkner, a former National Hockey League centre with Detroit Red Wings, were all Grand Falls needed.

Baby Hawks One Win Shy

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — St. Catharines Black Hawks moved to within one victory of the championship of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A league Tuesday by defeating Toronto Marlboros 6-4 to take a 3-0 lead in the best-of-seven final.

The fourth game is scheduled for Toronto tonight.

Quinte Runners Offset Picton Ace with Four of A Kind

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

TRENTON — As any poker shark can tell you, the best way to handle an ace is with four of a kind and Quinte Secondary School worked this strategy to perfection in the annual Belleville - to - Trenton relay race yesterday.

Quinte's balanced foursome topped the field of 20 entries including teams from Peterborough, Campbellford and Cobourg.

Prince Edward Collegiate, the defending champion for the last two years was anchored by premier area distance runner Paul Cory, winner of the 1500 and 3000 metre COSSA championships in 1970.

"We knew that we had to build a lead before the final lap if we had any hopes of winning," explained Quinte coach Larry Mills.

A trio of grade 11 classmates looked after building that lead for the Belleville school. Quinte's Roger Ray was in third place at the first exchange after Moira's Dave Grant had blistered his way to a possible record time of 15 minutes flat for the first lap.

Grant's record cannot be established until the distance on the first lap is accurately measured. The construction of the new Dundas Street Bridge had forced a slight change in the opening leg, the shortest of the four in the 12-mile course.

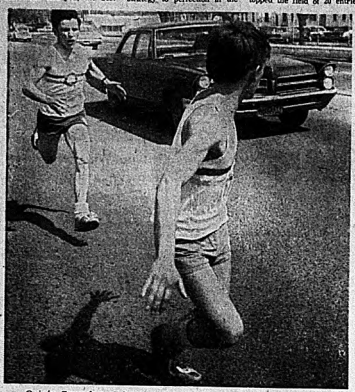
Ron Bell gave Quinte a 100-yard lead at the second exchange point at Bayside School and third place runner Gerard Farrell lengthened the distance to 600 yards at CFB Trenton, where the final pass was made.

"No, I didn't think that we had it won, even with the big lead," admitted anchorman Jim Farrell, "in fact I thought for a while that he might catch up, but the rest of the guys were all yelling encouragement when we went through Trenton and that seemed to pick me up."

The grade 13 Quinte student turned in an outstanding time of 19.02 for the final leg, eight-tenths of a second faster than Cory had covered the distance in 1970. However, his performance was somewhat overshadowed by the Picton ace, who chopped over a full minute off his time from last year.

Despite a painful case of poison oak picked up in training, Cory covered the final leg in 18.08 seconds reducing the Quinte lead from 600 yards to about 60 at the finish.

"I picked up a 'stitch' in my side part way through the race," said Cory, "and when I slowed down my breathing to try and get rid of it, I think that it slowed my pace a little. By the time I ran it out I just couldn't catch him.



Picton's team, which included Chris Conder, Larry Ferguson and Cory from last year's winners as well as newcomer Bob Revoy, finished with a time of 1:10:03 while Trenton's foursome of David Thompson, Bruce Lowrey, Bart Bourassa and Grant Martin placed third.

Perhaps the most amazing performance came from an entry from King George Public School which finished tenth, bettering the times of ten of the secondary school entries.

The team was composed of Ron Scott, Paul Champagne and Joe Carroll, all grade eight students at King George, along with John Sheppard, a grade nine Quinte runner.

Peterborough Track Club finished in fourth spot, while rounding out the top ten were Centennial, Campbellford, Cobourg East, BCI, Moira and King George.

Quinte's time was well off the 1.05:44 record set in 1969 by Picton, but the runners were hampered by a head wind as well as the possibly longer distance. It was the fourth time that the event had been held with Trenton winning the first two races to mark the first time that a Belleville team has captured the event. Trenton, which placed third this time, had won the race the first two years, while the runners-up from Picton had been the 1969-70 champions.

Quinte Secondary School anchorman Jim Farrell takes the pass from brother Gerard to begin the final leg of the Belleville to Trenton rally race, yesterday. Farrell withstood a driving finish by Prince Edward's Paul Cory as Quinte upset the Picton school, which had won the event the past two years.

Roger Ray, Ron Bell, Gerard and Jim Farrell all had a hand in Quinte Secondary's win in the Belleville to Trenton relay race, Tuesday. The team, which includes three grade 11 students, covered the 12-mile distance in a time of 1:09:47

New Coroner System Recommended for Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — A wide-ranging report advocating a new coroner system in Ontario was tabled in the Legislature Tuesday by Attorney-General Allan Lawrence.

The report, prepared by the Ontario law reform commission, makes a series of recommendations dealing with constitutional matters, procedural inquiries into deaths and the structure and function of the current coroner system.

Among its major recommendations is the repeal of the Coroner's Act to implement new proposals, restriction of a coroner's power over witnesses and a provision that would allow coroners to call on expert testimony.

The commission also dealt with a number of recommendations of the royal commission into civil rights.

After considering the civil rights proposals, the law reform commission recommended that all witnesses have the right to legal counsel and no person charged with a criminal offence arising from a death be compelled to testify at an inquiry.

The commission also advocated establishment of a coroners' council similar to the judicial council governing judges and proposed that a coroners' code of ethics be set out.

Tabling the 307-page report, Mr. Lawrence said the government does not intend to take any action on the recommendations this session.

"We expect that further constructive comment may be forthcoming in the light of these recommendations so that they may be considered by the government over the next few months in full detail.

Studying the coroner system before chairman H. Allan Leal, a Toronto lawyer, were former Supreme Court justice, Chief Justice James C. McRuer, and lawyers Richard A. Bell, W. Gibbons Gray and William R. Poole.

Mr. Lawrence said that in addition to implementing the recommendations, Ontario would have to replace the system of inquests with a system of public inquiries into deaths.

He told the legislature that because coroners' courts may be considered a common-law criminal courts, it is likely that matters of inquest procedure would come under federal rather than provincial jurisdiction.

"If this view is correct, all of the existing procedural sections of the Coroners Act are ultra vires (unconstitutional)," it would be any attempt by the legislature to implement the improvements in inquest procedure recommended by the royal commission inquiry into civil rights. . ."

The commission sought to bring inquests under provincial jurisdiction by recommending repeal by the legislature of common-law provisions of the act that relate to coroners or the coroner system.

The effect of the repeal would be to do away with the coroner's "court of criminal record," a move that the province is entitled to make under the British North America Act.

The new form of inquiry would not relate to criminal law but to such matters as public safety and health or other matters that fall within the province's jurisdiction.

Normally, when an inquest jury returns a verdict alleging murder or manslaughter, the coroner is directed to initiate criminal proceedings.

But under the new form of public inquiry proposed by the commission, the inquest will not direct its procedures at arriving at such verdicts.

The commission also recommended that powers of a coroner over witnesses be curtailed.

If a witness failed to attend an inquest, refused to answer a question or do other things considered in contempt, the commission recommended that the coroner get a Supreme Court order forcing the witness to comply.

The commission also proposed that no person charged with a criminal offence arising out of a death be compelled to testify. But Mr. Lawrence said that a criminal charge could be withheld to enable the inquest as a means of criminal investigation.

The commission held that should such a course be taken, any person refusing to testify would be entitled to a Supreme Court hearing and that in a proper case the court would refuse to make any order for punishment.

The report contains a number of recommendations designed to strengthen the supervisory and disciplinary aspects of the coroner system.

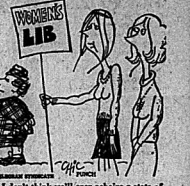
One of these calls for establishment of a coroner's council to function in an advisory capacity in matters of appointment, discipline and termination of appointment of coroners.

One of the recommendations of the commission would require a coroner to retire at the age of 70.

Another recommendation proposed that the chief officer of the new system be called the chief coroner of the province and have more responsibilities than now conferred on the supervising coroners. The officer should be a coroner without responsibility for conducting inquests.

A deputy chief coroner also was proposed along with a system of regional coroners who would provide supervision in populous districts.

Further recommendations were made concerning appointments of coroners with a province-wide jurisdiction and others dealt with the limitations of coroners' jurisdictions by municipal or county boundaries.



The commission also recommended that the attorney-general have power to appoint commissioners in special cases and to permit persons with specialized knowledge to sit with him.

An example of this would be to have a number of engineers available to assist a coroner investigating a bridge collapse or airplane disaster.

Other recommendations concerned a coroner's power of seizure and authority to delegate powers of seizure and entry to a police officer or physician.

The commission further recommended that public discussions or disclosure of matters that came before a coroner in his official capacity be limited — but through a coroner's code of ethics rather than by legislation.

Ontario Will Retain Succession Duties

TORONTO (CP) — Although it is reducing its role in estate taxation, the government doesn't want to get out of the field altogether, Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough said Tuesday.

He was replying in the Ontario legislature to Vernon Singer (L—Toronto Downsview.)

Mr. Keough said there would be revenue losses if it left the succession-duties field entirely, and that Ontario wants to maintain its presence there because of its relevance to capital-gains taxation.

GLIMPSES OF A CITY THAT WAS by Michael Filey

This record of Toronto begins around 1860 because it was about that time that photographs were first taken in the city. The photographs in this book portray scenes of street and public life; they show what it was like living in Toronto from 1860 - 1940. Especially striking are the early photographs of downtown Toronto and the aftermath of the fire of 1904.

THE VICTORIAN COLLECTOR'S HANDBOOK BY Charles Platte Woodhouse.

Increasing admiration for Victoriana, emulation of Victorian fashions and enthusiastic collecting of objects surviving from the Victorian age have led to a cult. In his book Mr. Woodhouse guides the collector to choose only what is worthy and attractive and at reasonable prices. Outstanding Victorian objects of importance and value are frequently discovered in surprising places. There are very few homes that do not display at least one Victorian heirloom handed down in the family.

THE BRITISH SAILOR by Peter Kemp

There is a saying in the Navy that there is no such thing as a bad sailor, only bad officers. This book describes the life of the British sailor from the times of Queen Elizabeth I to Queen Elizabeth II. The one would not recognize the other in terms of conditions of employment in his naval life. Yet, there remain many links which bind the two together. There are the skills of the seaman, learned and inherited through the ages and the long tradition of service to the national belief that the greatness of Britain is founded upon the seas.

STILL THE REAL LAKELAND by A. H. Griffin

This is a book about the English Lake District that looks back to quieter, less crowded days. Undoubtedly Lakeland is changing — this is the way of life — and in places, some of the old flavor has disappeared, but the message in this book is that the best is by no means lost and will always be there. The author tells us the real Lakeland is still to be found by those with the enterprise and energy to seek it out, for much of it is hidden and — unfortunately — beyond the easy reach of the casual motorist speeding along the new highways.

AN ORKNEY TAPESTRY by George Mackay Brown

George Mackay Brown is one of Scotland's most distinguished poets and short story writers and in his book sees Orkney through a poet's eye. Orkney lies between the Atlantic and the North Sea — green, well cultivated islands famous among naturalists for their birds and flowers and among archaeologists for a wealth of ancient stones. Its culture has more affinities with that of Scandinavia than Scotland.

PORTRAIT OF LIVERPOOL by Howard Channon

We all know that Liverpool produced the Beatles, but how much more there is to this dramatic city where two great cathedrals of the twentieth century look out above seven miles of bustling waterfront to the hilltops of Wales. Liverpool is the source of football pools but has one of Britain's biggest libraries. The book sails the reader up the Mersey where tankers have taken the place of luxury liners. This is an affectionate book on a great city but with a critical look as well.

Liberal Sees Labor Bill Ineffectual

OTTAWA (CP) — Steve Otto, the government's No. 1 maverick back-bencher, was at it again Tuesday, dubbing all opposition speakers in criticizing Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey's bill to amend the Canada Labor Standards) Code.

It wasn't that the member from York East didn't like the provisions of the bill itself, which affects 536,000 workers in companies under federal jurisdictions.

He praised measures that would:

—Increase the federal minimum wage to $1.75 an hour from $1.65;

—Require equal wages for female workers doing work requiring similar skills and effort as their male counterparts;

—Assure female workers of 17 weeks maternity leave;

—Forbid employers to dismiss workers because their wages had been garnisheed;

—Make employers give between eight and 16 weeks notice for large-scale layoffs;

—Require two weeks dismissal notice to employees with three months service and two weeks severance pay for those with five years service, escalating to eight weeks for 20 years service.

But he damned the bill for not going far enough. Its provisions were little things, he said, that did not solve the vast problem of labor today.

The government has no labor policy, he said, to deal with strikes, deadheading, and other non-productive practices that characterized the old-fashioned scheme of things.

Labor and management took turns blaming each other as rounds of inflation and unemployment continued, with labor suffering when it went on strike and companies passing on increases gained to the consumer.

His answer, he said, was that when a strike was declared people would continue to work but the profits made by the corporation during the time its workers were without a contract would be axed 100 per cen.

"No one would suffer, the country would benefit, and the dispute would still be settled through negotiations."

Opposition members generally approved the bill, which was scheduled to continue in second-reading debate today.

But nearly everyone criticized particular aspects within it.

Robert McIeave (PC—Halifax-East Hants) said the clause that would allow the government to raise the minimum wage by order-in-council rather than coming to Parliament, was fraught with danger.

"This approach may put the government under a great deal of stress at certain times, probably once every four years." The reference, presumably, was to elections.

Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot) said that the government should realize that "perhaps the time that we are living in is not on pushing up he unorganized workers' wages forever."

He suggested that, to prevent inflation, perhaps some action should be taken "on the other side of the pendulum" so a government body or labor court could deal with the wages of organized labor.

John Skoberg (NDP—Moose Jaw) thought there might be a loophole in the section that would require notice for large layoffs.

The legislation requires notice only when 50 or more employees are laid off, he said, which would apparently allow employers to spread their layoffs over a longer period.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) called the $1.75 minimum wage inadequate—it would give an employee $3,600, which he said was below the poverty line established by the Economic Council of Canada.

He also regretted that it did not give the minimum wage to employees in the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) said the maternity leave provision should be made more flexible. Rather than distributing 11 weeks leave prior to birth and six weeks after, it should be left to the woman's discretion.

"There is little reason for most women to sit home and do nothing in the last 11 weeks prior to childbirth," she said.

Norman Cafik (L—Ontario) said he didn't see why the bill excludes managerial personnel from the requirement for two weeks notice of dismissal or mandatory notice for large layoffs.

"This bill is one of those extremely complex bills that cannot be readily understood by employer or employee."

Charles Turner (L—London East) said every year many industries in Canada decide to make changes in their production, and many decide to lock their doors and move to other parts of the world.

"If resistance to change on the part of employees is to be less harmful, as it must be if Canada is to achieve its full potential as an industrial power, trade unions and governments must accept responsibility for the development of policies designed to cushion the impact of change on individuals."

Debate on the bill was adjourned, and there was a brief discussion on the farm products marketing bill, now at report stage—the step before third reading.

Mr. Horner said Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson has invalidated last September's agreement among the provinces on the bill by including cattle within the commodities that would be dealt with by marketing agencies.

He said the bill now does not have the approval of the provinces, and maintained that such support should be sought before it is debated further.

Nineteen of 30 amendments to be debated at report stage are in Mr. Horner's name.

QUESTION: We want to take a holiday. My wife has bronchial asthma. Where would be a good place for her to go?

ANSWER: Arizona is a good place to go if you are leaving fairly soon. The dry air there is excellent for people who suffer from asthma. It's after the season now but in the spring months can be very pleasant. Actually, some hotels stay open during the summer, too. It does get hot but because the air is so dry, and because everything is air-conditioned, the heat isn't too oppressive. But it would be a better time to go now.

QUESTION: Is it necessary to have an international driver's licence if you want to rent a car in Europe?

ANSWER: It depends on where you want to drive. You need one for instance in Austria, Portugal, Spain or behind the Iron Curtain. But it's easy enough to get one at our office. You need an up to date driver's licence, two passport photos, and it costs $3.

QUESTION: Can you supply any information on vacationing by car in Newfoundland.

ANSWER: Although it is Canada's youngest province, Newfoundland and Labrador is one of the oldest settled regions in North America. Recent archeological evidence have revealed that the Vik-

Smallwood Minister To Resign

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood lost his eighth cabinet minister in three years Tuesday when Len Dawe announced he would leave municipal affairs after his actions while mayor of Bay Roberts were criticized in a royal commission report.

Mr. Smallwood told the legislature in accepting the resignation, effective Friday, he was shocked by the report which said Mr. Dawe and town clerk Hubert H. Mercer authorized expenditures and obtained loans without the approval of Bay Roberts' six-man council.

But the premier said there was no indication of dishonest conduct by Mr. Dawe who was "one of the most respected mayors ever in Newfoundland."

Mr. Dawe, first elected to the legislature in 1962, was mayor of the town on Conception Bay, 60 miles west of here, from 1962 until his appointment as municipal affairs minister Nov. 5, 1969.

The one-man commission—Mayor W. G. Adams of St. John's—was appointed last year after Auditor-General D. D. Fowler reported that many of the town's financial and other records for 1968-69 were missing.

Mr. Adams said in his report there was no evidence of misappropriation of public funds.

Mr. Dawe said he would resign because the report could cause political embarrassment to Mr. Smallwood and the Liberal party.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Kidneys Are Vital To Person's Health

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My sister had a severe infection six months ago. It was followed by kidney failure called uremia. She was given millions of units of penicillin and fortunately pulled through. My question is this: What is the likelihood of a recurrence? Is there anything she can do to prevent further trouble? — Mrs. H.

• • •

Comment: Your sister's problem underlines the 'act that we hear a lot these days about heart, lung and liver failure, but not so much about kidney failure. Sometimes kidneys are the forgotten organs in the body — until things go wrong.

For example, consider your sister's illness. I can only guess whether or not she is likely to have trouble in the future. That will depend upon what caused the kidney failure and uremia in the first instance.

The fact that she recovered after huge doses of penicillin indicates that the trouble began primarily as an overwhelming infection. One would guess that if the infection does not return — and the kidneys recovered completely from the first siege— it's not inevitable that she will get uremia again.

• • •

There are other causes of kidney failure, in which the broken down product of proteins in the body called urea, is not completely eliminated, backs up into the blood and causes uremic poisoning.

For example, the kidneys cannot completely eliminate the body wastes in some cases of extremely high blood pressure. In chronic kidney disease, in some cases of extreme blood loss causing shock in mechanical obstruction to urine outflow, in chronic infections affecting the kidneys or whenever there are toxic agents or poisons that can't be eliminated.

Fortunately, some patients with kidney failure can be helped by artificial kidney setups that restore the normal chemical balance in the blood and bring back kidney function.

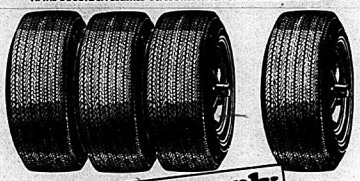
As you see, Mrs. H., your sister's future course depends upon the real nature of the uremia she had months ago. Even though she feels well now, I believe that yearly or biyearly investigations of her kidney function are in order to play safe. We are more optimistic about kidney disease than we have been in the past.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have an abnormally fast pulse. At least, I think it is. It varies from 80 to 96. I went to an internist who said I was a nervous person. Tests of my thyroid and blood pressure and heart were all normal. I am 25, married and have no children. Please tell me what to do. — Mrs. L.

• • •

Comment: I hope you will not think that I am too gruff in advising you to stop counting your pulse — as you must be doing to get such specific figures as 80 to 96. All it does is make you more and more aware of your heart, even though it is apparently a healthy one.



Like so many people who are continually taking their temperature, you are feeling your pulse instead of inserting a thermometer. Anxiety feeds on anxiety. Taking your pulse is one way to become more nervous.

My suggestion is that you take your physician's word that all tests were negative and that you are a healthier person than you think. When this happens you will be less apprehensive about the specific rate of your pulse beat. Does this make sense to you?

Papers Urged to Own Cable TV Companies

TORONTO (CP) — Newspapers should seek to own or have access to cable television outlets, a special committee reported Tuesday to the annual meeting of The Canadian Press.

The committee, under the chairmanship of Charles D'Amour of Trois-Rivieres Le Nouvelliste, was appointed at suggestion of the board of directors of the news co-operative last September to study the effects of cable television on newspapers.

Its report urged the newspaper industry to press the Canadian Radio-Television Commission and other regulatory bodies for a statement of policy on relationships between newspapers and cable television.

"Unless newspapers are able to operate cable systemse or obtain the right to use cable channels on some common-carrier basis, their place as the prime suppliers of detailed information to the public may fall to others," the report said.

'Pen' Inquiry to Probe Alleged Beatings

OTTAWA (CP) — Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Tuesday the committee of inquiry investigating the riot at Kingston penitentiary will also investigate allegations that prisoners involved in the incident were beaten by guards after they were moved to nearby Millhaven Correctional Institute.

Mr. Goyer also tabled in the Commons the terms of reference for the inquiry into the April 14-18 riot, which includes investigation to determine whether the uprising was planned in advance and, if so, whether anyone in the penitentiary service knew about it and whether any preventive action was taken.

But despite pressure from opposition members in the Commons, he said the committee's report will not be made public.

Besides the committee study, Mr. Goyer also spoke of an "investigation being carried out."

This apparently was a reference to an Ontario Provincial Police investigation that was to begin immediately at the urging of J. Desmond Morton, law professor at the University of Toronto who was a member of the citizens' committee that tried to help bring the riot to an end.

The Kingston episode left one prisoner dead, several injured and extensive damage to the penitentiary.

Frank Howard (NDP—Skeena) pushed for an inquiry to be conducted by persons outside the prisons system, perhaps by "medical practitioners."

Mr. Goyer said two of the three members of the committee are from outside the prisons system, which was a precedent.

Under the first of eight terms of reference, the inquiry commission, headed by Toronto lawyer William Swackhamer, will seek to determine the immediate cause of the disturbances.

Under the second, it will attempt to identify the ringleaders.

The commission will also investigate who was responsible for cases of bodily harm to either prisoners or staff, the extent of damage to the penitentiary and whether additional security measures should have been taken.

Members of the commission in addition to Mr. Swackhamer are W. T. McGrath, executive director of the Canadian Criminology and Corrections Association, and H. E. Popp, director of security in the penitentiary service.

The commission is to report to Mr. Goyer "as expeditiously as possible."

Sydney J. Harris Says

Controls Needed Before Use

First we invent something. Then we put it into production. Then we buy it and use it. Then, and only then, do we begin to wonder if we haven't been too heedless and hasty.

It's happening now with the snowmobile, as the latest and most dramatic example of this process, but by no means the most important. Only now, after millions have been produced and bought, are we starting to recognize and control the possible damage they can do.

If we are going to become the masters of our technology, however, and not be dominated or overwhelmed by its consequences, it is imperative that we set up a new agency to determine the "social utility" of new devices.

The new agency should have the power to determine — after the broadest public hearings — whether any invention should be permitted to go into production before its social costs and consequences have been adequately worked out.

This would slow down our rate of technological progress — which is not a bad thing in itself — and would also give us time to prepare for the environmental impact of industrial changes.

While the snowmobile is both a boon and a blessing to winter-bound citizens in many areas, it is already a blight and a menace in these same areas. It came on the market unregulated, without street registration or licensing, and has been dangerously abused by thousands of idiotic and unqualified operators.

No rules were set up, no trails laid out, no speed limits established. Snowmobiles have chased animals to exhaustion and death, have exterminated plantings of seedlings in forests, and have upset the whole ecology of wildlife and wilderness in places never before touched by human predators.

This, as I said, is only a minor example of our past indifference to the social consequences of new technology, but one we can see quite vividly. There are others, more obscure and more dangerous in the long run, which must not be allowed to proliferate before it is too late to take anything but the most drastic measures to curtail.

We have treated our future with the utmost contempt, using our world as a place to plunder, to pollute, to create massive problems for short-term gain. And we have consistently failed to calculate the social costs of these "advances" — for which we are paying, not only through the pocketbook but through the nose, eyes and lungs as well.

Two Deseronto Projects Making Good Progress

With work under way on the two projects since February, good progress is reported being made in the construction and Deseronto's new sewage treatment plant and collector sanitary sewers.

Total cost of the two projects being undertaken by the Ontario Water Resources Commission is $1.3 million.

General contractors for the sewer collector system is Keystone Contractors, 1970 Ltd. of Windsor and Ottawa, while Rulfit Grass Construction Ltd. from the Toronto area is constructing the treatment plant being erected about midtown on the shore of the Bay of Quinte.

WINDSOR, Ont. (C) — Only the formality of a telephone poll of an Ontario Hockey Association sub-committee stands between this city and a Southern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A franchise.

Bob Colvin, business manager of Detroit Junior Red Wings until late this season, said his application for a Windsor franchise has already been approved by five of last year's six SOHA entries.

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Defending champion Gary Cowan of Kitchener, led a parade of wining favorites through the second round of the North and South Amateur Golf Tournament Thursday as the name players escaped unscathed but braced themselves for today's double-round schedule.

Cowan had his second easy match, beating Len Jenard of Pawtucket, R.I., 6 and 5. A two-over-par six on the 11th hole left Cowan two over for the match.

* * *

LONDON (CP) — Heavyweight Bill Drover flies home to Montreal today assured that he can come back here anytime for a good pay night.

Outweighed but aggressive, Drover gave the fans their money's worth and stayed in the upper brackets of British Commonwealth title contenders Tuesday night as he dropped a three even close decision to Jack Bodell, Britain's No. 3 heavyweight.

* * *

The referee gave Bodell, whose 205 pounds seems four up on Drover, five rounds to the Canadian visitor's two, with three even.

Viet Cong Offers Peace to Peaceful

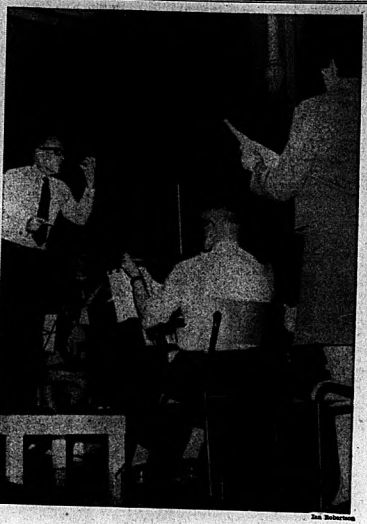
Jan Robertson

Will Fire Only On Hostile GIs

PARIS (AP) — The Viet Cong's foreign minister said today Communist command forces in Vietnam "are prepared to cease firing on American soldiers who do not undertake any hostile action against them."

The statement of Mrs. Nguyen Thi Binh at the Paris peace talks was taken to mean that the Viet Cong might be willing to accept an unconditional ceasefire with American forces in South Vietnam.

The remark appeared unobtrusively in a prepared speech Mrs. Binh delivered at the 111th session of the talks.



Both Hanoi and the Viet Cong have hitherto invariably rejected all American ceasefire proposals unless the United States first set a date for the total withdrawal of its forces from South Vietnam.

Mrs. Binh indicated indirectly that the Communist attitude may have changed.

She commented at length on a Viet Cong order of the day issued by the Communist command Monday: The order urged American soldiers to desert and also said Viet Cong forces would not fire on American units which "are opposed to the war and undertake no hostile action."

In her speech, Mrs. Binh at one point, as though possibly by oversight, omitted the phrase "opposed to the war."

Her sentence, read out of its context, thus became an unconditional proposal for a ceasefire.

Nixon to Reply To Peace Pleas

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon holds a televised news conference tonight apparently aimed at meeting the challenge of anti-war demonstrators and their attempts to bring the U.S. government to a halt.

Although much of the questioning undoubtedly will take in the Sino-American thaw and the Middle East, the session beginning at 9 p.m. EST is likely to focus on the president's feelings about militant opponents of the war who are trying to disrupt the capital.

The news conference was arranged suddenly two days ago, signalling a change in Nixon's original strategy of totally ignoring the demonstrators.

The president, who secluded himself in his Maryland mountain-top retreat last weekend during one of the largest anti-war rallies ever staged in Washington, had planned a trip which would have kept him in California next week, when the militants intend to block bridges and main commuter routes.

He is leaving for California Friday to greet men of the U.S. 1st Marine Division on their return from Vietnam, but he has curtailed the trip and is due to return here Monday, instead of next Thursday as originally planned.

The abrupt change in strategy means that he has decided to be in the capital at the climax of the anti-war rallies early next week, giving him an opportunity to react on the spot if they get out of hand.

The demonstrations being organized by the People's Coalition for Peace and Justice under the leadership of Rennie Davis, one of the Chicago Seven defendants, are aimed at forcing the president to set a date for the end of U.S. involvement in Vietnam, something he refuses to do.

The anti-war militants suffered a blow Wednesday with the arrest of Linda Bacon, a 19-year-old California blonde associated with the May Day Collective, who is being held as a material witness in the March 1 bombing of the Capitol.

The collective is one of the organizers of the civil disobedience planned for Monday and Tuesday.

Trailer Liquor Shops To Serve Vacationists

TORONTO (CP) — The Liquor Control Board of Ontario hopes to initiate an experiment in mobile liquor stores next month, J. S. Abra, general manager of the LCBO, said today.

Mr. Abra said one trailer has been constructed but not yet fitted with the special equipment it will need. It is hoped a site will be found for the trailer in time for it to open for business next month.

Mr. Abra said the term mobile should not be taken literally. It means only that the trailer may be moved to a winter vacation area from a summer-time location.

The trailer will operate from a stationary site and "will not travel the highways like an ice cream truck," he said.

The trailers would stock up to 300 brands of wine and liquor and would operate in conjunction with similar beer trailers planned by Brewers' Warehousing. It will be a one-man, self-serve operation.

French Police Wait to Hear Drugged Chinese

PARIS (AP) — French police held a drugged Chinese bodyguard today, waiting to hear his story, after taking him away from officials of the Chinese embassy who were trying to put him on a plane for Shanghai.

Chinese diplomats, who fought with airport police Wednesday in a vain attempt to get the man back, accused the French of kidnapping him and said they would pursue the matter through diplomatic channels.

The drugged man, Chung Shi-jung, was under guard in the maximum security ward of a hospital near the Paris police headquarters.

Inflation Still Threat But--

Head of Bank of Canada Expects Cut in Jobless

VANCOUVER (CP) — Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, says the nation can look forward to a good rate of economic expansion and a continued reduction in the present high level of unemployment.

But his optimistic outlook, given in a speech Wednesday to the Canadian Club of Vancouver, was coupled with a warning that the threat of inflation continues and a pointed reminder that wage and salary demands must be moderated.

Mr. Rasminsky, who uses infrequent public addresses to outline the central bank's assessment of the economy, reviewed the change in money supply, interest rates and economic growth patterns over the last 12 months.

He warned that failure to control prices and wages would bring increasing support for formal controls.

"We have to keep in mind that we are commencing this new period of economic expansion before the process of cost inflation has been brought completely under control.

"We still have a pattern of increases in wages and salaries that is considerably in excess of our long-term productivity growth and which is not consistent with the maintenance of our recent price performance.

"In the past year the consumer price index rose by about two per cent, a very low figure by international standards, but this gives an unduly favorable impression of the underlying trends in the economy.

"The kind of erosion of profits and contraction in farm income which occurred last year, and which, along with the rise in the exchange value of the Canadian dollar, was a major element in the improved price performance, is something which cannot be expected to continue.

"If we are to achieve a sustained economic expansion without the recurrence of serious inflation, there must be in the months ahead some downward adjustment in the average rate of increase in wages and salaries and other incomes.

"This is not out of the question and it may in fact be taking place to some degree."

Millhaven Ousts Four NDP MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — Four New Democrat MPs said today they were ordered to leave Millhaven penitentiary Wednesday after being told they had "no statutory right to visit."

Delegation leader Frank Howard (Skeena) told a news conference he was advised by Warden Don Clark that the order came from Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

The MPs had been in the prison for about four hours and had talked to one prisoner who evidently had been beaten.

Arnold Peters (Timiskaming) said the prisoner had filed an affidavit with Toronto lawyer Desmond Morton attesting that he had been beaten by guards.

An investigation by Ontario Provincial Police is under way.

"He was beaten," Mr. Peters said. "The question is when he was beaten, by whom and where. He told us the guards beat him."

With Mr. Howard and Mr. Peters Wednesday were John Skoberg (Moose Jaw) and John Gilbert (Toronto Broadview). Mr. Gilbert is a member of the Commons justice committee.

The visit was made "partly because of the events at Kingston penitentiary," where prisoners took control April 14-18, and partly because Mr. Goyer had indicated there would be no parliamentary examination of the incident.

Doctors Hear 3-Stage Plan

Dr. Potter Explains His Total Health Plan

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — Although Ontario needs more medical centres, Dr. Quinn Potter, Health Minister Without Portfolio, told Trenton and District Medical Association, he maintained if the province's hospitals "were to be used only for the purpose for which they were intended, there would be a sufficient number to meet our present needs and the needs of the near future."

Dr. Potter emphasized, however, that for active hospitals to be adequate, a dramatic reshaping of the entire medical care system is necessary.

He suggests a three-tiered program of progressive patient care.

Stage one would be medical attention in an active treatment hospital with a patient being shifted to a secondary convalescent hospital when the acute phase of injury or illness is past.

In the final stage, "the patient would either go to his own home or to one of two other types of institution (chronic care hospital or nursing home).

"If the disease . . . required continued hospital care, then the patient should be transferred to a chronic hospital. Patients whose disease is more or less stationary, but who do require some nursing supervision which cannot be had obtained in home, should be transferred to a nursing home."

Key to the cabinet minister's plan is that "a rehabilitation or convalescent hospital can be built and maintained for approximately half the cost of the present active treatment hospital" and expense of a home care program is about 50-65 per cent cheaper than comparable treatment in a convalescent hospital.

The situation has developed in active hospitals that "too many of the beds are now occupied by patients who should be in other less expensive types of accommodation," he stated.

"Progressive patient care is certainly not a new concept in the health field, but for one reason or another it has not been developed to any extent in this country.

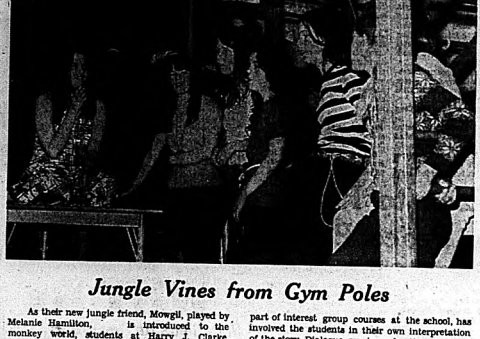
"There is considerable evidence today of a lack of over-all planning of health services, with the need for domiciliary care being met haphazardly.

In establishing a comprehensive health care program, Dr. Potter suggests the inclusion of drug costs and dental care.

"Many times illness and suffering have been prolonged because of the patient's inability to provide these necessities."

If the three-level treatment system were to be implemented, he said, the government has established guidelines for admitting patients to either a chronic hospital or a nursing home.

"Unless such precautions were taken, we would find that the whole program would collapse. We are all aware of the number of individuals in nursing homes today who are not in need of the special facilities, but who should, instead, be in a retirement home."



Dr. Potter recommends "a sorting out of patients and residents in institutions of every type to determine current and foreseeable needs in terms of appropriate levels of care."

Finding the personnel to staff and administer such a program would be difficult, he said.

One means he suggested of finding a solution would be to place greater emphasis on the training of auxiliary personnel to relieve physicians and dentists "of the tremendous burden they are now carrying."

"In instituting a total health plan, the cost, of course, would be tremendous, and there is no way it could be launched in one fell swoop" but Dr. Potter said it could, perhaps, be financed "by means of a five-year plan", with various phases established on a priority basis.

Such a plan, he said, "entails a great deal of expert planning and financing, but it must be embarked upon if the citizens of Ontario are to have a complete and comprehensive health program."

Although interest groups changed, the drama students have kept at it for the past eight months.

Miss Nancy Scott, grade eight English teacher and guidance counsellor, said "when they started the group last fall, most of the youngsters didn't have any ideas about drama except for taking a book and learning a few lines".

"This is a very formal situation."

Interest group participation welcomes parent and adult help and the result is that drama group went to Mrs. Yanover, both experienced Deirdre Warren and Mrs. Flo actresses, directors and local theatre workshop enthusiasts.

The 28 youngsters were encouraged to select their own interpretive story and build a play around the plot. What emerged might very well make Rudyard Kipling roll over in his grave.

Easily recognized as the story of Mowgli from Kipling's Jungle Book, the student's interpretation is environmental. Each youngster has developed a number of characters and learned to relate to situations presented in the basic plot they outlined for their play.

Taught by Mrs. Warren and Mrs. Yanover to become completely absorbed in a character, a monkey character appears to the viewer as a monkey, long face, dangling arms and appropriate gestures. "They wouldn't have stretched their imaginations in this way with a regular play," commented Mrs. Warren, following Wednesday's rehearsal.

Tentative dialogues have also been submitted, together with songs, chants and selections of music and sound effects to help build a picture of jungle life.

The students have made use of school equipment to set the scene for jungle life. As monkeys, the youngsters are ensnared in the catwalks of the school gymnasium equipment, draped in green ropes to symbolize vines.

"We spent nothing; we used only school equipment," said Mrs. Warren.

The youngsters will take their audience through the entire story of Mowgli, with Baloo the bear, Bagheera the panther, and Kaa the boa constrictor.

Students who started out as monkeys end up as snakes in the final scene of the performance, which will include audience participation.

A tentative performance date of May 11 has been set for the production.

"Conversation emerged impromptu," said Miss Scott.

"In the beginning they were given objects and improvised situations around them."

"At the beginning, many were very tense but they were led (in experience things by association with the senses" . . . smell, sight, sound; we built around an oil (oil) scene."

Production to Climb

Baxter Canning Firm Boosts Prospects of A Busy Year

By MARGARET HAYLOCK
Staff Reporter

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward County's economy — tied tightly into agriculture and tourism — has been welcome news Wednesday with the announcement that the Baxter Canning Company plans an expanded production year.

V. Donald Baxter, company president, said yesterday he expects factory production to double in the next years."

Mr. Baxter's announcement was greeted with enthusiasm after an up - and - down season in 1970 which produced some dislocation in the growing and canning industry in the county.

The Bloomfield cannery operator said the marked production increase will be effected through the incorporation of new lines to the factory's production schedule, Mr. Baxter stated that approximately $500,000 is now spent annually in the purchase of raw materials. When the factory achieves its peak production in five years' time this figure will double to a projected $1 million expenditure.

The Baxter firm now buys produce from 75-100 growers-shareholders working approximately 1,750 acres of farmland. This year, because of factory expansion plans, Mr. Baxter expects that about 2,500 acres will be worked.

The factory will increase its present pack of 400,000 tins to 600,000 tins in the next three years. Mr. Baxter said this represents an increase of 30 per cent in production.

He confirmed there will be increased year-round factory employment as a result of expanded operation. In a press release, he announced the firm has successfully negotiated the necessary refinancing required to enable the company to proceed on a sound financial basis in the years ahead, and to expand its production in Ros with the capabilities of its plant and equipment.

He announced the growers-shareholders met this week with representatives of ARDA (Agricultural and Rural Development Act) and as a result, agreement in principle was reached on balance of financing required. A recommendation for assistance is being made by ARDA to the minister of agriculture, the Hon. William Stewart for his approval.

Norris Whitney, MPP, was present at the meeting to lend his support, Mr. Baxter said that ARDA is financed jointly by Ottawa and Ontario funds.

"As a result of all these developments, contracts are now being negotiated with the shareholder-growers and the management is anticipating a very busy and successful year," said Mr. Baxter.

The chief canning crops at the Bloomfield plant are peas, pumpkin, cherries and tomatoes.

Can't Buy Me, Luv!

John Shaw, who played the role of Harry in the Belleville Theatre Guild production of Luv, wears an expression of defeat as Lois Summerville (his wife Ellen in the play) rides off with Milt her first husband, played by Ron McPherson, after a few disillusioning months spent with Harry. The play, a hilarious satire by Murray Schisgal, opened at the Pinnacle Playhouse on Wednesday night and will continue for 10 nights as the final offering of Artsfest '71.

Luv Is Unpredictable Surprise

By DIANE COYNE

Anyone who sees the Belleville Theatre Guild's current production — LUV — will definitely recognize himself (while pausing between laughs) in at least one of the play's three characters. The author, Murray Schisgal, composes human nature into three luminous and hilarious personalities — (Luv's triangle!) who constantly surprise the audience with their unpredictable behavior.

The play is almost totally dependent for success on its cast of two men and one woman, since the stark "bridge at night" setting never changes and other sources of interest are secondary.

John Shaw, as Harry Berlin, provides a strong beginning for the production as he introduces us to Harry — delightfully picking his way through the refuse container. Mr. Shaw plays the part with a warm Chaplin - like quality which holds the affection of the audience especially when Harry resorts to strange psychotic fits to escape the realities of life and love.

Harry's account of the "dog" who once contaminated his leg, his several attempts to leap off the bridge and his lovemaking sequences with Ellen are handled with wild and funny abandon.

The first meeting between Harry and Milt Manville (played by Ron MacPherson) has a few awkward moments of stilted action which could be due to the recent changes in blocking caused by the play's being moved from Centennial's mammoth stage to the extremely small, raked, playhouse stage.

Mr. MacPherson is an aggressive and forceful Milt Manville. He achieves a slick, con-artist manner which contrasts effectively with Harry's.

In some years, spring seeding has gotten under way in the Oak Hills district during the latter part of March or early in April.

But the backward spring will also affect farmers in another area and in one which could certainly pinch their pocket books.

The chilly weather will delay the growth of grass and turning out cattle to spring pasture will also be delayed.

And, if the farmer happens to be short of feed, he will have to pay out money to supplement his livestock's rations.

Last night's audience should be informed that Luv never had a full technical rehearsal because of an unavoidable situation and this reviewer was impressed with the very few indications of that.

Don't miss Luv. It's a funny farcical play and should be seen by anybody who has ever been in or out of love.

Cold Weather Slows Farmers

It's been a long, cold, delayed spring and no one in the Quinte area is more aware of the fact than the farmer.

Spring seeding, just now getting under way at some of the high, better - drained fields, is already more than two weeks late and is not expected to be general for still another week or so.

According to Hastings Agricultural representative Douglas Tipper, spring cultivation is "quite limited" and as far as he is aware only a bit of barley has so far been sown.

Mr. Tipper said cultivation so far has been limited to either high fields or higher patches on lowlands which have dried sufficiently to allow machinery operation.

Preview Planned for 'Drum'

PICTON (Staff) — The Quinte Island Theatre group's production of The Gift of the Drum, slated for presentation at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa May 17, during the National Festival '71 will be previewed next week in Prince Edward County. The play, performed by the theatre's youth section, will be presented Saturday, May 8, at Pinecrest Memorial School, Bloomfield.

All students are invited to attend the opening of the play Gift of the Drum and secretary of the QIT said the group applied for a berth in the National festival last November. Rehearsals began in March and will continue until shortly before the players depart for Ottawa.

Prince Edward County councillors have voted to underwrite all transportation and production costs for QIT members involved with the presentation of the festival play. A cash donation from the University Womens' Club will be used to purchase tickets for local thespians which will permit them to see plays presented by other groups in Ottawa from May 17 to May 22. The QIT will be the first group to perform in the National Festival '71.

Mrs. Roger Hirst, producer of the play Dorothy - Jane Goulding play.

The QIT will stage its last county performance of Gift of the Drum at Queen Elizabeth School, Picton on May 15 at 8 p.m. An audience of 800 students is expected to enjoy this play, dramatizing an ancient Indian legend.

Director Rick Rolston observed that each showing of the play will be limited to an audience of approximately 150 persons. He added that everyone will receive an opportunity to see it, however, even if performers must repeat the production several times.

The QIT is among 25 theatre groups across Canada presenting a play or mime at the National Festival '71. Mrs. Roger Hirst, producer of the

Haiti's Future

In the preamble on the inside cover of the book, Papa Doc, by Bernard Diederich and Al Burt one reads: "Haiti is only three hours from New York by air, but it is a moot point whether it is 500 years behind any of the West's democracies, or one thousand. And this once richest-of all the new world's colonies is drifting backward under the megalomaniac misguidance of Francois Duvalier, a tyrant known as Papa Doc."

But Duvalier, who once did good work as a doctor assisting an American medical team fight the disease of yaws, is now dead and the country, for long known as the poorest in the hemisphere, now has a chance to improve its lot. He had appointed as president for life by his son Jean-Claude, a heavy-set 19-year-old who bears some resemblance to Egypt's one-time monarch, the ill-fated King Farouk. Like Farouk, he has been described as a playboy, and a young man with apparently little interest in politics. In fairness though, he seems to have got off to a reasonable start by inviting newsmen to the presidential palace, where he read a speech of welcome and said there was some indication that Haiti may be entertaining closer relations with the West.

Haiti has nowhere to go but up in terms of social and economic progress. Now that Papa Doc has gone it has such an opportunity. We may wonder at President Nixon sending condolences upon the demise of a man who ruled with such an iron fist, if only to prepare the ground for aid programs, cut off since President Kennedy's days, and to discourage Communist infiltration.

An interesting student of Haiti and its customs and people, incidentally, is the celebrated American Negro dancer, Katherine Dunham, who is also an anthropologist and knows the country from the standpoint of both disciplines. In her book, Island Possessed, she writes of Haiti's rigid social structure, of its great natural beauty, its leaders — both benign and despotic — and particularly of the dance rhythms of black Africa superimposed on Haiti which have played a strong role in the art form of her dance group. As the book's title suggests, she writes also of voodoo.

Poor as Haiti may be we recall the country's pavilion at Expo 67 as being one of the most attractive and interesting of the exhibition. It was bright, spacious, with artistic decor, cultural exhibits, and colorfully-garbed Creole women who served refreshments. Today Haiti must strive to bring the rest of the country and its people toward higher living standards, to match the image presented in Montreal four years ago.

Fun in B.C.

Social Creditors, whooping it up at the BC convention of the national Social Credit Party, have been showing more spirit than the penny-pinching NDP at their recent leadership gathering in Ottawa.

We were not aware that hula dancing could be performed with a male partner (particularly as Miss Baillie hails from Fiji and likely knows her stuff), but Mr. Caouette seems to have bent some rules. For there he was with hands around the young lady's bare waist, at the festivities in Richmond.

In Ottawa the NDP's leadership thing was played out without bands, cheerleaders or any of the other customary capers of the modern political scene. There may be a lesson in frugality there, for these high-priced days, but it does not make for much fun. Maybe the Social Creditors out in B.C. provided some "funny money" from their entertainment budget, for that side of the proceedings.

Smokers

There is nothing new in the fact that some young people acquire the tobacco habit early in life, and considering the other spectres of the addiction scene these days perhaps we should be happy they smoke only cigarets. There are likely few among us who have not smoked at some time or other, nevertheless it is disconcerting to see students, boys and girls, barely out of class, puffing on cigarets as they disperse after school.

C.D. Howe

A reference here the other day to the late Mr. D. Howe" should of course have read C. D. (Clarence Decatur) Howe, Canada's trade minister of a few years ago and remembered for his famous observation, "What's a million...?"

'Good Guys and Bad Guys'

PCs, Quebec, and the Tactics of Winning an Election

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The Conservative scientists they are trying to put on an election policy for Quebec.

But have they not almost always been?

In all the last war and postwar 21 years and 10 federal elections, only once have they come to power from the cold of a Quebec freeze-out.

That was in the 1958 election when an absolutely unprecedented 50 Quebec Conservative seats contributed substantially to an equally unprecedented 208-MP Tory sweep under former Prime Minister John Diefenbaker.

So what to do about it? the Conservatives are asking themselves, and agonizing over the difficulty if not the impossibility of producing a policy that could be equally acceptable to both French and English Canada.

Here is what one hard-lining small "c" Conservative MP — who, until party election policy is publicly proclaimed, prefers to remain unidentified — suggest could be considered.

Might it not be at least an idea to do what former Conservative Trade Minister Gordon Churchill advised the newly-chosen Tory Opposition Leader of Ontario Premier to do in the surprise 1937 election that toppled Premier Mitchell Hepburn: Dr. Laurent from power and broke 22 successive years of Liberal rule?

And that advice was to do nothing special.

To do the best they could everywhere, but if necessary, be prepared to take poll-pot-luck in Quebec.

To think and plan victory with or without Quebec, treating the province like any other.

It worked. The Conservatives won.

But if you go for the Churchill strategy of winning with or without Quebec, how do you fo-cus the coming campaign?

When the Liberals and New Democrats and Creditistes are making a big thing of Quebec Policy, what could the Conservatives do?

The Liberals did the obvious. They campaigned against the ghost, the depression - day nightmare of Conservative Prime Minister Richard Bedford Bennett, using the almost always vote - winning slogan "Tory Times Are Hard Times."

Updated it became the discounted "Diefendollar" of the 1963 campaign and it created the Liberals to the power they still grasp.

You take it even now, since the Liberals refuse to forget it. And who could blame them, when it has worked so consistently.

Turn "Tory Times Are Hard Times," around on the Liberals and make it read "Grit Days Are Disorderly Days."

It may be cynical, but what in politics is not?

Look at it this way.

The Liberals have always made a big deal of coming up with what they advertise is a new deal.

They beat the Conservatives with the bogey of depression.

They built their election platforms, and still do, with planks cut for the economic underdogs of society.

Not just the jobless with-out work to be nearly doubled unemployment insurance, or the welfare careerists with the aid of federal social activators, as they are called.

But for some of the more unusual and bizarre minority groups.

Such as the student organizers with free board and lodging last Summer, and free travel to come this year. The criminal elements with easier laws, lighter punishments, softer jails where "negotiation" with prison militants is the style, and with connotations of the legal-by-mandate death penalty for cop-killers. For hippies with more permissive postures towards pot and even hard drugs. For militants and even revolutionaries whom they allow into the country and rate the CBC. For young radicals, with vaccalized Rockefeller and other tax-financed "experimental colleges". For almost any minority group that can kick -up a disruptive dust.

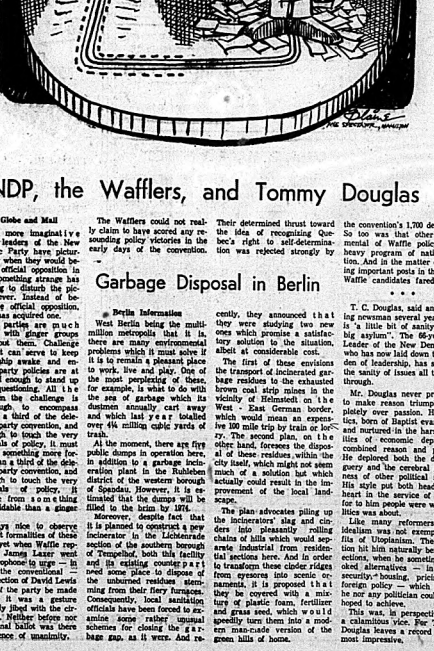
On the other side is the silent tax-paying majority, some of it that it does not earn enough to be taxed.

So let the Conservatives be as successfully cynical for a change as the Liberals consistently have been.

Let them plunder the campaign in stark black and white. No softening shades of grey.



The Conservatives should present themselves as the good guys, representing the majority of respectable law-abiding God-fearing taxpaying patriotic people who long wistfully for a sharing up, if not a return, to old - time and time - valued and simple, more secure days.

Let them paint the Liberals as the political spokesmen for the bad guys, the restless property professionals, the welfare free-loaders, the grasp - at - student radicals, the public service strike-happy activists, the economic disrupters of nationalist extremism.

With that kind of a hard-nosed campaign the Conservatives could rally the silent mortgage-carrying, taxpaying, property-owning, work - programmed load-bearing majority.

Unfair? Perhaps.

But what else was "Tory Times Are Hard Times," and the everlasting raising of R. H. Bennett's thin and hungry spectre?

NDP, the Wafflers, and Tommy Douglas

The Globe and Mail

In their more imaginative moments, leaders of the New Democratic Party have picture-ed the day when they would become the official opposition in Canada. Something strange has come along to disturb the picture, however. Instead of becoming the official opposition, the party has acquired one.

Political parties are much better off with ginger groups than without them. Challenge and dissent can serve to keep the leadership awake and ensure that party policies are at least sound enough to stand up to some questioning. All the same, when the challenge is wide enough to encompass more than a third of the delegates to a party convention, and deep enough to touch the very fundamentals of policy, it must come from something more formidable than a third of the delegates to a party convention, and deep enough to touch the very fundamentals of policy, it must come from a something more formidable than a ginger group.

It's always nice to observe the pleasant formalities of these occasions, yet when Waffle representative James Laxer went to the microphone to urge — in relate to last convention — that the election of David Lewis as leader of the party be made unanimous, it was a gesture that scarcely jibed with the circumstances. Neither before nor after the final ballot was there much evidence of unanimity.

The Wafflers could not really claim to have scored any resounding policy victories in the early days of the convention.

Garbage Disposal in Berlin

Berlin Information

West Berlin being the multi-million metropolis that it is, there are many environmental problems which it must solve if it is to remain a pleasant place to work, live and play. One of the most perplexing of these, for example, is what to do with the sea of garbage which its dustmen annually cart away and which last year totalled over 4¼ million cubic yards of trash.

At the moment, there are five public dumps in operation here, in addition to a garbage incineration plant in the Ruhleben district of the western borough of Spandau. However, it is estimated that the dumps will be filled to the brim by 1974.

Moreover, despite fact that it is planned to construct a new incinerator in the Lichtenrade section of the southern borough of Tempelhof, both it and the existing one will be exhausting contaminants stemming from their fiery furnaces. Consequently, local sanitation officials have been forced to examine some rather unusual schemes for closing the garbage gap as it were. And recently, they announced that they were studying two new ones which promise a satisfactory solution to the situation albeit at considerable cost.

The first of these envisions the transport of industrial garbage residues to the exhausted brown coal strip mines in the vicinity of Helmstedt on the West - East German border, which would mean an expensive 100 mile trip by train or lorry. The second plan, on the other hand, foresees the disposal of these residues within the city itself, which might not seem much of a solution, but which actually could result in the improvement of the local landscape.

The plan advocates piling up the incinerators' slag and cinders, pleasantly rolling chains of hills which would separate industrial from residential sections here. And in order to transform these cinder ridges from eyesores into scenic ornaments, it is proposed that they be covered with a mixture of plastic foam, fertilizer and grass seed, which would speedily turn them into a modern man-made version of the green hills of home.

Their determined thrust toward the idea of recognizing Quebec's right to self-determination was rejected strongly by the convention's 1,700 delegates.

So too was their fundamental of Waffle policy — a heavy program of nationalization. And in the matter of gaining important posts in the party Waffle candidates fared badly.

T. C. Douglas, said an admiring newsman several years ago, is 'a little bit of sanity in the big asylum". The 66-year-old leader of the New Democrats, who has now laid down the burden of leadership, has stuck to the sanity of issues all the way through.

Mr. Douglas never pretended to make reason triumph completely over passion. His politics, born of Baptist evangelism and nurtured in the harsh realities of economic depression, combined reason and passion. He pleaded both the demagogery and the cerebral gutlessness of other political stylists. His style was to put both head and heart in the service of people, for to him people were what politics was about.

Like many reformers, his humanism was not exempt from flits of impatience. The affliction hit him naturally before elections, when he sometimes evoked alternatives — in social security, housing, pricing or foreign policy — which neither he nor any politician could have hoped to achieve.

This was, in perspective, not a calamitous vice. For Tommy Douglas leaves a record that is most impressive.

Senior Citizens' Drop-in Centres

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

If there is one thing Belleville does not need, it is an unnecessary duplication of service.

Therefore, I find it difficult to understand why there is now a second Senior Citizens Drop-in Centre on South Front Street in a building purchased for this purpose by the Belleville Yardmen when tax money is already supporting a well run program under the auspices of the City Recreation Department on Pinnacle Street.

Can the Yardmen or anyone else tell us why this duplication?

Newfoundland's Budget Biggest Ever

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Newfoundland announced its biggest budget ever and the Quebec government moved to aid women, to jockey in one of the four Canadian legislatures sitting Wednesday.

Premier Joseph Smallwood of Newfoundland said the budget was "the biggest investment ever made in the quickening of our province's growth." Spending will top $300 million with no added taxes.

He added that the province could not afford to stand still.

"It has no choice if its to grow and hold a growing population," said the premier.

Mr. Smallwood announced that his government planned to borrow more than $130 million, including $37 million from federal resources.

In Quebec City, the Liberal government introduced a bill which would allow women to serve as jurors.

An amendment to a bill would end requirement that an individual own a certain amount of property or pay more than a certain level of rent before sitting on a jury.

The amendment also suggests that women have the right to refuse jury duty.

The government's draft proposal suggests that the new city, to be called the City of Greater Winnipeg, be subdivided into 10 community committees.

A Liberal member of the legislature in New Brunswick, Clarence Menzies, accused the Conservative government of political patronage in the highway department.

He said that since the Progressive Conservative party took power last fall, four highways supervisors in his county had been suspended.

Universities Can Live with Grants, But Can Folk Live with Universities?

GUELPH (CP) — Dr. W. G. Winegard, president of the University of Guelph, said Wednesday provincial universities would be able to live with the latest government-imposed limits on grants.

But, he added, "the only question is whether the province will like the final results."

University Affairs Minister John White announced Tuesday the provincial government would provide no increase in capital grants to universities in 1971-72 and that a 2.4-per-cent ceiling would be placed on increases on operating grants for the 1972-73 academic year.

Dr. Winegard said it was too early to assess the full impact of the government's limits as far as the University of Guelph was concerned, but tight provincial funds had already forced the re-design of some proposed campus buildings.

Court Ousts Persion Fund Trustee

WASHINGTON AP) W. A. (Tony) Boyle embattled United Mine Workers president, has been ordered to step down as a trustee of the union's welfare and pension fund on grounds he mismanaged the $427.1-million program.

In upholding a civil suit brought by more than 70 dissident miners and their families, Judge Gerhard A. Gesell of the U.S. district court was critical Wednesday of storing UMW funds in non-interest-bearing accounts in a union-owned bank.

The judge accused the 65-year-old Boyle of making "a hasty power play" by boosting retirement benefits $25 a month in June, 1969, at his first meeting as a trustee and six months before he sought re-election.

Gesell ordered Boyle and Josephine Roche, 64, to step down as trustees of the 21-year-old fund and directed the union to withdraw its money from the National Bank of Washington. The judge set a June 30 deadline for compliance.

Judge Gesell said the practice of keeping multi-million-dollar cash deposits was an illegal conspiracy bilking retired miners of investment income.

Woman, 19, Is Arrested In Bombing of Capitol

WASHINGTON (AP) — The arrest of a 19-year-old woman, who the government says has "personal knowledge" of the March 1 bombing of the U.S. Capitol building, is the first visible break in a two-month FBI manhunt for those responsible.

Arrested and held under $100,000 bond to ensure her appearance before a Seattle, Wash., grand jury investigating the bombing was Leslie Bacon, daughter of an Atherton, Calif., lumberman and a member of an anti-war group sponsoring demonstrations here.

An FBI agent who testified at Miss Bacon's hearing in U.S. district court Wednesday said the tall, brunm blonde is suspected of being a participant in the bomb incident.

However, she was being held as a material witness rather than a defendant. A three-judge appeals court tribunal scheduled arguments today on a petition by her lawyers for her release.

Special Agent Daniel C. Mahan said the FBI was told by a government informant identified at the bond hearing only as Si that Miss Bacon "had personal knowledge of the events" involving the Capitol blast. He said the informant learned this "from conversations with Miss Bacon."

She was apprehended at 8.30 p.m. Tuesday by FBI agents.

In Atherton, a San Francisco suburb, Miss Bacon's mother said the arrest of her daughter was "all a big mistake."

"She hasn't done anything. I know that," said Lynn Bacon.

Mahan testified at the bond hearing that Informant Si told the government she would flee rather than answer the subpoena to testify before the grand jury.

The 1:32 a.m. explosion in a lower level of the Senate wing of the Capitol was preceded by 30 minutes by a call warning of the blast and saying: "This is in retaliation for the Nixon move in Laos."

The explosion did considerable damage to the Senate barber shop and other adjacent rooms. Cost of repairing the damage has been set at $300,000.

Denturist Suspended For Opening Clinic

TORONTO (CP) — A dental technician has had his licence suspended for a year for setting up his own clinic to deal directly with the public.

Benjamin Sweet, president of the Denturist Society of Ontario, appeared before the dental technicians' governing board Tuesday. He was said to have violated the Dental Technicians' Act by displaying a sign saying Ben Sweet Denture Clinic at a shopping plaza.

Technicians are licensed to make false teeth only on a dentist's prescription and are not permitted to deal directly with patients in Ontario. They may do so in British Columbia, Alberta and Manitoba.

A spokesman for the society, Gordon Smith, said technicians in Ontario charge dentists about $35 for an upper or lower plate, but dentists charge patients seven to 10 times that amount.

Police Raid Mine Union

GEORGETOWN, Guyana (Reuter) — At least 12 persons were arrested Wednesday when police raided mine workers' union headquarters at MacKenzie and later used tear gas to disperse milling crowds in the strike-bound bauxite town.

An undisclosed number of persons, including school children were injured in the tear gas attack, and were treated at MacKenzie hospital for scratches and bruises, reports reaching Georgetown said.

The police raided the union headquarters in an attempt to end the occupation by workers, who had seized the office a week ago after chasing out union officials who were trying to persuade them to end the strike.

News of the arrests and reports that the children were injured were causing strike threaters to quit work and have mounted that the operations of the Demerara Bauxite Co. (Demba) would again come to a complete standstill.

The Guyanese government of Prime Minister Forbes Burnham recently decided to nationalize Demba, a subsidiary of Aluminium Co. of Canada Ltd. (Alcan), but the move has not yet been implemented.

'Freeze' Is Sought On Airport Site

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has asked the Ontario government to "freeze" one of four potential sites for Toronto's new international airport to allow for public discussion.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson said Wednesday he has proposed that land sales at one specific site be frozen by Queen's Park to permit public hearings.

The procedure is the latest method devised by the government to enable public participation in the choice of the jet-port site while preventing land speculation.

The issue was raised in the Commons by Marvin Howe (PC —Wellington-Gray-Dufferin-Waterloo) who asked when the confusion about the site of the airport would be closed up.

In reply to further questioning by Robert Kaplan (L—Toronto Don Valley), Mr. Jamieson said the proposals were sent to Toronto about four weeks ago. Premier Davis had asked for some time to discuss the matter with cabinet.

Mr. Jamieson said that in another week or so he might ask the Ontario government when a reply could be expected.

Among the sponsors of the bell-ringing are the chief officers of the Episcopal, Anglican, United Presbyterian, United Methodist, Greek Orthodox and African Methodist Episcopal Churches.

Wife Finally Resents Role of Cook

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It is 10:00 p.m. My husband just walked out of the house and slammed the door. Hard. Where is he going? To a restaurant, he said. For a snack. Why? Because for years I have been a short-order cook and I'm fed up. I handed in my resignation.

ANN LANDERS

I have two children and I put in a full day's work (at home). I am on ridiculous diets — a cup of cottage cheese and a cracker and a good cook. We both have to watch our weight. Harold should lose at least 15 pounds. Tonight I left the dishes undone and went to a Girl Scout meeting. (I'm a den mother). When I returned I did the dishes and walked out of the kitchen at 9:45 — hushed. At 10 Harold announced he'd like a pre-bedtime snack — offered fruit — an orange, an apple, or half a grapefruit. He said, "No." I then suggested a turkey sandwich, ice cream, rice pudding or graham crackers and milk. Harold announced he wanted French toast. I said, "Nothing doing." He got mad and stormed out of the house.

I must admit I have some guilt feelings. Should I have? — K. C. TIFF.

* * *

DEAR TIFF: The greatest treason is to do the right thing for the wrong reason. A man who is 15 pounds overweight does not need French toast at bed time. You were right to refuse to fix it — not on the grounds that you were tired, but because you would not be a party to his gluttony. Stock up on low-cal taste-tempters and offer them cheerfully — but refuse to fix the fattening stuff at bedtime. And stop feeling guilty.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 16-year-old son has been smoking cigarettes on the sly for at least two years. Occasionally his father thinks he smells smoke on the boy's clothing and raises the roof. The boy denies it, but his father punishes him without proof.

I have tried to get my husband to say, "No smoking around us, but when we are away from the house you are on your own." I feel if we allow the boy to smoke when he is on his own he will stay with the popular brands and not go in for pot. Do you agree? — LOS ANGELES READERS.

* * *

DEAR L: — All kids do what they want when they are "on their own." The trick is to raise them in such a way that they will want to do the right thing whether they are supervised or not.

Allowing a 16-year-old to smoke cigarettes in the hope that it will keep him away from pot is unrealistic. Most pot smokers started with the popular brands.

It is impossible to police a teen-ager 24 hours a day. If you've done a good job, you don't have to worry. If you haven't, it's pretty late in the game — and worrying won't help.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter is planning a May wedding. She is marrying a man in the Service. They will be living overseas for the next three years. Possibly longer. They would prefer not to take too many personal belongings.

Rather than gifts of silver, china, linen and the standard wedding presents, they would prefer money. Would it be proper to enclose a card along with the invitations stating this preference? Please phrase the request so it won't sound to commercial. Thank you. — MOTHER OF THE BRIDE.

* * *

DEAR MOTHER: Sorry but there are no words that could make this request sound non-commercial. A pitch for money is bad manners no matter how delicately phrased. Forget it.

Elizabeth Anne Blakley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton J. Blakley became the bride of Rein Haagsma, son of Mr. and Mrs. Inne Haagsma at a ceremony held in Bridge St. United Church chapel on April 24. The ceremony was conducted by Dr. H. M. Davis while organ music was provided by Alec Gordon.

The bride who was given in marriage by her father wore a gulpure lace gown with a scoop neckline and scissor front caught with a bow of peau de soie. The front of the skirt was accented with a matching bow. A sweeping train accented the back, and a four-tier veil held in place a headpiece of organza petals edged with seed pearls and centred with aurora borealis. Her bouquet was a cascade of red roses.

Mrs. Evelyn Calberry, the bride's sister who was the matron of honor wore a sheer floor length gown of blue nylon trimmed with gulpure lace. Her blue net pillbox style headpiece was set off by a small blue veil. She carried a cascade of yellow roses.

The best man was Fopke Haagsma, the bridegroom's brother while the ushers were Howard Sabine and Joseph Calberry brothers-in-law of the bride.

At the reception held in the church parlor, guests were greeted by the bride's mother who was in a light blue bonded crepe dress with lace sleeves, black accessories and a corsage of pink 'mums.

The bridegroom's mother was in a navy crimplene dress trimmed with white accessories and a corsage of pink 'mums.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I'm so nervous when I take little Joe visiting his grandmother. I have to spank his hands often or he gets into all her antique collections. I'm afraid he'll break something valuable."

Mother: "I wish you would put those breakable things up on the mantel until little Joe learns he must not touch them. I've brought him some toys to play with, but I still can't trust him to leave things alone."

It may take a small child a few months to learn not to touch forbidden treasures. Everybody will enjoy his visits more if breakable items are safely out of reach while he is learning.

Naturalists Plan Field Trips

The executive of the Quinte Field Naturalists held a meeting on Tuesday, April 27, at the home of Miss Daisy Young, Forin Street, to discuss the club constitution and to make plans for possible field trips during the coming months.

The regular April meeting at the Entomology Research Institute on Dundas Street East took place on Monday evening, April 26, with president, Terry Sprague in the chair. Several field trips were decided upon — one to Point Traverse on May 8 and 9, to meet with members from Kingston Field Naturalists and to view the water and shore birds and spring migrants passing through this south-easterly tip of Prince Edward County; and a day at O'Hara's Mill, North west of Madoc, on Sunday, June 13, with participants meeting for a picnic lunch. Members were also invited to visit a cottage in Presqu'ile Provincial Park during the weekend of May 23 - 24, when a variety of plants and animals as well as birds would be in evidence. Records of members observations would be filed for study in the recently started Quinte area natural history check list.

Terry Sprague and Hedley James who attended the parent Federation of Ontario Naturalists annual general meeting in Ottawa this past weekend gave brief accounts of their activities there.

The question of a club crest was raised and received general approval. Wayne David, a student from Prince Edward County Institute, sketched a possible design, and after a short discussion it was proposed that members, especially student and junior members, enter suitable designs from which the club crest would be chosen.

The remainder of the meeting was spent in compiling the records of birds sighted in the Quinte area within a 30 mile radius of Belleville. Irwin Knight, aided by Terry Sprague, in charge of this, were kept so busy with observations of members from all over the check list area and going back many years that the list was only half completed when it was time for the meeting to end and for refreshments to be served.

To help complete records members and interested observers are asked to send their sightings, together with dates, to either Irwin Knight at 181 Wright Avenue, Belleville, or to Terry Sprague of RR 1, Demorestville.

An interested guest at the meeting was Mrs. Weeks of the London Field Naturalists who is at present preparing a study of the bald eagle throughout Ontario. This rather uncommon bird, though not seen in recent years in the immediate Quinte area, was sighted a few years ago at Massassauga Point and in the Bancroft area.

Couple Honored By Congregation

A surprise party was held last week in the recreation room of the parsonage of the Centennial Free Methodist Church. Over 60 friends gathered to honor Miss Ann Crawford and Mac McCann whose marriage takes place next month.

An interesting program was planned by Mrs. Harold Easton and Mrs. Donald Perry. Miss Della Potter expressed the good wishes of all present after which many beautiful gifts were presented in token of the high esteem in which they are held by their church.

Rev. Barclay Warren closed the program with prayer and a dainty lunch was served.

In A Japanese Setting

Mrs. Kathleen Poste, general convener, and Mrs. Dorothy Steadman, decorating convener, add a finishing touch to the centrepiece arrangement at the main table, at the cherry blossom tea and bazaar held on Wednesday afternoon at the Masonic Temple. The event was organized by the Minerva Chapter 138 Order Eastern Star.

Physicians' Wives Group to Remain Social

Despite a predominantly social agenda, the Belleville and District Physicians' Wives Association have sufficient funds on hand to cover their usual annual charitable donations — and a little to spare.

At their meeting last Thursday Mrs. J. Hartt, president, noted that members had made it clear that they had very much enjoyed the past year and wished to continue mainly as a social group, raising money amongst themselves and their immediate circle of friends. Once again $300 will go to the Salvation Army Childrens' Summer Camp Fund, a local family will be helped at Christmas, and a third donation, not yet decided, will be made.

Mrs. Hartt announced the autumn program and expressed the hope that all members will be free to come to the dinner planned at The Four Seasons Hotel in early June when the doctors' wives will meet for the last time before September. She concluded by extending a warm welcome to the guests for the evening, artists Donna Cameron and Eve Chase.

The home of the hostess, Mrs. J. Latimer, was lavishly hung with paintings by Mrs. Cameron and her student, Mrs. Chase; and as well as expressing admiration for their talent and versatility the doctors' wives showed a considerable interest in the various media and techniques employed.

Prior to the ajournment of the meeting for supper, served by Mrs. Latimer, Mrs. E. Green thanked the artists on behalf of the group for making the evening so enjoyable.

Japanese Decorations Highlight OES Bazaar

By SUSAN KORAH
Weesan's Reporter

Some of the delicate beauty of Japan was transferred to the Masonic Temple on Wednesday afternoon when the cherry blossom tea held by the Minerva chapter no. 138 of the OES drew a sizeable crowd despite the dull, drizzly weather.

At the entrance to the hall, a life-size doll in a Japanese kimono posed demurely beneath a cherry blossom tree. A small electric lamp enclosed in a revolving glass case illuminated the prismatic images in brilliant colors on the glass panels.

Inside the hall, the walls were adorned with white scrolls showing water color flowers painted with delicate artistry. Colorful Japanese lanterns, gauze butterflies and paper birds hung from the ceiling as did inverted parasols in shades of flower. Decorations were convened by Mrs. Dorothy Steadman.

The centrepiece at the main table consisted of a bowl of peach blossoms flanked by two medium sized Japanese dolls. Tea was poured by Mrs. Gladys Edwards, Mrs. Hazel Johnston, Mrs. Marguerite Burgess, Mrs. Norma Graham, Mrs. Marion Easterbrook, Mrs. Mamie Naylor, Mrs. Anna Poste, Mrs. Mary Bedford and Mrs. Eva Weese. The tea room convener was Mrs. Margaret McQueen while the hostesses were Mrs. G. Dobbs, Mrs. E. Sine, Mrs. B. Waters, Mrs. G. Greatrix, Mrs. A. Jordan, Mrs. L. Finkle, Mrs. R. Gunsolus and Mrs. Y. Bushell.

Sandwiches and other refreshments were served in plates centred with a small fan and a mini parasol, further underlining the Japanese theme.

The kitchen convener was Mrs. Frances Marster.

A gateway with black arch flanked by white panels with drawings of Japanese scenes formed the entrance to the bazaar section which consisted of several booths. At the needlework table convened by Mrs. R. Cruickshank, Mrs. G. Shaw, Mrs. F. Belsey and Mrs. T. Rees, a number of decorative pin cushions edged with gold braid caught the eye, while several chic Barbie doll pant suits and a pair of knitted pixie slippers.

A large white pullover held the spotlight on the variety table convened by Mrs. F. Ray, Mrs. G. Bregard, Mrs. T. Poste and Mrs. E. Sullivan. The other items included knitted slippers, books and lampshades.

The home baking table convened by Mrs. W. Marner, Mrs. A. Clare, Mrs. H. Burley, Mrs. H. Hodgens, Mrs. Ray, Mrs. G. Bregard, Mrs. T. Poste and Mrs. E. Sullivan. The other items included knitted slippers, books and lampshades.

The home baking table convened by Mrs. W. Marner, Mrs. A. Clare, Mrs. H. Burley, Mrs. H. Hodgens, Mrs. Ray, Mrs. G. Bregard, Mrs. T. Watts featured numerous jars of pickles and preserves besides the usual array of home baked goodies.

The candy table was convened by Mrs. L. May and Mrs. B. McMullen.

The gardening table, with Mrs. J. Steadman and Mr. H. Burley in charge was placed under a huge green, gold and orange umbrella and featured a variety of cacti and other miniature plants suitable for a rock garden.

The overall convener of the tea was Mrs. Kathleen Poste and the co-convener was Mrs. Viola Greatrix. Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Ida Heming, Worthy Matron of the chapter and by Mrs. Dorothy Steadman.

Snow White Cake Needs No Icing

By MARY MOORE

I wonder what the rich people are doing tonight. Do they ever have the fun of taking a simple cake, straight from the oven and serving it warm with ice cream or plain jelly or fruit?

You can have rich satisfaction out of doing it for. I have just finished and am feeling virtuous and triumphant for I made exactly what I wanted — a simple white cake that needs no icing and tastes delicious.

SNOW WHITE CAKE
(1 egg)

¼ cup shortening
¼ cup granulated sugar
1 egg
½ tsp. vanilla
⅛ cup (1 cup minus 2 tbsps.) sifted cake and pastry flour
2 tbsps. skim milk powder
2 tsps. baking powder
¼ tsp. salt
⅓ cup water

Into beater bowl measure shortening and sugar and beat until creamy. Add egg and vanilla and beat on "low" while you prepare remaining ingredients. Sift the sifted flour with the skim milk powder, baking powder and salt and add to creamed mixture alternately with the water in two lots, still beating on low. Stop beaters, scrape down sides and beat 30 sec. longer but no more — just until batter is blended. Turn into 8 x 8" or 8½ x 8½" square pan lined on bottom with square of wax paper and buttered. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 25 min. for 8 x 8" or 20 min. for 8½ x 8½". Let rest in pan for 5 min. then turn out and serve while warm when it is at its peak of perfection.

Save this recipe — an economical and easy cake to whip up.

Surprise Party On Anniversary

Among the out - of - town friends present were Mr. and Mrs. Gavin Scott, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Robson, Oakville and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cook, Scarborough.

Better Methods of Birth Control Discussed

By DORIS CLARK

Grace MacInnis (NDP Vancouver Kingsway) has called on the Federal Government to establish birth control clinics across the country. Said Mrs. MacInnis, "If we want to avoid a great number of abortions, we must get busy disseminating birth control, information and contraceptives."

The January Reader's Digest article "Birth Control for Men" has resulted in hundreds of letters reaching the Family Planning Federation of Canada from all over the country, from men wanting the names of doctors who perform vasectomies.

Health Minister John Munro while considering the Pill safe for the normal healthy woman, agrees with the medical advisory committee that couples who have had all the children they intend to have should consider sterilization as a better alternative to uninterupted use of the Pill for many years.

• • •

Dear Doris: Please let me know what is the name of the product you can buy at the drug store "Depending on You" is referring to. — Just Billie

Dear Billie: Sorry. Too many people are depending on me to tell it like it is. And I say diet pills are for the birds.

What's the use of losing those pounds if you lose your health in the process? The pills are usually appetite depressants — which sounds like a good idea. But the end result is all too often a system which gets so accustomed to rejecting food that it misses out on what it needs for good nutrition.

This could mean a long and debilitating illness. There's nothing nearly so effective in the long run as doing it the hard way — by dieting according to approved instructions, and taking off no more than a pound or two a week.

Confidential to English Canadian: True, the bride's parents have the say about the size of the wedding, but just try making Ukranian parents of the groom accept this! Like most Europeans they simply love to have huge weddings and can't imagine celebrating such an occasion without ringing in every last friend and relative.

If you don't want this to settle into a family feud so early in life, you'd better have a tactful conversation explaining that even if you squander over last penny you can't afford more than 50 guests on each side.

Newfoundland Night Away from Rare National Championship

GALT (CP) — National championships are a rarity for Newfoundland teams but Grand Falls Cataracts hrs very close to a shot at the Canadian senior amateur hockey title.

The Cataracts meet Galt Hornets, the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A winners, in the detaiive fifth game of their best-of-five Eastern Allan Cup final here tonight and the winner plays Calgary Stampeders for the national title.

The Cataracts, although playing the entire series on the road, almost seem like the home team at times. There are an estimated 9,000 Newfoundland natives living here, a city of 40,000.

The Newfoundlanders have turned out in large numbers, waving banners and lending strong vocal support to the Cataracts. Pichette says the rooting section has helped.

The Hornets, meanwhile, must make another lineup change for the final game. All-star defenceman Ron Hergott is finished for the season.

Hergott suffered a separated left shoulder when he was banged into the boards in the third period of Tuesday's game, a 3-1 victory for Grand Falls which squared the series 2-2. Bob Maxwell, who hasn't played in the series yet, is a possible replacement for Hergott.

The Hornets have also been playing without left-winger Tom McCarthy, a pickup from Orillia Terriers, who suffered a broken left leg in the opening game.

And coach Norm Defelice has missed the whole series after suffering a mild heart attack. Bill Wylie, who coached Galt for the last three seasons until stepping down last summer, has handled the club through the Grand Falls series.

The Cataracts' only casualty has been centre Frank Finlayson who suffered a charley horse in the second game. He was classed as doubtful starter for tonight's final.

Jean-Guy Morissette, who made 43 saves in the fourth game, will be back in goal for the Cataracts. Boat Hurley, sidelined by the flu in Tuesday's game, could be back to replace Ken Broderick in the Galt net.

Intelligencer Sports

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, APRIL 29, 1971

By Maurice Switzer
Sports Editor

Now that Belleville minor hockey president Don Gavey has taken the bull by the horns, the annual midget-junior B tug-of-war may be a thing of the past.

The issue, which focuses on boys still eligible for midget hockey (under 17) but good enough to play junior, came to an early head at the annual general meeting of the BMHA last month.

Despite the fact that few confrontations ever actually occur, feelings have continually run at a fever pitch about a boy playing junior-level hockey when he is still eligible for minor competition.

You've heard the local arguments: pro-minor factions say a boy should develop with hockey players his own age — he's got lots of time to play junior when he comes officially of age. They often DON'T say, but DO anticipate that keeping talented players in minor hockey is bound to bring the odd crack at a provincial title. There is also the widely-held belief that Junior A and pro scouts keep a keen eye on midget hockey ranks.

The junior B camp, on the other hand, says it proves a boy's talent if he can hold his own in competition with older players. They scoff at the notion that Junior B hockey is an overlooked bracket of competition for those not good enough for the almighty "A" ranks. Phil Esposito is a favorite example of one of your typical Junior B dead-end kids.

Somewhere in between are those of us who humbly suggest the boys involved are entitled to say who they want to play for.

Near Boiling Point

The heated debate approached a boiling point at minor hockey's annual meeting when a motion was proposed forbidding the use of any minor-age players — including juvenile (to to 19) by the local Junior B Fairways.

Starting his first term as BMHA president, Don Gavey wasted no time in nipping the controversy in the bud. Today, the motion's mover and the Fairways' management are in receipt of the Gavey formula for short-circuiting the dispute.

"We just want to lay out a position to avoid any possibility of a conflict arising," Gavey said, adding that both sides received his proposal recently.

Basically, the matter hinges on the gentlemen's agreement between the Ontario Minor Hockey Association and the parent OHA that places boys under the jurisdiction of local minor hockey organizations until they have completed their midget level eligibility.

In Belleville, there will be no more "jumping" from bantam to junior ranks without a written release from the BMHA, and the organization will operate on the premise that all players of midget age and below sign OMHA certificates.

If the Fairways are interested in the services of a midget player, their first step will be to contact either Gavey or his vice-president who will, in turn, contact the manager of the player's team to determine his availability. If the player is available, and Gavey sees the only mitigating circumstance as conflicting game dates, his release for one game will be processed and forwarded to the junior Bs.

As for juvenile players, not even the terms of the OMHA's constitution give local minor hockey organizations any control over the 19-year-olds. "Once he is over midget-age, a boy has the right of choice," OMHA secretary Vern McCallum of Scarborough explains. "He doesn't need a release from minor hockey to play junior in his own town." He stressed however, that any minor-age hockey player requires his organization's release to play for a team in any other centre.

"You couldn't, for instance, have a Belleville juvenile going to play junior hockey in Trenton without the written release of the Belleville minor hockey people," McCallum illustrated.

Boys, Not Laws

As for the coming season, any midget-age players used by Belleville's Fairways will be theoretically playing on their minor cards. In practice, however, there will be boys of midget-age and below whom the Junior Bs will want to sign. For one thing, Junior B teams are forbidden by the OHA from using players on minor cards for more than three games after Jan. 15 each year.

"We're going to have to take a look at each individual situation," says Gavey. "We don't intend to stand in any boy's way. On the other hand, we don't think it's good for a boy to be jumping around from club to club. The minor hockey executive would sit down with the boy and his parents and sort it out."

The fascinating part of the whole issue is that the affairs of 300,000 minor hockey players in this country are governed by little more than tradition. "There's nothing really legal about these things," says the OMHA's McCallum. It's all sort of a gentlemen's agreement — if a boy's going to play organized hockey, he's got to abide by these rules."

McCallum could not recall a single instance in the province of a boy's parents taking minor hockey to court to question its jurisdiction, although it has happened in other parts of the country.

"I don't doubt hockey rules wouldn't stand up in court, but we just never let things get that far. We're interested in boys, not laws."

The hunt is on for Belleville hockey talent; three of last year's Blake Kerr Imperial midgets are in receipt of training camp invitations from Smiths Falls' entry in the Central Ontario Junior "A" (Tier 2) League; centres Brian Cousins, the leading midget scorer (36 goals, 25 assists) and middie-man Rob Foster (29-20) along with winger Paul Acharman have been approached by the Smiths Falls Bears; there is one slight problem: Acherman still has one year of midget eligibility remaining, which makes the Smiths Falls invitation come under the category of tampering.

ANAF Club Guests Throw Weight Around

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

Members of the ANAF Duke of Edinburgh unit will be hearing barbells tonight when the Apollo weightlifting club holds a demonstration there.

The local weightlifting group, which holds about 15 such exhibitions a year, will be displaying the prowess of lifters Price Morris, Ron Hayes, Brian Rosebush and Bob, Gary and Art Walt to the Duke of Edinburgh veterans at 8 p.m. Guests are welcome to attend and a lunch will be served.

The Walt brothers received some weighty news of their own this week learning that they will be among the more than 650 athletes honored at Queen's Park Tuesday by the Ontario government.

Provincial premier William Davis will preside over the banquet, which honors all Ontario amateur athletes who have won national or international titles in the last year.

The Walt brothers earned their banquet ticket last November in Woodstock when all three captured Canadian intermediate crowns.

The national honors attained by the weightlifting Walts would have to rank as one of the highlights in the 22-year history of the Apollo club, which started out with three members training in Ken Carr-Brainl's Bonwell Street garage, where the group still holds its weekly training sessions.

The Apollo club currently has a membership of about 35 lifters with another 25 on a waiting list to replace members who retire or move out of the area.

Hawks Sweep Out Marlies, Advance Against Lafleur and Co.

TORONTO (CP) — St. Catharines Black Hawks defeated Toronto Marlboros 3-2 Wednesday night to capture their best-of-seven final in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A Series.

The Hawks now will meet Quebec Remparts in a best-of-seven series to determine the Eastern Canadian Junior A champion. The Remparts downed Shawinigan Bruins 8-1 Wednesday night to take their Quebec Junior A series 4-1 and advance against St. Catharines for the Richardson Cup.

First game is at St. Catharines Sunday.

Bob MacMillan and Clyde Simon scored the other St. Catharines goals, with Gevin Kirk, Steve Shutt and Steve Durbano replying for the losers.

The Marlies played a stronger game than in their previous three series appearances but couldn't cope with the line of Dionne, Simon and Peppler who accounted four of the Hawk goals.

The first period featured defensive play until Kirk gave Toronto the lead at 14:47. Dionne, the leading scorer for the Hawks, evened it three minutes later, but a goal by Shutt one minute later regained the lead for Toronto.

Dionne missed three good scoring opportunities at the start of the second but finally connected at 13:37 with his second goal of the night to tie the score at 2-2.

Two minutes later MacMillan gave the Hawks the lead to end second-period scoring.

Durbano gave Toronto a morale boost at 6:44 of the third period by tying the score. But Simon scored the winning goal for St. Catharines, paving the way for Dionne's third goal into an empty net.

Rough play resulted in 13 minor penalties, seven to the Marlboros, and two 16-minute misconducts, one each to Shutt and Durbano.

"Marlboros are more punishing," Milne said, his suit dripping wet after a shower dunking. "This was a much tougher series."

Marlboros general-manager Tommy Smythe expressed another concern:

"I hope the St. Catharines management has the guts to fight for the Memorial Cup." He referred to the earlier refusal of Ontario and Quebec junior teams to play the Western Canada Hockey League, which uses over-age players, for the national championship.

Smythe thinks the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will award the Memorial Cup to the western champions.

"I'd fight like hell for it, if it was my team."

Lapointe Fills One Gap, Now Habs Lose Fergy

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (CP) — The loss of Ted Harris to Minnesota North Stars last June left a gaping hole in the left side of the Montreal Canadiens defence.

MacNeil, here for tonight's sixth game of the Stanley Cup semi-final against the Stars, said young Guy Lapointe has proved he can handle the spot vacated by Harris.

The Canadiens lead the best-of-seven series 3-2, and the 23-year-old Lapointe has played a solid role in helping the Canadiens in their search for an unprecedented 18th Stanley Cup.

"Guy has come along well," said MacNeil of the six-foot, 185-pound rookie defenceman. "When we lost Harris to Minnesota, it gave him a chance to prove he belonged in the Montreal lineup and an opportunity to develop."

MacNeil coached Lapointe with Montreal Voyageurs of the American Hockey League last season and with Houston Apollos of the Central League the previous year.

This season, Lapointe blossomed as a National Hockey League regular although his expoloits have been overshadowed by publicity accorded the scoring feats of several other first-year players.

JOHN FERGUSON

Lapointe played a full 78-game schedule and scored 15 goals and assisted on 29 others while spending 107 minutes in the penalty box.

When the Canadiens lost Serge Savard for the second straight year with a fractured leg midway through the season, Lapointe became even more important to the club.

"He worked regularly along side Terry Harper, Jacques Laperriere and J. C. Tremblay and proved he is particularly effective on the left point for Montreal power plays.

"He started the season with a rush of goals, slowed somewhat in the second half, but regained his scoring eye in the playoffs. So far he has three goals and three assists in 12 post-season games against Boston Bruins and Minnesota.

Meanwhile, MacNeil was concerned over the loss of left winger John Ferguson.

Ferguson did not make the trip here with the team because of an injury that left his hip pickled up in Montreal's 6-1 victory at home Tuesday night.

"The veteran hardrock said after visiting doctors in Montreal Wednesday "some fibres has been torn away from the muscle and at the moment there is no way of telling how long it will take to come around."

Ferguson's injury had earlier been diagnosed as a bad bruise.

"Other than Fergie, everyone's all right," MacNeil said. "He didn't even let me know until after the game that he was hurt."

The North Stars, facing elimination, will still be without veteran defenceman Doug Mohns and goalie Lorne (Gump) Worsley tonight.

Mohns tried to skate on his injured left leg at Minnesota's Wednesday workout but was forced to leave the ice while Worsley remained on the line because of a groin injury.

Cesare Maniago will be the North Stars starting goaltender but once again MacNeil declined to name his starting netminder. He has used rookie Ken Dryden in all playoff games this year.

The game is scheduled for 9:00 p.m. EDT and will be carried nationally by CBC television network.

The Stars, in addition to CBC national radio coverage throughout Canada, will pipe the game to outlets in St. Louis and Boston.

Rangers Playing For Tomorrows

NEW YORK (CP) — Emile Francis hopes his New York Rangers play as well against Chicago Black Hawks tonight as they did Tuesday night in Chicago.

That may sound surprising since the Rangers lost that game 3-2, but the Ranger coach-general manager thinks his team played a great game despite the loss.

"All I know," Francis said Wednesday, "is that if we get the same great effort from everyone tomorrow (Thursday) night and again in Chicago Sunday afternoon, we're going to get into the finals against either Montreal or the North Stars."

If Francis doesn't get a great effort from the Rangers tonight there will be no Sunday afternoon in Chicago for the Blueshirts. Chicago leads the best-of-seven National Hockey League Stanley Cup semi-finals 3-2 and could wrap it up tonight.

Tuesday's 3-2 overtime loss came on a 35-foot slap shot from Bobby Hull after a faceoff won deep in Ranger territory by Pit Martin in overtime.

Martin won the faceoff from Walt Tkaczuk.

"He was beating me all night," Martin said. "But finally in the third period, I seemed to be getting my timing back."

"Walter usually beats their guy on faceoffs," Francis said.

This time, Tkaczuk lost the draw; Martin swept the puck back to Hull and Bobby unloaded with an ice-skimming shot that buzzed just inside the left post before Ranger goalie Ed Giacomin had a chance to move on it.

centre who had missed two exceptional scoring opportunities in the final moments of regulation time.

"It was due," said Martin with a laugh.

Abel To Blues?

DETROIT (AP) — A Detroit sportscaster said Wednesday he has learned that Sid Abel, former coach and general manager of the National Hockey League Detroit Red Wings, will be named general manager of St. Louis Blues.

Dave Diles of WXYZ-TV broadcast on his evening sports show that Scotty Bowman, current St. Louis general manager, would be replaced by Abel.

"I can't reveal my source but he is very reliable," Diles said.

"He also told me that Harry Sinden, former Boston coach, would be sought by Abel to be his coach at St. Louis," he added.

TV Toss-up

TORONTO (CP) — There will be National Hockey League action on television this weekend, but who's on the air is still up in the air.

The CBC has four possible combinations:

1. If both Montreal-Minnesota and New York-Chicago series go seven games, both will be shown—in Montreal at 8 p.m. EDT Saturday and in Chicago at 2 p.m. EDT Sunday.

2. If only the Minnesota-Montreal series goes seven, the telecast will be Sunday at 2 p.m. in Montreal.

3. Should only New York-Chicago go seven, the Sunday, 2 p.m., telecast will be the only one and it will originate from Chicago.

4. If both series end in six games, the first game of the Stanley Cup final will be broadcast Sunday at 2 p.m., also from Chicago.

Chicago and Montreal lead their series 3-2 in games.

Outfield Carries Giants

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

San Francisco Giants' outfield has been carrying the load in recent games.

Willie Mays singled home the winning run Tuesday night and Bobby Bonds and George Foster got into the act Wednesday night as the Giants defeated Atlanta Braves 5-3.

Foster tripled two singles, a double and his third homer, driving in three runs, and Bonds slammed home run No. 8 as the pound Phil Niekro.

Elsewhere in the National League, New York Mets battered St. Louis Cardinals 9-1, Pittsburgh Pirates held off Los Angeles Dodgers 4-3, Chicago Cubs blasted Montreal Expos 8-2, Cincinnati Reds edged San Diego Padres 6-5 and Houston Astros downed Philadelphia Phillies 4-3 in 10 innings.

Mays and Bonds are old hands at hammering National League hurlers. Now Foster is coming on strong after a slow start.

"He's starting to feel like he knows he can do it," said manager Charlie Fox, whose club leads the West by 4½ games. "He's a good looking hitter and he's strong."

Foster rapped a run-scoring single in the first inning, an RBI double in the fourth, a solo homer in the sixth and another single in the eighth. Hank Aaron, who got his 600th home run a night earlier, drove in two of the Braves' runs, singling into a sixth-place tie on the all-time list with Mel Ott at 1,860.

The Mets, who whipped St. Louis 12 times in 18 games last year, made it three in a row over the Cards behind Ed Kranepool's continued hot hitting and Gary Gentry's seven-hit pitching. Kranepool drove in three runs with a pair of many hits.

Ron Santo's infield hit with the bases loaded in the ninth inning gave the Cubs their winning run and foiled Montreal manager Gene Mauch's strategy of a five-man infield to protect against a ground ball finding a hole. Santo's roller struck third base. Jim Hickman homered for the Cubs' first two runs.

The Reds got home runs from Johnny Bench and Lee May but needed a leaping bases-loaded single by Tony Perez in the ninth inning to defeat San Diego.

Bucks Dodge Bullets for 3-0 Stranglehold

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Milwaukee Bucks, forced to beat back several Baltimore surges, defeated the Bullets 107-99 Wednesday night to take a 3-0 lead in their best-of-seven National Basketball Association playoff championship.

The Bucks can wrap up the title with a four-game sweep by beating the Bullets Friday night in Baltimore.

Milwaukee's victory ended a courageous Baltimore attempt that saw the Bullets repeatedly appear to be out of the game, only to storm back within striking distance of the explosive Bucks.

Dandridge paced the Bucks with 29 points while Lew Alcindor added 23 and Oscar Robertson 19. High for Baltimore were Jack Marin with 21, Wes Unseld with 20 and Kevin Loughery with 19.

Sam Whistling

Sam McDowell wasted more wampum and Cleveland Indians paid their ace southpaw that he could take his fastball and go and whistle in the dark.

So all of a sudden, Sam settled for $72,000 and unhappily reported to spring training camp this year, vowing to have a great season despite bitter feelings against manager Alvin Dark.

"I intend to have another good year for the Indians, but that doesn't mean I have to like working for them," said the strikeout master.

The best-laid plans of pitchers often go astray, however, and McDowell is off to one of his worst starts. He hasn't won a game, and Wednesday night departed suddenly before Cleveland took a 3-2 decision over California Angels.

Prior to Wednesday night's decision, McDowell lost 3-0 to Baltimore Orioles, 4-0 to Washington Senators and 5-2 to Kansas City Royals.

In the other American League games, Boston Red Sox battered Milwaukee Brewers 10-3, Washington tripped Minnesota Twins 4-3, Detroit Tigers edged Kansas City 2-1 in 10 innings and Oakland Athletics took Baltimore 5-4. Rain postponed Chicago at New York.

McDowell waited a long time before deciding to report to spring training.

Dark said the contract made McDowell the second highest paid pitcher in the American League. Baltimore's Dave McNally was first with a reported $85,000.

McDowell, however, was seeking $100,000.

Favorite Ajax Amsterdam and outsider Panathinaikos Athens qualified Wednesday night to meet in the 1971 European Cup soccer final at London's Wembley Stadium June 2.

Panathinaikos became the first Greek team to reach the final of Europe's top club soccer competition when it staged a remarkable second-leg comeback to beat Red Star Belgrade 3-0. The Yugoslav champions won the first leg 4-1, making the aggregate score 4-4, but Panathinaikos won as away goals count double in the event of a tie.

Ajax also scored a 3-0 victory over Atletico Madrid and reached the final for the second time in three years.

OTTAWA (CP) — Dennis Duncan has decided to stay in Canadian football another three years at least, he announced Thursday.

In a telephone interview from his home in Monroe, La., the burly fullback said he had returned a signed two-year Canadian Football League contract to Ottawa Rough Riders earlier in the day.

It took Duncan—6-2 and 234 pounds—about five weeks to make up his mind about joining Ottawa after Montreal Alouettes traded him to Winnipeg Blue Bombers and the Bombers dealt him to Ottawa.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Last getting to Churchill Downs and first getting to the Kentucky Derby finish line, that could be Jim French Saturday.

Frank J. Caldwell's consistent and much-travelled Santa Anita Derby winner was the last Derby candidate to get to the track, arriving by plane Wednesday from New York.

Jim French's name and those of as many as 20 other three-year-olds were expected to be dropped into the entry box for the 97th running of the Derby. Entries were to close at 9:30 a.m. EDT, today.

Other leading Derby hopefuls included Arthur A. Seelbinder Jr.'s Unconscious, the Calumet Farm entry of Eastern Fleet and Bold and Able and the George Poole-trained duo of Wendell P. Rosso's Impetuosity and Pastorale Stable's Twist The Axe.

Five Canadian-owned three-year-olds were still in the running early today although none of their owners had officially paid their entry fees.

PINEHURST, N.C. (CP) — Rain cut the North and South Amateur Golf Tournament here Wednesday and the only two Canadians in the field were washed right out of contention.

Defending champion Gary Cowan of Kitchener, bowed 2 and 1 to Pete Zaccagnino of Hartford, Conn. Wayne McDonald of Port Colis, Ont. went under 1 up to Bobby Wadkins of Richmond, Va.

MONTREAL (CP) — Gary Player will compete for the 1971 Canadian Open golf championship at Montreal's Richelieu Golf and Country Club July 1-4, it was announced Wednesday.

Already entered are Arnold Palmer and Doug Sanders.

The last time Player competed in the Canadian Open was in 1968 when he placed 10th behind winner Bob Charles at the St. George's Golf and Country Club in Toronto.

Common Market Meeting Likely

LONDON (AP) — France and Britain are informally exploring the possibility of a summit meeting between Prime Minister Edward Heath and President Georges Pompidou before the summer on Britain's bid to join the European Common Market, authoritative sources said today.

No definite plans have been made so far, partly because of a desire to avoid undercutting the next key round of negotiations in Brussels May 10-13 at foreign minister level.

Should those talks end in deadlock, officials here say, pressure is likely to build for a Heath-Pompidou meeting to help resolve the impasse.

Alternately, if the May session in Brussels makes substantial progress, a Heath-Pompidou summit could lead to final approval of entry terms.

Reliable informants said both Paris and London are considering a summit meeting by July, probably in the French capital, but neither yet wants to take the initiative and ask for one.

The French are insisting on tough terms in Brussels, which the British consider unacceptable, while still saying they want the British in.

In the British view, the major outstanding issues on terms of entry must be resolved by summer if the negotiations are to succeed.

Foreign ministers meeting once a month in Brussels have failed to make headway at four such sessions this year. Only the May and June meetings are left.

Goyer Says Conference on Prisons Possible

TORONTO (CP) — The constitutional division of responsibility for correctional services may soon be the subject of a federal-provincial conference, Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer said Wednesday night.

He told the John Howard Society of Ontario that the federal position on recommendations covering this area in the Ouimet report on corrections is awaiting cabinet consideration.

Mr. Goyer made no reference in his speech to the recent uprising at Kingston Penitentiary where one person was killed and 11 others injured.

He also refused to comment on the Kingston situation after the meeting.

Several members of the society, which tries to rehabilitate prisoners after their release, said they were disappointed that the minister did not talk about the country's penal system.

They said that because of Kingston there was a general decline of morale among guards and those assisting prisoners.

Speaking on possible action on the Ouimet proposals Mr. Goyer said:

"As soon as they are accepted in principle by the government, we shall approach the provinces with a firm proposal for their review, and as a result we might soon hold a federal-provincial conference on corrections."

Text of his address was made available before delivery.

Of 118 recommendations made by the corrections committee under Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet of Montreal, 58 had been implemented, he said.

The major outstanding issues in the area of divided constitutional responsibility were:

—Integration of institutional custody and parole supervision within the same jurisdiction.

—Involvement of mental health services in the field of criminal justice and corrections, "with the thorny problem of assessing who is dangerous and who is not."

—The problem of the imprisoned female offender and her custody closer to family and friends.

—Preparation of a federal corrections act that would embrace all jurisdictions and segments of the correctional process.

—Length of sentence as a sole criterion for the division of responsibility for imprisoned offenders.

—Revision of the Prisons and Reformatories Act, a process now under way.

Other Ouimet proposals would also require study on a national scale, Mr. Goyer said. These involved the principles on which the system of criminal justice and corrections rests.

"Detention should not cut the inmate off completely from the outside world," he added. "On the contrary, we should create for him the normal conditions of the human being. . . ."

This raised the problem of conjugal visits to prisons, sale of produce from prison industries on the open market, community release programs, smaller prisons nearer and even inside large cities, schooling programs and better facilities.

Mr. Goyer also said that although the federal government provides grants of more than $1.25 million to private agencies "it will obviously be up to the agencies to expand their services in those areas where the previous assistance by means of grants was considered by them to be less adequate."

Number of Judges Raised

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill to increase the number of federally-appointed judges by 12 to 441 and to raise their salaries by up to $9,000 a year was given first reading in the Commons Wednesday.

Lower retirement ages and improved pension provisions are included in the legislation, by which the Judges Act and Financial Administration Act would be amended.

The bill also provides for an increase in the salary of Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson to $30,000 by next Jan. 1 from the current $32,000.

Quebec PC Asks Party to Support Liberal Program

OTTAWA (CP) — The Quebec wing of the Progressive Conservative party will be asked to approve the principal demands of the Quebec Liberal government at the party's provincial convention in May. By doing so it will be rejecting, in certain cases, the official policy of the federal party.

Fernand Alie, leader of the Quebec wing, has asked in a letter to Yvon Sirois that resolutions pertaining to Premier Robert Bourassa's demands in the field of social security, manpower and housing be included on the convention's agenda.

"We must; I feel, avoid burying the real problems which our party must study under a jumble of useless procedures," Mr. Alie said.

Mr. Alie suggested the following fundamental resolution be studied:

On social security: "Attention should be given to the Quebec government's just demands to bring social security and the related taxation powers back under provincial control."

On manpower: "Because of the educational implications of provincial jurisdiction and the need for a better regional planning, Quebec should be given back control over manpower and related powers of taxation."

On housing: "To get out of the administrative imbroglio involving three levels of government, Quebec should be given control over housing and related taxation powers."

Mr. Alie also asked for study of resolutions pertaining to constitutional revision, reorganization of the party and changing the party's name.

Party reorganization would provide parity in number of English- and French- speaking persons in all party structures and organizations.

In another letter to Mr. Sirois, secretary of the provincial wing, Mr. Alie said that the party's provincial council clearly specify that it still has confidence in him.

Mr. Alie has been asked by the council to make it clear, when speaking on controversial issues not part of established party policy, that he is expressing his own ideas and not those of the Quebec wing.

In an open letter to Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, published in a Montreal newspaper before the federal meeting April 20, Mr. Alie said the party's Quebec wing might not survive the next federal election if it does not present policies more acceptable to the Quebec electorate.

In Montreal, Mr. Stanfield declined to discuss his recent differences with Mr. Alie, but said he has no definite plans to appoint a Quebec lieutenant to lead provincial forces in the coming federal election.

Mr. Stanfield said in an interview: "Leadership in this province could come from a number of deputies."

Mr. Stanfield said he is opposed to Mr. Alie's concept and favors his own "flexible federalism" philosophy.

Unusual Job Said 'Bargain'

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario is getting a bargain although the province is paying a trade and development department executive's travelling and living expenses in Toronto, the legislature's public accounts committee was told Wednesday.

The committee was investigating expenses incurred by Lylah Lyonhumer, chairman of the women's advisory committee of the department of trade and development.

In his annual report, provincial auditor George Spence recommended that Mrs. Lyonhumer be permantly stationed in Toronto.

She now commutes here from Port Colborne each week and spends five days in a hotel.

Stuart Clarkson, deputy minister of trade and development said the department is happy with the arrangement because otherwise it would have to hire two persons to take her place.

He told the committee she serves as director of the committee as well as its chairman. However, she prefers to commute because she doesn't like living in Toronto.

When she became chairman of the committee in 1964 it required only about two days a week and her travel and living expenses amounted to $5,121 along with a salary of $4,400.

But because the scope of her job has grown, she now must spend five days a week in Toronto—many of them long days —and she receives $13,726 a year in salary.

Last year her travel and living expenses amounted to $5,925. She also had speaking engagements outside Toronto.

Mr. Clarkson said that if she retired the government would have to find a new committee chairman and an executive director and this would mean an extra $3,000 to $5,000 more than her combined salary and expenses.

Mr. Spence said he hoped her arrangement "would not be standard treatment for all civil servants."

The committee also investigated the lateness in the annual report of the Ontario Housing Corp. and was told by OHC spokesman P. R. Goyette the problem "was essentially one of growth."

He said that in the past five years the OHC has grown from a staff of 80 to one of 600 and has undergone a number of reorganizations as the government has stepped up its program in the field.

He added that the report is late because the OHC works on the calendar year-end to conform with municipalities rather than the province's fiscal year-end at the end of March.

Farmers May Again Withhold School Tax

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Federation of Agriculture threatened Wednesday to ask its member to withhold taxes again this year unless the provincial government agrees to pay 100 per cent of education costs from personal and corporate income levies.

The federation said in a brief to Premier William Davis' cabinet that farmers expect support for their plans from ratepayers' groups and tenants' organizations.

OFA president Gordon Hill, a Huron County hog farmer, said the federation has set no deadline for a commitment by government.

Cable Tax Suggested as Pill for Ill TV

MONTREAL (CP) — A third Canadian television network and a tax on cable television systems were two medicines proposed Wednesday for the ills of the TV broadcasting industry.

Al Bruner of Toronto, president of Global Communications Ltd., told the Canadian Radio-Television Commission that a third network could produce more Canadian programs and swallow up U.S. shows now viewed by Canadians on American border stations.

Toronto Telegram publisher John Bassett, president of Baton Broadcasting Ltd., urged the CRTC to introduce a 50 cent monthly charge per subscriber on cable systems using the CTV Television Network Ltd. programs. The money would be given CTV to meet microwave transmission costs.

The two ideas were outlined at CRTC hearings on the future of cable television in Canadian broadcasting.

The commission said in a February document that the future of Canadian broadcasting is threatened if cable is allowed to grow as it has.

The commission said that American television stations carried on cable draw viewers away from Canadian stations, making these outlets less attractive to advertisers.

Earlier, R. C. Fraser, a CBC vice-president, suggested that Canadian advertising could be screened on all channels of a cable system to help balance the loss of audience to U.S. stations.

In another brief, J. R. Peters, president of British Columbia Television Broadcasting Ltd., said his company is ready to spend $1 million to delete advertising from U.S. border stations for Vancouver and Victoria cable systems.

Canadian advertising could be substituted, he said.

Mr. Bruner said that a third network would carry a lot of the American programming now watched by Canadians on U.S. stations. These shows could not be acquired by the CBC and CTV networks because they did not have enough programming time.

The new network would also produce more Canadian programs and advertising dollars now flowing from Canada to the U.S. would return to Canada.

Interviewed later, Mr. Bruner would not say whether he plans to seek CRTC permission for a third network.

Mr. Bassett said he did not think that cable operators should be allowed to "march in and get a free ride." Cable operators do not pay broadcasters for their programs picked up off the air on community antennas and fed to subscribers.

He said the monthly charge would bring in $7.7 million annually from about 1.3 million homes receiving cable TV. This money would go to the CTV network to pay for current microwave costs of $2.25 million annually and future expenses in extending the system.

Mr. Bassett said he would not exclude the CBC and private affiliates of the CBC from getting money from their own tax on the cable systems.

Mr. Fraser said advertising on regular television could be duplicated on all channels of a cable system. This would mean the advertiser's audience would be as large as it was before American stations drew viewers away from Canadian outlets.

Stuart Griffiths of Ottawa, President of Bushnell Communications Ltd., said the integration of cable with conventional television should be encouraged.

He said the CRTC could require cable operators and broadcasters to produce plans for corporate union when they come before the commission for licence renewals.

Mr. Griffiths also called for a single utility to own cable distribution systems across Canada.

Lottery Office

Lotteries are hailing in big money in at least five Canadian provinces. Quebec, with its provincially-legislated Loto-Quebec, hopes to net $22 million annually. Loto- Quebec booths have been set-up in shopping plazas throughout the province. In its first eight months, the Quebec lottery grossed $21,057,800 and distributed $5,830,200 in cash prizes.

Chicken and Egg War

Olson Says Advertising Disservice to Farmers

OTTAWA (CP) — Newspaper advertisements criticizing the government's farm products marketing bill have done the farming communities a very great disservice," Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson told the Commons Wednesday.

The ads, which have appeared recently in several newspapers, attack the legislation and ask readers to send a coupon to Jack Horner (PC—Crowfoot), a leading critic of the measure which has been before the Commons and in committee for more than a year.

"I am not in any way responsible," Mr. Horner said.

But he had been swamped with the coupons, and was always glad to help the farmers, he said grinning.

Mr. Olson said statements in the ad were erroneous.

The bill is aimed at quelling the anarchy in interprovincial and foreign agricultural trade which recently has sparked disputes among Ontario, Quebec and Manitoba in chicken and egg marketing.

The Commons today begins debate on the government's proposal to raise the salaries and tax-free expenses of MPs to $25,000 from $18,000 a year.

Senators would get raises to $22,000 from $15,000, and salaries of judges and senior public servants would also be increased.

Earlier, the Commons passed through second reading and sent to the labor committee a bill raising the minimum wage in industries under federal jurisdiction to $1.75 an hour from $1.65.

Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey said the increase could force firms to streamline their methods and automate production.

"They must decide whether they will continue paying the minimum wage and remain inefficient, or reduce the work staff, introduce a greater degree of automation, and . . . put their industry in a competitive position."

In debate on the marketing bill, Mr. Olson denied Mr. Horner's charges that it would balkanize Canada by allowing regions to bar the goods of other regions.

Instead, it would permit provinces to work out co-operative arrangements to market agricultural goods.

Canada Council Grants Aid Book Publishers

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canada Council today announced $472,175 in grants for publication in the humanities and social sciences.

Most Canada Council support of scholarly book publication is channeled through the Humanities Research Council and the Social Science Research Council, which were awarded block grants totalling $143,900 for publication in 1970-71.

A grant of $25,800 was also awarded the University of Toronto Press and Les Presse de L'Universite Laval to assist publication of a volume of the Dictionary of Canadian Biography, an historical work published separately in both English and French.

The Arctic Institute of North America receives $15,000 for publication of the Arctic Bibliography; the Royal Ontario Museum in Toronto receives $10,000 for publications in art and archaeology: and the Journal Industrial Relations, Quebec, receives $7,827 for a cumulative index for 1945-1970.

Special publication grants totalling $22,000 go to four periodicals: Etudes Internationales, International Journal, Journal of Canadian Studies, and Pacific Affairs.

The council also awarded grants totalling $247,548 to assist publication of 29 learned journals in the humanities and social sciences that publish the results of original research.

Shabby Advertising Should Go: Basford

TORONTO (CP) — Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford called on newspapers Wednesday to assist his department "in ridding the market place of shabby advertising practices."

In a luncheon address to the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association, Mr. Basford suggested that, although newspapers are exempt from certain terms of the Combines Investigation Act, they give reasonable scrutiny to their advertisements.

"I know you all aspire to the highest degree of accuracy in the news stories which your papers carry," he told the group's advertising-sales luncheon. "But do you feel any similar sense of responsibility with respect to the ads you carry?"

Mr. Basford said one of the top priorities of his department is an amendment to the Combines Act, which he said would continue to bear down hard on the misleading advertiser.

"As you know, the Combines Act exempts offences by 'a person who publishes an advertisement that he accepts in good faith in publication in the ordinary course of his business,'" he said.

This provision is intended "to obviate the necessity of newspaper publishers who publish thousands of ads every day, especially in the classified columns," from having to maintain individual records. "But is there a responsibility to make sure that at least newspaper display ads are truthful?" he asked.

Mr. Basford consulted the papers that carry public-service columns, including those by women's editors and consumer affairs specialists.

"The high readership of these features points to the ever-growing interest in consumer news," he said.

Referring to British Columbia's recent legislation which will ban tobacco and liquor advertisements, Mr. Basford said he was "delighted he (Premier W. A. C. Bennett) took the action he did."

However, Mr. Basford said he did not want to give the impression that newspapers should cut back sharply on their advertising.

"What I am saying is that where a certain type of advertising, promoting certain commodities, is shown to be detrimental to the well-being of Canadians, then there is a public interest to ensure a certain quality of advertising in what that product conveys.

"On the other hand, the recent New York legislation which calls for a tax on advertising is not what I have in mind."

Period of National Grandeur Said Needed by Canadians

MONTREAL (CP) — Jean Chevrier, a young lawyer and author of a book on the Canadian constitution, told the parliamentary committee on the constitution Wednesday night that Canada needs a new period of national grandeur.

Mr. Chevrier, son of former federal justice minister Lionel Chevrier, said Canada at present is at odds with its past, but must reorient its outlook and look to the future.

"The political leaders must present new challenges and new frontiers for Canada."

The joint Senate-Commons committee hearing attended by an estimated 60 persons, was the first in a predominantly French - speaking district of Montreal. It produced heavy heckling at times and proceedings were interrupted several times by chants of "Le Quebec aux Quebecois" — Quebec for Quebecers.

Paul Unterberg, unsuccessful separatist Parti Quebecois candidate in the 1970 Quebec general election, spoke from the floor as an individual.

In answer to the question, "Wael does Quebec want?" Mr. Unterberg presented the committee with about 30 books and tracts outlining separatist and near-separatist positions by Quebec spokesmen.

A young woman speaking from the floor said she had felt racist humiliations from English-speaking Canadians in the suburb where she grew up, but said there was a change when terrorist bombings began during the 1960s.

"The more bombs, the less the English laughed at us," she said.

One formal brief suggested a presidential regime with the president having the same functions as the Governor-General now has. It recommended five regional provinces, four of them recognized as English-speaking and one—Quebec—recognized as French-speaking and a permanent constitutional council to keep the constitution up to date.

A formal brief presented in English said Quebec's problems are not constitutional but social and it was immoral for the committee to be wasting time and talent on anything but social problems, including poverty and unemployment.

Canada's constitutional problems could be solved by ensuring a decent standard of living to all Canadians.

A brief from the Polish-Canadian Association said a new constitution should enshrine French-language rights in schools, courts and government dealings in all provinces.

Three Charged with Holdup

VANCOUVER (CP) — Three former Quebec men were charged Wednesday night with the $227,500 armed robbery at the Bank of Montreal branch in Vancouver General Hospital Pavilion.

Norman Kenneth MacDonald, 31, and Kenneth John Harber, 27, both of Hanwy, and Robert Yvon Robic, 24, of Burnaby, will appear in provincial court today charged with committing the biggest robbery in Vancouver's history.

Police said charges less than 36 hours after three men staged the holdup Tuesday.

However, police are still searching for $226,690 in bills.

The bags containing $1,310 in silver—nickels and dimes—were left behind by the two gunmen and the accomplice driver when they ditched the stolen get-away car hot rod from the hospital.

Two men with handguns moved quickly into the bank Tuesday morning after an armored car dropped off the three bags. The one containing the bills weighed 175 pounds.

The three suspects are from Quebec province, but have been living in British Columbia for months, police said.

Report Wanted On Bonaventure

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons public accounts committee plans to call two cabinet ministers before it to tell what action has been taken on last year's hard-hitting report by the committee dealing with a costly refit of the aircraft carrier Bonaventure.

Informed sources said Wednesday the government has accepted a committee request that it be given authority to question Defence Minister Donald Macdonald and Supply Minister James Richardson on the subject.

A motion to this effect was expected to appear soon on the Commons order paper. The meeting with the two ministers could take place about the third week of May.

The 20,000-ton Bonaventure, since taken out of commission and sold to Japanese interests as scrap, underwent a mid-life refit between April 25, 1965, and Sept. 1, 1967, that cost $17 million compared to an originally-estimated $8 million.

The committee, following a highly-publicized investigation sparked by a reference to the refit in a report by Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson, said it had found "unsatisfactory estimating procedures, miscalculations and poor administration."

The committee's report last May 13 was considered one of the most scathing ever tabled in the House. It broke new ground by alleging on a number of individuals, including two deputy ministers, a lack of blameworthy in the refit episode.

It recommended that the departments concerned "determine the reason why departmental officers involved in the refit performed in the manner they did and also take appropriate action to ensure that such inefficiency be eliminated in the future."

"This will require changes to the system under which they work and may require disciplinary action in regard to personnel involved," said the report.

The committee requests that it be informed of action taken in regard to both procedures and personnel involved in this refit."

It is to ascertain what corrective steps were taken by the two departments that the committee, under chairman Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington), wants to question Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Richardson.

Mr. Richardson's department, which has responsibility for defence contracting, was known at the time of the Bonaventure refit as the defence production department.

The meeting, when it does take place, may prove one of the liveliest of the current parliamentary session.

As government House leader when the report was tabled, Mr. Macdonald was highly critical of the committee, and particularly chairman Hales, for making specific attacks on particular public servants."

It was understood that both Mr. Macdonald and Mr. Richardson have consented to appear before the committee and give the desired accounting.

Davey Says Consumers Could Form Press Body

OTTAWA (CP) — Senator Keith Davey (L—Ontario) proposed Wednesday that a consumers group should take steps to set up a national press council if newspaper publishers drag their feet.

Senator Davey, chairman of a special Senate committee on the mass media which recommended establishment of a press council, the upper chamber that newspaper opinion has been divided about the recommendation.

Referring to current Toronto meetings of Canadian newspaper publishers, the senator said he hoped the Canadian Daily Newspaper Publishers Association would make some progress this week towards a press council.

"If not, then the ball is back in the court of consumers, such as the Consumers Association of Canada, who might very well take the initiative," he said.

Senator Davey wound up debate on his committee report with a speech of almost three hours that reviewed reaction to the study since it was published Dec. 10.

Senator Davey reiterated that the committee had proposed no government involvement in press councils.

But too many publishers continue to reject the idea even of the minimal reader involvement in newspapers proposed by the committee, he said.

Color TV Kit: Can of Paint

TORONTO (CP) — Even the Consumer Protection Bureau can't solve them all.

A spokesman for the bureau, a wing of Ontario's financial and commercial affairs department, told Wednesday of a complaint from a citizen who replied to an advertisement in a magazine published in the United States.

The complainant sent $15. He got a can of paint and a brush.

NHL Under Investigation

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Complaints from a players' association have brought about a U.S. justice department investigation of the National Hockey League, the Rochester Democrat and Chronicle reported in this morning's editions.

In a copyright story by Hans Tanner, the paper said the Professional Hockey Players Association had submitted 27 pages of individual player complaints to federal investigators.

The Justice Department was astounded at the amount and contents of the information we provided," said Cpt. Leichner, the association's general counsel.

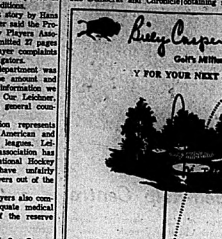
The association represents players in the American and Western hockey leagues. Leichner said the association has charged that National Hockey League rules have unfairly forced many players out of the game.

He said the players also complained of inadequate medical payments and of the reserve clause which binds a player to said a justice department his team.

"We feel the hockey players, especially those on the minor league level, are being exploited," Leichner said.

The Democrat and Chronicle obtaining statements and information from other sources said a spokesman had confirmed the investigation, saying:

"We'll be contacting the various National League teams in the near future. We have been in business in this country...



Leichner said the player's grievances concerned rules for so-called "developmental" clubs." Under NHL rules, he said, 16 of the 18 players on development clubs must be under 26, with goaltenders exempted.

Leichner said that when the NHL expanded, each club was required to have a development club, forcing many older players out of the game.

He said the players have charged that they were discriminated against because of their age.

Leichner said he and his law partner had been gathering evidence since November and have met with justice department officials several times.

All but eight of the 280 players in the American and Western Leagues belong to the association, he said.

Golf strategy is perhaps a subject complicated by the best golfers. Any golfer, no matter what his handicap, can devise a strategy to his advantage.

It comes down to playing for your next shot, whether off the tee, fairway or from short of the green. There are hundreds of choices to be made. I'll assess just one good one for the middle golfer.

On a long par-3, one you don't reach 'under ordinary circumstances, and one that has sand bunkers to the side — there is a "comfortable" chu and play to the front of the green field. Take a chance on a chip and putt for a par. Avoid a bolder shot from sand which you might hit with a longer club (dotted line).

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Mother Is Advised 'Lay Off' Girl, 15

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Our daughter is 15 years old and our only child. She is considered to be an attractive girl but has a developing acne that had habits lately. As much as I nag her into quitting them, she keeps on — and seems to get worse.

First, she used to wrinkle her nose into ugly facial patterns. When I talked her out of that, she began to wrinkle her forehead and squint. (An eye exam showed she has normal vision.) Later she began to bite her nails, which she has bitten down almost to her knuckles.

Right now she can't seem to do well in school. She has lost her self-confidence. I have been strict with her, but it doesn't seem to help. Is there anything else I can do? — Mrs. D.

* * *

Comment: Yes. To use the vernacular, you can "lay off". I get the impression that you are keeping her "pressurized". There's enough tension in the normal process of growing up during the teen years without a child's having to bear the intolerable pressures of a parent continually.

I have said quite often, and it bears repetition here, that the most difficult "change of life" is adolescence — rather than the menopause. Think of what the new, emerging personality of a youngster has to adjust to: playmates, peers, school, examinations, sexual drive, and other innumerable strains.

Add to these a home and parents, or parent, who give her no opportunity to find a relaxiful haven from the outside tensions, then you transform the youngster into one who is unduly tense and nervous.

* * *

I am not making you out as ogre, Mrs. D. You asked for this advice and I am trying to give it to you honestly. I think you will find that her various facial tics, grimaces, nail biting and other nervous manifestations will lessen and disappear if you disregard them for a while and become less strict and nag her less.

As a mother, just see that she gets a well-balanced diet, enough rest at night, and more freedom to grow up without too much restraint. I am not plugging for "permissive ness" or any other psychological theory of child rearing. Simply suggesting, as I said earlier, that you let up on the pressure.

Give her a few more months to straighten out under easier home conditions. If she still seems to be a problem, I think it will be time for your pediatrician's advice. Meanwhile, let mother nature take over to guide your daughter through her change of life. Adolescents need authority, but not too much of it.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: A cousin of ours has developed tuberculosis. One of the drugs she is using makes her dizzy and has disturbed her hearing. Isn't there anything new in the treatment of tuberculosis? Are new drugs re any thing? — Mrs. Y.

Comment: As compared with years ago, we have come a long way in the prevention and treatment of tuberculosis. For some time the standbys have been such medications as streptomycin, isoniazid and PAS (as indicated).

Lately, two new important factors are under study: ethambutol and rifampicin. Whichever, whatever, or whenever any of these drugs is used in tuberculosis management will depend, of course on the physician's judgment. Submitting the new medicines may overcome the ear complications, but don't, under any circumstances, let your cousin try self-experimentation with such potent medicines.

Government Control Feared Of Content of New Books

TORONTO (CP) — William C. Heine, editor of the London Free Press, said Wednesday that once a government controls the purse strings of a publishing company the next step is control of content.

Mr. Heine was referring to the recent $961,000 loan provided by the provincial government to McClelland and Stewart Ltd.

However, he told the royal commission on book publishing in Ontario, failure to control foreign-controlled subsidiaries in Canada would result in the disappearance of "independent Canadian publishers."

He suggested that school boards be forced to buy 60 to 75 per cent of their textbooks from Canadian-controlled firms. Mr. Heine, who resigned as chairman of the United Church of Canada's division of communications when the church sold Ryerson Press to a United States firm, said the educational field is the backbone of the Canadian book industry.

In a brief earlier Wednesday, the Canadian Book Publishers' Council urged the federal government to strive to have Canada excluded from the manufacturing clause of the United States Copyright Act.

Under provisions of the clause no more than 1,500 copies of a book written by an American citizen but manufactured outside the U.S. can be imported into the U.S.

The council said the clause reduced the Canadian publishers' chances of publishing the work of Americans resident in Canada.

Council President Campbell Hughes also expressed concern over the increased amount of publishing done by the Queen's Printer which, he said, could be done better by professional publishers.

Jack E. Stoddart, president of the General Publishing Co. Ltd. said the Canadian market is developing rapidly as Canadian authors write more and better books.

Canadian market is developing rapidly as Canadian authors write more and better books.

Mr. Stoddart, whose firm distributes Canadian textbooks, films and trade books in addition to foreign works, urged that libraries buy books from Canadian suppliers.

Such purchases would create greater revenue for Canadian firms allowing them to publish more books at a lower cost.

James Lorimer, editorial of a fledgling Toronto publishing house, told the commission that specialty Canadian publishers should be allowed to operate in Canada.

"We should repatriate the industry as soon as possible," said the official of James Lewis and Samuel.

Fat Diet Brings Loss Of Hearing

TORONTO (CP) — A person's diet may play as much a part in hearing loss as excessive noise levels, a noise researcher with the National Research Council said Wednesday.

Dr. G. J. Theissen of Ottawa told a conference on noise in the environment, sponsored by the Conservation Council of Ontario, that recent findings had thrown some doubt on the validity of a 1954 study indicating that a noisy civilization was promoting deafness.

Dr. Theissen said the earlier study showed that visitors to the Wisconsin State Fair of 1954 who were in their 20s had no better hearing than a group of Africans in their 70s, while older North Americans had much poorer hearing.

He said the study was accepted by many people as proof that environmental noise caused hearing loss. However, recent research in Europe had shown an association between hearing loss and high-cholesterol diet, typical of North Americans.

Prof. V. L. Henderson of Acoustica Ltd., Toronto, urged the conference against "scare campaigns" that claimed all city dwellers in North America would be partially deaf by the year 2000 because of growing noise levels.

Travelled Fool Intolerable

Thoughts at Large:

The idealist ultimately fails because he refuses to accept the limitations in man; the realist fails because he refuses to accept the possibilities in man; only a creative fusing of these two attitudes can produce a man who works both with what we are and what we could become.

* * *

A bovine person will call himself "serene," and a nervous one will call himself "energetic"; but true serenity is as far from the bovine as true energy is from the merely nervous.

* * *

* * *

Most people want tyranny and freedom at the same time: the tyranny of being told what to do by their leaders, and the freedom of escaping the consequences if these policies turn out badly.

* * *

The fold wisdom that there are two laws, one for the powerful and another for the weak, goes back at least as far as Diogenes in the 4th Century B.C., who said: "The great thieves lock up the little thief."

* * *

It is hard to believe that even the word "scientist" did not exist when Thomas Edison was born.

Lushness of climate is always coupled with laziness of effort: as Charles Colton neatly put it long ago: "In all countries where nature does the most, man does the least."

* * *

In the past, homosexuality was regarded as a "vice"; today we make the opposite mistake of regarding it as a "sickness"; whereas, in my opinion, it is simply a case of arrested development, and no more an "illness" or "perversion" than a failure of the voice to change at puberty.

* * *

Ordinary folk like each other well without knowing each other well; clever people know each other well without liking each other well; and both groups are only dimly aware of what they are missing.

A disciple is a man who faithfully follows his teacher until he has been dead long enough for his blemishes to be misused and misinterpreted for ends wholly alien to his original purpose.

* * *

An ignorant and apathetic electorate only has delusions of power; as Bonhoeffer keenly observed, when a strong man comes along, he forces such a public "to decide between alternatives they have not chosen themselves."

If you'll dip into a dictionary and learn how a seeker of public office came to be called a "politician," you'll realize how far politics has departed from its linguistic origins.

Quebec Precious Ally: Bourassa

Leeway Needed to Develop Identity

TORONTO (CP) — After a critical year as head of the Quebec government, Premier Bourassa told a gathering of Canadian newspaper and communications executives Wednesday night, he tries to deal with Quebec's difficult problems on the basis of fact and not rhetoric.

He said Quebec faces the double-edged issue of trying to protect the French way of life while dealing with the complicated social and economic problems that all governments have to work their way through.

To explain his government's approach to such questions as Quebec's place in Canada, its need for economic revival and the removal of unequal standards among citizens, he said he prefers to examine the "very substance of things."

He indicated that "theorical disputes or prestige battles" have little interest for him.

The 37-year-old government leader addressed the annual dinner of The Canadian Press, Canada's news co-operative. Newspaper executives from all parts of the country were among his audience. Premier William Davis of Ontario, with whom Mr. Bourassa conferred earlier Wednesday, was among guests.

Mr. Bourassa was guest speaker at the dinner which each year is addressed by a leading public figure. His speech was on the eve of the first anniversary of his Quebec election victory in April, 1970.

The premier said Quebec should be given room to move under the constitution of Canada to develop a "true identity of its own."

"Obviously, a re-arrangement of the constitutional powers in such matters as culture, social affairs and communications must be undertaken," he said.

He felt that Canadians should not consider Quebec to be a problem but, because of its distinctness, a factor that would contribute to Canadian identity.

The liveliness of the French culture in Quebec was demonstrated by such things as the success artists and performers from Quebec enjoy elsewhere in Canada.

This was part of exchanges that involved students, technicians, workers and professional people. Press, radio and television also contributed to the better knowledge of each other by the English and French cultural communities in the country.

"Notwithstanding the present difficulties, there are good reasons to believe we are on the road to an increased understanding among the country's different cultural groups, thus consolidating Canada's unity and strengthening . . . an original and dynamic Canadian identity," Mr. Bourassa said.

Mr. Bourassa, who used English and French alternately, said that during his visit to Europe, ended last week, he heard talk of the possibility of a common currency. Use of a common currency would also involve use of taxation powers and this would lead to a form of federalism.

When such a tendency toward federalism existed in other parts of the world it would be dangerous to destroy the federal system in Canada, he said.

He described Quebec as representing a "true French culture" that was not only use of a particular language but was also "a way of being, a way of living and thinking which goes to the very core of the Quebec environment and represents an obvious advantage for Canada."

"More and more, English-speaking Canada seeks to protect itself against American encroachment. In this quest for true Canadian identity, Quebec is a precious ally, an exceptional asset."

He asked that the country at large recognize the contribution Quebec's distinctness represents. For its part, his government had the responsibility of promoting development of the "French personality" in the province's public institutions, in education and in the labor field.

Quebec's belief was that it had much to offer Canada by pursuing such a course and Mr. Bourassa said Quebec must be able to "depend on the rest of the country."

Quebecers were aware of the fact their birth-rate is declining and that immigrants either go to other provinces or merge into the English-language community in Quebec.

He said that if the population of Quebec became a progressively smaller proportion of the Canadian population, a problem of concern to all Canadians would result.

The influence of members of Parliament from Quebec would decrease and policies of bilingualism and biculturalism would become more and more difficult to justify.

"Pressures and tensions would become so heavy they would end by jamming the country's political and administrative mechanisms," Mr. Bourassa said.

Should the people of Quebec then try to solve the problem of their cultural identity outside of Confederation, Canada would lose the "French presence" — one of its most solid cultural elements, he added.

The Quebec premier said his government's approach to Canadian constitutional problems was based on the "substance and essence of things."

"Quebec wants to make an original contribution to reinforce a truly Canadian identity, and it will be able to achieve this so long as the Canadian confederation will allow it to participate fully in the solution of the problems of the country as a whole."

Labor Leaders Wryly OK Raise

TORONTO (CP) — Two Ontario labor leaders Wednesday supported the idea of salary increases for members of Parliament—but wondered wryly what people would say about the same increases for union members.

David Archer, president of the Ontario Federation of Labor, offered a guarded endorsement of the federal government's proposal to increase MPs' salaries to $18,000 from $12,000 a year and their tax-free expense allowances to $8,000 from $6,000.

"If you don't think a man is worth the $26,000, you can put somebody in who is," he said.

"My only objection is that a raise of this size supposedly doesn't affect the economy, but some poor textile worker gets a 35-per-cent raise it's supposed to wreck it."

Harry Simon, regional director of organization for the Canadian Labor Congress, supported a proposal by New Democratic Party leader David Lewis that salaries of MPs be tied to a civil service formula for annual increases.

Sex Play Said Normal

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Rehearsing sex play in preparation for the real thing in adult life is a normal part of childhood, a John Hopkins University medical specialist said here Wednesday.

Dr. John Money said it is a normal aspect of childhood to go through such actions just as it is for a kitten to chase a ball pretending it is a bird. The kitten in effect, he said, is practising for the day it will hunt a bird as an adult cat.

Dr. Money, an associate professor in the departments of medical psychology and pediatrics at John Hopkins in Baltimore, Md., said parents need not become upset by movements and actions of their children that may in many ways resemble sexual overtures.

He was speaking to a symposium on sexuality at the Children's Psychiatric Research Institute.

Women's Clubs Want Guarantee of Equality

MONTREAL (CP) — The 5,000-member Canadian Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs recommended Wednesday that any new or revised Canadian constitution contain a guarantee of equality of men and women.

Federation President Charlotte VanDine, noting that the present constitution does not contain such a provision, told the special joint parliamentary committee on the constitution that "full acceptance of women . . . in law without any disabilities will do much to aid women to assume a status in society also free of disabilities."

She described any discrimination on the basis of sex as "indefensible."

The federation is a non-sectarian, non-partisan organization of women working in business, industry and professions.

Reeve Recalls Middle East Service

PICTON (Staff) — Guerilla warfare employed in 1962 by Yemeni soldiers fighting in the Middle East thwarted the late Egyptian president Nasser's campaign to control their country, Picton reeve Albert Piroth, formerly a member of the United Nations Emergency Force in Egypt and responsible for a mission in Yemen, offered this observation at a Rotary Club luncheon yesterday.

Mr. Piroth suggested the war in Yemen closely resembled today's warfare in Vietnam since both stressed "purely guerilla tactics."

He added that Nasser, who saw himself as the leader of the Arab nations, intervened in Yemen when a power breakup followed a conflict of interests between the Royalists and the Yemenis.

Nasser supported the Yemenis with a force of 50,000 troops which he later withdrew.

Mr. Piroth remarked that it was his feeling that with 500,000 troops the Egyptian leader would have found it impossible to control Yemen because of guerilla warfare. He reminded that serving with the UN he discovered it was "our job to provide service into this hotbed and preserve peace to the best of our abilities."

Because the Saudi - Arabians favor talk above action, Nasser was eventually deserted by them. Jordan's King Hussein offered limited assistance but refused to leave "his back door open".

"Believe it or not the Egyptians had a rather effective armored corps but they dug it into the sand dunes and swung the turrets toward Israel," said the retired serviceman. He remarked that the Israelis would have to move around this force to advance to the Suez. This was done since the Israeli forces knew the location of the Egyptian tanks. "In three days they secured the whole of Sinai," he recalled.

Mr. Piroth theorized the Egyptian troops did not really "have their hearts in fighting" but the opposing Israeli forces were battling for their lives. He said that Egypt had no naval forces at that time and, to his knowledge, still have no ships. Mr. Piroth reflected that if Nasser wanted to get into conflict it was necessary for him to withdraw from Yemen and embark on the Holy War.

The speaker compared the Arab's attitude toward the Israeli people to that of Adolph Hitler's feeling toward the Jews.

"What happens today if the Middle East situation doesn't clarify itself?", reflected Mr. Piroth. He noted the Egyptian situation seems unchanged.

The Israeli military have two types of excellent aircraft, the U.S. Phantom and the French Mirage.

The Egyptians now have three aircraft types, the MiG 17, and MiG 21 and the MiG 23.

Mr. Piroth said the only relieving feature is the fact that the MiG-23 is too sophisticated for Egyptian pilots. We will see only Russian pilots in the MiG 23.

"I don't think these two forces will ever tangle deliberately," said Mr. Piroth.

Although Egypt has no naval forces, Mr. Piroth said that he is disturbed by the Russian fleet roaming the Mediterranean Sea at will for the first time in history. He mentioned his concern with submarines as well and remarked, "We know there are submarine pens at Port Alexandria."

He suggested that such a force aimed against Tel Aviv could practically annihilate it. The Picton reeve emphasized that he does not consider himself an expert on the Middle East but he does have predictions for its future. He described the area as "still a hotbed".

Mr. Piroth accompanied his talk with color slides of the Middle East where he was stationed in 1967. Among the scenes depicting life in this area of controversy was a camel market. Camels are still used for plowing in Egypt and one furrow is plowed at a time. He commented that the concept of producing more for less did not appeal to farmers when attempts were made to introduce newer methods.

"It is no crime to steal in the Middle East. It is only a crime to be caught," declared the speaker. He pointed to a picture of a child whose hand had been amputated and said that this is the customary punishment meted out to thieves. If the criminal does not mend his ways he may lose both hands. One thief was decapitated during Mr. Piroth's visit to the Middle East.

Mr. Piroth described his service in the Middle East as a colorful period in his life and occasionally a dangerous one. He retired from the armed services in 1963 with the rank of Colonel and settled in Picton, his wife's hometown. He is now active in municipal affairs and is affiliated with a real estate firm with a branch office here.

Asparagus Delayed By Weather

PICTON (Staff) — Low spring temperatures have delayed Prince Edward's asparagus crop this year but growers should begin cutting this week. Robert Cobbledick, fruit and vegetable specialist for the Ontario department of agriculture in Prince Edward County said the crop will be harvested "later than usual."

Asparagus grown locally is not sold to processors but instead marketed through country stores. Quantities of this vegetable also are sold by the farmer directly to the consumer. Mr. Cobbledick explained that approximately five acres of asparagus are grown in Prince Edward by from three to five farmers. Although local interest in growing asparagus low, the fruit and vegetable specialist feels it has excellent potential here and is an ideal alternate crop. He added that asparagus grows best in sandy soils, partially because they warm more quickly than other soil types. For the crop to grow, spears must penetrate the soil. Mr. Cobbledick remarked that heavy soils would impede this growth and are unsuited to asparagus. He discussed local enthusiasm for growing asparagus crops and commented optimistically, "several persons are nibbling at the idea."

Asparagus is not the ideal crop for the impatient farmer, Mr. Cobbledick observed that asparagus crowns planted this spring cannot be harvested until 1973. It would then be possible to harvest the crop for only two weeks. In 1974 the grower could extend the cutting period to four weeks and by 1975 could continue the harvest for six weeks.

418 Wing Members Mounting

Four long - term members of the Belleville 418 Wing RCAF Association, were honored at the regular April meeting that was highlighted by a mass initiation ceremony.

Qualifying for 20-year pins were Jim O'Bryan and Jim Ritchie, while Lorne Foley and George Mackey received 15-year recognition. The presentations were made by Wing president Ed Karbeck assisted by membership chairman, Tom Riley.

Three husband and wife teams were included in the 23 new members initiated. With this added membership Tom Riley feels confident, as he welcomed the newcomers to the club, the 418 Wing would retain the trophy won in 1970 for the largest percent membership increase. Ontario wings will be judged for awards at the May Provincial convention to be held in Hamilton.

Ed Karbeck noted that due to the large number of members that plan to attend this convention, the next regular meeting will be shifted one week.

The main business of the May meeting will be the nominations conducted by Jim Lynch, for the election of officers in June. To be followed by a film showing the antique aircraft that will be participating in an antique aircraft fly-in scheduled for Mountain View in June, sponsored by Toronto Regional RCAFA Wings.

Litter Lift June 19

The Moira River Conservation Authority is litter conscious.

The authority will again this year sponsor its "litter lift" day for the elementary schools in Belleville, Madoc, Tweed, Foxboro, and Cannifton. This fall the authority will also provide litter bags for distribution from the office of George Ohes, motor vehicle licence issuer at Belleville.

Elementary school children from the above centres will be invited to take part in the litter lift day scheduled for Saturday, June 19.

Also at last night's meeting of the authority, information and education Committee at Canniffon, it was decided to again sponsor booths at the June 25-27 canoe festival in Belleville and at the Quinte Exhibition in August.

The meeting heard a detailed report of this spring's sugar bush demonstration at the Charles Irvine bush at Foxboro and of the pancake festival held in the Moira Community Hall.

Also a report was heard from authority school program co-ordinator Principal Bert Frink on arrangements for the 1971 conservation schools at the Vandervelder Area and at O'Hara Mill.

Wayne Brooks, director of outdoor education for the Hastings county board of education, told the meeting that the interest of school children in the historical O'Hara Mill and homestead was increasing rapidly and he expected school visitations to the site would quadruple within the next year of so.

Underbrushing for Parks Development

Development of new park area on the west side of Moira River below Highway 401 sees sophisticated machinery being brought into play for the cleanup operation. Burning of brush is frowned on for reasons of air pollution control so parks employees are using a chipper to get rid of it.

Housing Trend Still Developing

In Belleville, the same as most other cities across Canada, the housing trend has been to apartment living, but the Construction Index of multiple family units to single family residences may now have about reached its peak.

Last year approximately 75 per cent of all new housing construction in Belleville was of the multiple family type and again this year department house type construction is continuing strong.

But at least one Belleville builder — Maurice H. Rollins Construction Ltd. — feels that the single, family-type residence is again gaining slightly in popularity.

"We are selling single family residences almost as fast as we can build them," said James Cathcart, sales manager for Rollins Construction.

Local realtor Gerald Joyce said in his experience, sales of speculative houses had been down although there had been some recent improvement.

Mr. Joyce felt the trend was definitely a swing to apartment living.

Some of the new demand for single family residences is from Canadian Armed Forces personnel being moved to the big Trenton air station, but Mr. Cathcart says that lower down payments and low-mortgages is also a factor.

And, also, some apartment house owners still hedge a bit about renting apartments to families with children and this alone strengthens the demand for single family housing.

But even with the recent increased interest shown in single family housing, apartments are still going up in almost every section of the city where there is permissable zoning.

A recent check by a local builder indicated that there are at least 180 apartment units now under construction or still not rented.

And by his own admission, this total included only the units he knew about personally.

"There are at least two high-rise apartments planned and not included in the total, while there are also many others of which I have no definite knowledge."

Already this year, several permits have been taken out at city hall for apartments with a dozen or more units.

And there are several structures with up to 36 units now going up in various parts of the city.

That the demand for apartment accommodation continues strong is the fact that in most cases a big percentage of the units are already rented — even before the structures are completed.

Who are the owners of many of the apartment structures going up in Belleville?

According to Rollins Construction it is private individuals rather than companies.

"We build them (apartment houses) for sale," said Mr. Cathcart. "We have a couple already sold which are not even started."

Apparently the availability of financing is such that apartment houses can be purchased with comparatively low down payments with rentals carrying mortgage payments and other expenses.

These private individuals are buying apartment houses as an investment and realize "a pretty good return" on their money.

Records at city hall show that construction of apartment house units as compared with single family houses is continuing at about the same ratio as a year ago.

During the first four months of this year there were permits for 70 multiple family units as compared with 19 for single family residences.

In the same period last year the ratio to the end of April was 68 multiple family units to 11 single family structures.

When adding a room to your house, try to pick a location where an existing window or door can be used as a connecting passageway. By doing so, costs are reduced because the existing opening already will have a functioning header.

Mice Scuttle Garden Plans

The little rodents ate two-thirds of the yellow and blue violas planned for Bishop Parkette and the City Hall bed this year.

The violas are the only plants the parks department has room to raise — all other planting materials used to beautify the city must be bought from nurserymen.

Tulips and grape hyacinths will soon be blooming in Bishop Parkette without the contrast of yellow violas as originally planned. Tulips donated last year by the local Dutch Association will bloom again in Memorial Park and the familiar wooden and concrete beds will be out along Front and Pinnacle Streets and in Market Square.

Last year perennials were planted in Dorf Park at the end of Sidney St. on Public Utilities land. Until the clumps spread out they will be interplanted with annuals for summer show.

The only park where garden displays will be curtailed is Panter Park on Coleman St. along the river. Construction there has resulted in some ripping of the sod and a full program of gardening won't go into effect there this year.

Garden Tools Deserve Good Care

If dirt was left caked on the spades, rakes and hoes, brush off all you can. Use a wire brush to remove any rust, the wipe all metal surfaces with a cloth soaked with motor oil. This may do the trick and you won't have to replace your gardening equipment. A light coating of liquid wax on the wooden handles helps to preserve them.

You may have been one of the careful gardeners who did a thorough job of "laying up" your equipment. Then you're all ready to go. Here's a tip you will find convenient: stow your hand tools in a tote bag. This can be made of heavy canvas with a shoulder strap to make carrying easier. Or, it could be a wicker basket or a fruit basket which you have around.

Check your equipment needs for a hand spade for uprooting and replanting small shrubs and plants; a fork spade for loosening the earth; grass shears for trimming, and pruning shears to cut out branches and stems. If you are setting out new bulbs or transplanting, you will want to include in your tote bag a handy bulb planter with the twin tongs that dig a neat hole. Keeping the small garden tools in one carrier can save a trip back to the house for the rake, rail trimmers, or whatever you need.

All Together Now

With the coming of spring, a facelift became necessary. Last week the city-wide cleanup campaign got under way with residents unloading unneeded bric-a-brac and garbage for city workmen to load up for the dump.

WANT TO ENJOY A GREAT SUMMER?

Come up to Shawano now and see our outstanding offering of lots and cottages for year-round living.

The selection is wide enough to suit every need and budget. The smallest lots are ½-acre (four times the size of an average city lot). Larger lots are available, or you can buy two or more and have your own estate.

There's no need to be a pioneer at Shawano. The cottages are superb! All 72 cottage plans were designed exclusively for cosmopolitan Shawano's lakeside woodland setting.

In fact, they're year-round vacation homes rather than cottages. The finest quality construction materials are used throughout.

Lot prices start at $4,900 with 10% down payment and low 6½% mortgages. You can buy lot and cottage for as little as $12,877 with $1,300 down and excellent mortgage arrangements. The price includes heavy-duty wiring, plumbing and government approved septic systems.

This is going to be a big year at Shawano. Come and choose your lot while there is a wide selection. We can have your vacation home ready within a few weeks or you can take up to 2 years to build. Act now and enjoy a wonderful Shawano summer.

Why Shawano? It's a unique, 1,500-acre paradise vacationland in the historic Highlands of Hastings. Marvelous resort, year round clear lakes, wildlife, hunting, bass and trout fishing, golf, tennis, etc. Only 2 hours from Toronto, 3 hours from Ottawa, 4 hours from Montreal. Shawano is the Shangri-La of the entire east.

Buyers' Market for Apartments?

With today's emphasis on apartment construction, there any danger of the supply catching up with the demand, and if so will the apartment dweller be able to pick and choose?

One man who feels there is just that possibility is Belleville realtor Mr. Gerald Joyce.

With the large number of apartment units being constructed in Belleville it may be that landlords will have to provide more amenities," said Mr. Joyce.

Such amenities might take shape in the provision of more parking, enlarged sizes of bedrooms

Experts Say Plant Groups Give Best Decorative Effect

An attractive display of container plants can improve appearance of the home — both in and out of doors.

As a decorative and horticultural rule of thumb, keep in mind that plants look best when grouped together.

Unless a single plant is really outstanding, a grouping of both foliage and flowering plants makes a definite statement, and can be used functionally—as a "natural" room divider, or to fill in an empty corner.

Plants more readily adjust to their environment when kept together, since the humidity in the surrounding air is increased.

Remember to select plants with their ultimate location in mind. Don't try to grow sun-loving mums in a shady spot, or pots of African violets in direct sunlight.

Outdoors, too, location is an important factor. In choosing pot plants for a shaded patio, fuchsias or tuberous begonias are logical choices, since both need protection from direct sun.

Another decorating and green thumb rule to follow is to select and keep all the plants in porous red clay pots. A cluster of plants looks best in similar containers which do not detract from the appearance of the plants.

The amateur gardener can also be more confident that the plant itself will not fail because of overwatering, if it is kept in a porous clay pot. The walls of the pot allow excess water to evaporate, so plants never become water - logged.

It's best to check with a local florist or garden store on the most healthful environment for each plant selected.

The Inside Story

Building is playing an active part in the beautification of the city. Several projects in various stages of completion at the present time are expanding the boundaries of Belleville. Dry-wall forms base for choice of paint.

Homebuilders Take A Tour For Strategy

Members of the Quinte Homebuilders Association recently toured Kitchener, Ontario, to view subdivisions and report back to Belleville on the possibilities of a tour for civic officials.

Randy Loewen, QHA president, explained that the homebuilders association wants to lobby for zoning changes under the new urban renewal study.

To help back up requests for rezoning, the local builders wanted to make use of reduced standard lots in Kitchener. These lots provide for a higher density with sizes of streets and lots reduced, allowing for increased building on lots.

"We had hoped for something a little better," the QHA president said. "There denser populations could be housed.

However, members had wanted to see areas on which is nothing wrong with avenues such as Hastings Drive.

Rather than tour any more cities, the Quinte Homebuilders will "have to come up with plans for zoning within the city allowing for semi-detached and condominium housing."

These plans would ask for rezoning to allow for the aforementioned type of housing.

Mr. Loewen said the new urban renewal plan for Belleville is too heavily zoned for apartment living and Montgomery Blvd. as far as a residential district is concerned."

When planning to prune your roses, remember that severe pruning tends to weaken the plant. The fewer leaves th plant has, according to nurseries, the less food it can manufacture using the energy from sunlight. Also, pruning away dormant wood eliminates food reserves.

Maynooth-Area Farmers To Investigate Market

Farmers' markets for the sale of local produce need not be limited to the Niagara district or to populated centres in the south end of the county.

At least that is the belief of a group of Maynooth area residents in North Hastings who have visions of operating an open market in their village this summer.

A steering committee has been set up and an open discussion meeting is scheduled for this (Thursday) evening. Attending the meeting will be county agricultural representative Douglas Tipper, who will bring along John Vandenburg, department specialist at Vineland to offer suggestions on the operation of roadside stands.

Mr. Tipper says the idea of an open market at Maynooth was locally initiated.

"We have thrown in a few suggestions, but it is their own decision," he said.

If the market stand materializes, home grown vegetables and locally produced bakeds will be featured initially.

"It will not necessarily be limited to farmers but a cross section of the community will be represented."

A local group of church women initiated the idea after realizing the success of their bake sales which usually were sold out in a couple of hours.

Fruit stands operated by outside vendors would be allowed.

Mr. Tipper said that Maynooth stores are not geared to the selling of fresh vegetables and look favorably on the idea. One local storekeeper has even offered the free use of a vacant property for the market stand.

The market would cater generally to the tourist trade and if it gets the go-ahead signal would operate on Saturdays, hopefully getting under way during the latter part of June.

Marmora Theatre Reopens Today

MARMORA (Special) — Marmora's Plaza Theatre reopens on Thursday, April 29 under new management.

The theatre has been purchased by Bill Moon of Campbellford who also owns and operates the New Avon Theatre in that town.

The Plaza Theatre was closed when Charles Alexander was taken seriously ill and has remained closed for several months, much to the disappointment of Marmora residents, particularly the young people.

Mr. Moon is married and has four children, two of whom live in Kitchener and Niagara Falls. Mr. Moon also operates Bill's Radio and TV Service in Campbellford.

The theatre will reopen with one show nightly, Monday to Thursday, and two shows nightly, Friday and Saturday, plus a Saturday matinee.

Mr. Moon intends to employ as many local residents on his staff as is possible.

Police Own Work

Homebuilders to Have Approval Seals

The Quinte Homebuilders Association, which provides a policing of building standards in the Quinte area, will soon have its own seals of approval for members.

At least, as soon as they have chosen their new name.

Their national affiliation, the National Homebuilders Association of Canada is presently up for certification to become the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada.

Quinte Homebuilders president Randy Loewen said Wednesday the QHA had been working for almost a year to make use of these symbols when their national organization applied for a change of name.

"The seals will be given out to each and every member to attach to work by members not afraid to back up their work to the extent of the guarantees," said Mr. Loewen.

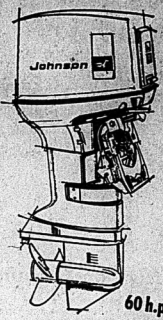
The seals, a mark of good craftsmanship would be proudly displayed on homes.

To ensure excellence, the Q.H.A. scrutinizes members. "We're becoming even a bit selective," the president commented.

Complaints from dissatisfied customers of QHA members get prompt attention from the executive, "even for some little thing." The homebuilders looked into one complaint about a month ago and contacted the contractor who fixed the problem . . . "a minor one."

Since the organization's inception, in 1956, it has grown to a membership of 45 area builders, suppliers and building subtrades who employ "a goodly number of people in this area . . . between 700 and 800," said Mr. Loewen.

"Certain people have opted out," of the QHA, but "the original concepts have been improved and enlarged." The Quinte Homebuilders now welcome professional people affiliated with the building industry into the club; representatives of organizations such as banks and mortgage companies.



"It's all part of the game."

And as a sign of their attempts to improve the reputation of the local building industry, Mr. Loewen, of Loewen Heating and Air Conditioning Ltd., said that members who don't adhere to the QHA code are no longer members.

The builders association meets generally on the third Wednesday of the month at Sun Luck Gardens on North Front Street.

Guest speaker for the May 10 meeting will be National Homebuilders Association Ontario council chairman Alex Kelly of Hamilton.

'Orderly Growth Assured'

Developers Frustrated By Provincial Controls

Since implementation of Bill 163 of the Planning Act of Ontario, provision of subdivision controls has drastically restricted land splits in the Belleville area.

Only a small percentage of applications for land splits are approved.

Bert Kenny, Belleville and Suburban Planning Board planning director, explained that "control is essential for orderly growth. . .it's obvious this is what the minister (Darcy McKeough, minister of municipal affairs, 1970) had in mind by putting controls all over the province."

The planning director went on to say that the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board "had controls before" they came from the minister.

Planning board secretary - treasurer Art Jones explained the purpose of the subdivision controls. "If you have a parcel to divide, you can't divide it if you retain any abutting interest; that is, you can't sell half and keep the other portion."

Mr. Jones explained that splits can be granted by land division committees "but they consider the possible future development of the area" before going ahead with the plan. "No one can divide without going through subdivision procedures, committees of adjustment or land division committees for consent."

But contrary to opinions expressed at planning board and local township meetings by irate land-owners who have been refused subdivision consent, the government is not arbitrarily refusing land splits. The small proportion that are granted, coupled with the more weighty scale of refused applications is for proper and orderly development of a municipality.

Indiscriminate spotting of subdivisions across the municipalities has been eliminated. Applicants with proposals that come within a registered plan of subdivision or who receive consent to transfer land, are not restricted by the subdivision control revisions of August 1970.

Most heavily affected municipality in the Belleville region is Sidney Township. Reeve Jack M. Bush, owner of Riverside Construction company said that "90 per cent of applications for land splits were appealed by the Ontario Municipal Board."

He said the hearings concerned with 18 lot splits were both turned down.

"Because the minister appealed (recommendation of the committee of adjustment) doesn't make it final. It has to go before a board hearing," he emphasized.

Sidney Township building and plumbing inspector, George Caves said Tuesday morning that "enthusiasm has dropped off but interest is still there."

Although specific figures are not available, "I have a feeling applications might be down from last year."

However, all is not lost in the township. "There are several places in the township with legally registered lots and plans" for which the committee of adjustment doesn't need to be consulted.

"These lots, some west of Frankford and others on Highway 2, received approval before subdivision controls went into effect and people are building," siad Mr. Caves.

One of the major problems which required severe subdivision controls were cases of subdivisions spotted across townships, sewage and water distribution difficult to maintain and install.

"If owners prove water and sewer available, they're (the OMB) half-heartedly interested," concluded Mr. Caves, who added, refering to the subdivision controls, "they're probably good for us in the long run."

Thurlow township clerk Clare Horton said his township had not experienced severe hardships when the Bill 163 came into effect.

"We had a subdivision control of our own for the whole of Thurlow township in September of 1969; we only had land-use bylaws for a portion of the township before that" he said.

Two factors governed a cut by almost half in the number of land split permits put before the OMB.

Between May of 1969 and May of 1970, 132 permits were approved, but many of these were concerned with easements for an Ontario Hydro power line.

The drop to 78 permits between May of 1970 and April of 1971 is "due to the fact that the department in Toronto has appealed decisions of the committee of adjustment.

"We have been slowing up," stated Mr. Horton.

"The restrictions are so tight, it's almost impossible to consider some of them."

Keeping Things Straight

Another hole has been dug in the Country Club Village, and what is a hole in the mud now, will soon become a home. To make sure that all is going well, surveyors check the layout of the basement so that work can continue.

Builders' Group Moving

The Quinte Construction Association will open their new offices at 162 Front Street, the old Ontario - Intelligencer building on Saturday, May 1.

This move is concurrent with that of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and the Ontario Motor League.

Postal address, Box 726, and phone number, 962-3377, will remain the same.

Plans on display at the new offices will be ones illustrating re-roofing lean-tos and boiler room at hangar two, Mountainview; sidewalk construction plans for the town of Napanee; the new Liquor Control Board of Ontario store at Deseronto; campground washrooms in Cobourg; and exterior painting specifications for 23 buildings on CFB Trenton.

Paint Slides on Smoothly

It's amazing what a fresh coat of paint can do and that's what this city workman is doing at a city playground. Most playground equipment is stored away during the winter but items such as stationary slides get exposed to the elements. Hence the fresh coat.

Building Adds to Tax Base

Last year's record construction boom in the city will mean an additional $7 million in assessment on which to base 1971 tax requirements.

City manager J. R. Reynolds said this week that the 1971 tax base would be a whopping $134,464,181 as compared with last year's assessment figure of approximately $117,000,000.

Total construction values in the city last year was just over $15 million but properties are still not assessed at 100 per cent value and also certain types of properties such as schools and churches are tax exempt.

The former claim of municipal experts that resident tial properties didn't pay their way because of the increased services required doesn't have the same validity today, according to city manager Reynolds.

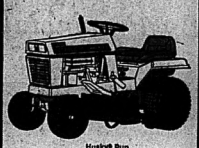
The reason is that the provincial government now pays a per capita grant of $6 to each municipality.

This grant last year saw Belleville receive $196,000 in provincial money and according to the city manager "went a long way toward evening things out".

The grant is applied only to residential assessments and allows the residential tax rate to be lower than that of commercial and industrial properties.

This grant made up about 2.6 mills of the 4.7 mill differential last year between the city's residential and industrial tax rate.

The old theory regarding straight residential construction in an urban community was that low value single family dwellings did not pay their way tax-wise.



Belleville's per capita grant of $196,000 is based on a city population of just over 32,500, the figure arrived at as a result of the last partical census.

The per capital grant figure will remain at the above amount until the population increases by seven per cent over the present base.

This means that the city's population will have to grow another 1,000 or so before the city can expect any increase from the present $196,000 per capita grant payment.

GRECENA GRASS and SOME ANNUAL PLANTS AVAILABLE FOR THIS WEEKEND

Building Boom Rolling Along

The year is still less than four months gone, but Belleville is already well on its way toward surpassing its 1970 record breaking total in construction values.

Last year the city saw building permits with a value of more than $15 million issued for all types of construction.

This year with still a day or so to go in April the total is already more than $5 million with one month — February — seeing only token activity in construction permits.

City building inspector Grant Stickle reported early this week that the April permit value issued at city hall was $1,307,475.

The January total was $1,837,438; that of February $234,800; and for March $1,856,550, making a total so far this year of $5,229,963.

The big item so far in this year's building total has been the issuance of permits for ancillary stores in the new northend Quinte Mall now under construction.

Permits for the multi-million dollar plaza have been issued in blocks rather than in a single over-all authorization.

First permit to be issued was that for Simpson's store, major tenant at the north end of the plaza. Next came the permit for the Steinburg food store which anchors the plaza's south end. In all there are approximately 25 smaller stores making up the fully enclosed shopping mall.

By way of comparison the city's building total so far this year has already exceeded Belleville's full year total of 1967.

That year saw $4,647,000 in construction permits issued. In 1968 the total was $6,887,000 and in 1969, the total was $9,882,000.

Mammoth Raking Chore

Plastic Bottles Useful

An intriguing tip for home gardeners is a way to utilize the empty plastic bottles in which liquid bleaches are packaged. By cutting the top off one of the bottles, you will have an excellent planter in which to start spring seedlings. The top with its built-in handle, need not go to waste, either. When the sides are sliced away, with a razor or sharp knife it makes a dandy funnel for pouring gasoline into power mowers, or pouring insecticides into spray gun tanks.

Putting out the rubbish for street-side pickup by the city works department is being made a "fun thing" by these two young girls. Regular garbage in bags or containers is picked up by the garbage collector while other rubbish and refuse is being picked up by the city works department in annual city-wide spring cleanup operation.

Rose Turfed Out

Miss Canada has proved to have a blemished history, and she's being turfed out of her place of prominence in Corby Park.

The rose that is, not the beauty queen, is being moved to a new bed next to William St. It formerly occupied the prize position around the fountain in the centre of the park.

Lloyd Iyer, director of parks for the city says that the rose has proved to be prone to mildew and black spot and gives a poor showing after its initial blooming in late June.

The heavy blanket of snow that covered the city this winter kept the Corby Park roses securely protected from zero temperatures. A somewhat slow spring has helped too, by delaying budding of the bushes until after danger of low temperatures is past. Most of the park's roses survived the winter in good condition and the display promises to be as lavish as ever this year.

Best all-around hybrid teas in the rose garden he lists as Tropicana and Queen Elizabeth. The best floribundas are Fashion and Little Darling, the director says. They have proved to be hardy, of good form and color and free flowering.

Wide Television Choice Impresses Hollanders

AMELIASBURG (Special) — A young couple from Holland, spending a week with relatives on the Rednersville road, considers the large number of TV channels available to Quinte area viewers an outstanding selling point for this part of Ontario.

The visitors from overseas are Mr. and Mrs. Hada Glashouwer of Hilversum near Amsterdam, both connected with the television industry in Holland.

The choice of programs here is unbelievable, noked noted Mr. Glashouwer, 28, who is responsible for one of the departments involved in evangelical broadcastings over the government - controlled network.

Whereas householders with TV sets in North America can watch activity on their screens in some places 24 hours a day, the only source of television in Holland is the government station, four hours daily — from 7 p.m. to 11 p.m. For this service each owner is assessed 75 gilders ($25) annually.

From observations so far, the Glashouwers agree Dutch programs are more serious. Viewing time is devoted to major sports events and movies, however. News is reported in five - minute segments at 7 p.m. and 8 p.m. daily. Commercials are concise and aired in the period between the two newscasts.

Mr. Glashouwer's pretty wife, Marion, decided on a career in television two years ago and is employed as a staff announcer. She's finding it hard to accept the amount of time allotted commercial advertising.

She says she has little tolerance for game shows from the United States but it was a guessing contest she participated in that made their trip to America possible.

Mrs. Glashouwer won the prize — a flight for two from Amsterdam to New York return — for her estimate of the weight of a Jumbo (747) Jet going into service with KLM, the Dutch national airline in July. Her guess was 360,000 kilos (720,000 pounds) nearest the correct figure of 700,000 pounds to any of the other submissions restricted to the media on a press tour in the giant aircraft.

The Glashouwers are staying with Mr. and Mrs. Gert Vandervelde and family of RR1, Belleville, until this weekend.

High Water A Worry

MARMORA (Special)—Flooding in the Marmora area is causing much concern as the waters rise to the highest level in 10 years.

Owners of cottages and homes in the Crowe River and Beaver Creek areas are becoming increasingly alarmed as waters flood their basements or rise to their doorsteps.

Mr. and Mrs. Doug Vilneff's home on Beaver Creek is almost completely surrounded by water. They are prepared to move the furniture from the recreation room of their split-level home if it rises any more.

Cottagers and resort operators such as Vern Caverly of Glen Alan Tourist Resort are concerned because the water is taking out docks and beaches.

The water level is being carefully watched. If it should rise much more the Marmora filtration plant could be flooded. Three pumps are in operation now to keep up with the flooding at the plant.

The dam committee of the Crowe River Conservation Authority, consisting of Chairman Walter van Steenburgh, T. Kurtz, and A. Walroth, accompanied by Robert Code, surveyor-general of the department of energy and resources management made a survey of the situation on April 22 from Alan Mills dam, south of Marmora, to the Deer Lake dam.

It has been realized for some time by the authority that more dams and reservoirs were needed to hold back the water in the northern lakes in time of flooding and are working toward that goal now.

Plans for the future also included putting some control dams on Beaver Creek, which adds its volume of water to the Crowe River, west of Marmora. As many stop logs as possible have been used at St. Olan, Potash and Kush Lake dams to cope with the situation.

Parks Department Is Gearing Up for Three Major Projects

Town beautification, said Lloyd Syer, director of parks, is an ongoing thing that isn't done overnight. "My department is working constantly in the job of cleaning, planning and redecorating the recreational facilities in the area.

"There is always something to do.

"At the moment we have two projects in various stages of completion, including complete park facelift and the developing of the sub-regional park to be located on the west shore of the Moira River," he said.

A third project for beautification will be the cleaning and developing of the waterfront area which will commence in the next few weeks. The area to be cleaned will stretch from south George St. to Herchimer.

"The reason this project has not yet been started is because of its connection with the government grant for summer incensive projects to provide employment," said Mr. Syer.

Altogether, there will be 21 men included in the incentive program. These men are working on the parks at the present time. This figure will increase to 28 for a six-week period to handle the waterfront project.

Wherever possible, said Mr. Syer, we will take full advantage of existing beauty and try to keep the park area as natural as possible.

"As in the case of Corby Park," said Mr. Syer, "it is meant as a place to sit and relax, not to play baseball."

In the larger parks such as Zwick's Island, complete renovation will take place to ensure that all is well for the coming summer.

This includes raking the entire area, repainting all playground facilities, expansion of the existing soccer areas, refurnishing of benches and picnic areas and tidying up the beach front.

The Moira River park project will be the biggest development scheme of the summer because of its size and unlimited potential as a recreation area.

"The potential of the area is tremendous", said Mr. Syer as he explained that this was one of the few areas in Belleville where all forms of recreation could be practised."

Bought by the Moira River Conservation Authority and leased to the town, "it will provide an area where anything can be done," said Mr. Syer.

At the moment there are seven men busy clearing the area of brush and tree stumps so that the grass can be mowed and the land developed later in the summer.

"One of our chief concerns, said Mr. Syer, is that we make sure that the land will be functional and not just s't there useless.

"For a city, the size of Belleville, we just don't have enough parkland and recreational facilities," noted Mr. Syer.

The problem, explained Mr. Syer is that we have a high density of people in the Belleville area.

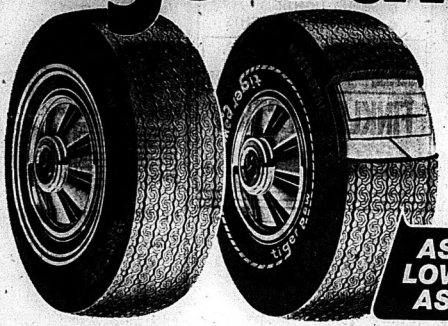
"With apartment projects there is no land where the tenants can relax," he said. "When you live in an apartment you have to migrate to a park area to make up for the back yard of the private home owner."

As more and more high-ris accommodations are built there will be a greater need for recreational areas, said Mr. Syer.

Areas such as Corby Park would be ideal if they could be placed near the apartment complexes. People can lose touch with nature living in the apartment complex, commented Mr. Syer.

Land usage is the most important factor in planning an area for recreation, always keeping in mind that if the need changes then the facilities can be changed to suit, he commented.

"We also plan areas, so as to make greatest possible use of the existing terrain."



"For this reason," continued Mr. Syer, "the west shore of the Moira River will be a gold mine of opportunity for the planners of the project."

Within the confines of the area there are plains and flat lands for sports, hills for winter time recreation, gentle rolling portions for picnic parties, the river and the quarry. There is every kind of leisure and recreation area all located in the newly acquired land.

TIGER PAWS are not ordinary tires. TIGER PAWS are built to meet today's most demanding driving needs and today's most demanding drivers. TIGER PAWS are high performance tires, so you know they're tough, and their name means sure-footed traction — rain or shine.

Built in the new 2+2 construction — 2 ply nylon cord body plus a 2 ply Hi-modulus Rayon belt. The 2 ply nylon cord body gives TIGER PAW its strength and endurance plus a superb ride. The 2 ply Hi-modulus belt provides greater hazard protection and more mileage than our non-belted tires. The tread is extra deep, a full 13/32". You don't have to baby TIGER PAWS to get mileage. Each tire has two sidewall designs. You can show the bold orange "Tiger Tail"-side or dual stripe whitewalls.

No matter what kind of car you drive — if you need the dependability of High Performance tires — you need TIGER PAWS.

'Found Any Treasure Lately?

The most notorious treasure collector of them all, Captain Kidd, sailed from New York in pursuit of pirates and instead became one himself. He captured great riches but made the mistake of sailing back to New York where he was caught and hanged in 1701.

People are still looking for Captain Kidd's treasure. Find another type of treasure by selling the family's no longer used things with an Intelligencer Want Ad. It's as easy as dialing 962-8171, mate!

Civil Servants—and Judge—Object to Guideline

Ontario's chief arbitrator on civil service wages, Belleville Judge J. C. Anderson, said yesterday he will ignore the five-per-cent guideline announced by the provincial government Monday.

Judge Anderson, chairman of the Civil Service Arbitration Board, also said he would not be swayed by threats of strikes made Wednesday by the Civil Service Association of Ontario.

Officers of the Civil Service Association of Ontario, Inc. announced they are preparing for a work-to-rule campaign or a possible rotating strike in the wake of budget announcements which indicated a five per cent limit on salary increases.

Following the Monday announcement by provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough CSAO ordered its 300 delegates to attend a special emergency meeting in Toronto on Sunday, May 9 to discuss the ceilings.

A telegram received by all

JUDGE J. C. ANDERSON

CSAO branches asked delegates to survey their work areas to determine "the minimum service that would be required to be maintained in order to guarantee the health welfare and safety of the government's wards and the general public."

The organization has charged that the "provincial treasurer is guilty of ridiculous presumption in stating that he expects no adverse reaction from civil servants."

Harold Bowen, general manager of the association explained in an interview that examples of work slowdowns would include delays in trucks passing through weigh scales and guards in penal institutions would obey prescribed procedures to the letter, waiting for accompaniment by other guards in instances where they now act alone.

Mr. Bowen said the government is wrong if he believes the gofternment can set a pattern that will restrain wages in private industry.

Delegates were also instructed to "continue to contact your local MPP until you are satisfied that he will press for a retraction of the five-per-cent pay-raise limit."

However, J. Roland Scott, the government's chief negotiator with the CSAO, said Wednesday he felt CSAO was bluffing on the strike threat and that government workers are satisfied.

"I don't think the association will get too much reaction in rousing them," Mr. Scott said.

Judge Anderson said the guideline had been misunderstood as a directive to arbitrators.

"I got the impression the government, like everyone else, is concerned by inflation and the high rate of taxes. They want to keep things in proportion."

The judge said, in a telephone interview, that he was sure Mr. McKeough "didn't intend to influence in unduly."

"Even if he did, our job is not to be improperly influenced by anything he said."

Judge Anderson said the tests in setting civil servants' wages would remain fairness and comparability with private sector salaries.

Economic Policies Make Kierans Quit

Plans Of PM In B.C. Secret

VANCOUVER (CP) — Most details of Prime Minister Trudeau's schedule for a weekend visit to Vancouver are being kept secret in an effort to avoid demonstrators.

Radical groups already have announced plans for demonstrations near two of his planned public appearances Saturday—the first day of May and traditionally a time for public displays of labor solidarity.

The itinerary released this week by the prime minister's office lists only two events for the day.

Mr. Trudeau is to open a new whale pool at the Vancouver Aquarium in Stanley Park at 3 p.m. and to be guest of honor at a Liberal party fund-raising dinner at 7:30 p.m. at the downtown Hotel Vancouver.

Monday, he and Mrs. Trudeau greet the Royal Family at Vancouver International Airport as the Queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne begin a 10-day visit to British Columbia marking the province's centennial.

Raw Goods Exports Not Road to Growth

'Does Bourassa know anything about wheat?'

OTTAWA (CP) — Eric Kierans, a man once damned for being obsessed with efficiency at the expense of people, has left the Trudeau cabinet saying too much technological efficiency too fast is hurting Canadians.

Declaring that the overriding objectives of all nations in the 1970s must be full employment, the 57-year-old minister of communications told Prime Minister Trudeau in resigning that his intention to challenge "long-established policies and practices" publicly would embarrass the government if he stayed.

The former economist, academic and financier will retain his Montreal Duvernay seat in the Commons.

Mr. Trudeau announced Thursday that Jean-Pierre Cote, minister responsible for the post office and the man who took a chunk of Mr. Kierans's portfolio last summer in a cabinet shuffle, would temporarily become communications minister.

In his letter of resignation, Mr. Kierans suggested the government is attempting to promote the rationalization of Canadian industry too quickly for the economy's long-term good, and depending too much on resource industries that don't provide many jobs.

The world is faced with a diminishing supply of non-renewable resources, the letter said. Canada was fortunate to have a good resource base, and could insist on exports with a high labor content.

"Tax concessions that force the pace of our raw material exports to favor the over-employment of capital, which we have to import, at the expense of labor which is in surplus would not be consistent with long-term Canadian growth and employment objectives."

In other words, take it easy on reducing the labor content of Canadian production and maintain employment, even at the expense of capital-intensive efficiency in the short term.

Ontario Gets Liquor Licence

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government has granted itself permission to run a licensed bar and restaurant at Ontario Place.

The Liquor Licence Board has approved licences for Pod 2, one of the buildings sitting above Lake Ontario at the $15 million showplace which opens May 22.

The board does not usually award a licence to a restaurant operator who has never held a licence until the restaurant has operated satisfactorily for six months to a year.

However, a board spokesman said in an interview Ontario Place was a "special case" and had to be "treated differently."

Nixon Won't Yield To Demonstrators

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon, speaking at a televised news conference, said he will not be intimidated by anti-war militants who plan to stop government employees from getting to work early next week by sit-downs in key Washington streets.

The president said he is prepared to be judged harshly by his youthful critics, but he insisted that his policy of gradual withdrawal from Indochina, giving the South Vietnamese a chance to survive, is the best way to peace, "not just in our time but in their time."

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada appears headed for partnership, of a kind, in the Organization of American States.

Informed sources predict arrangements will be completed before the end of this year allowing Canada to establish a permanent observer mission to OAS headquarters in Washington.

This could prove to be a first step toward eventual full membership in the inter-American organization.

Dump Dumped

Public Works sign department employees Moe Huddleston, left, and Glenn Parks today marked the official closing of the city dump on Bay Bridge Road at Zwick's Island by posting signs adjacent to the property. Land-fill and cleanup projects are not expected to get under way until the ground settles. As of this weekend, the refuse disposal site will be situated on Aikens Road in Sidney Township. Nuclear Plants Said Killers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. John W. Gofman, a U.S. Atomic Energy Commission scientist, said Thursday new calculations suggest that 104,000 extra cancer deaths a year could result if radiation from nuclear power plants reached levels now deemed permissible by the United States government.

His earlier estimates placed the alleged hazard at 32,000 extra cancer deaths a year.

Dr. Gofman has urged at least a tenfold reduction in the present permissible exposure for the average person from peaceful atomic energy activities. That limit is 170 "millirems"—units of radiation—a year to the entire body.

Queen Gets Checkup Before Trip

LONDON (AP) — The Queen, bothered by a lingering cold and cough, is seeing her doctor tonight for a checkup before starting out on a 10-day trip to British Columbia.

A Buckingham Palace spokesman said a health bulletin would be released after the examination but there was no suggestion that the trip, starting Monday, will be called off.

The Queen drove herself from Sandringham to her race horse stud farm Thursday.

Turner Answers Queries

Reporters question Justice Minister John Turner following his announcement that the Public Order Temporary Measures Act 1970, passed Dec. 3 to replace the War Measures Act, will be allowed to expire midnight today. (CP Photo)

Special FLQ Bar Will End

Public Order Act Will Expire Ending Unusual Police Powers

OTTAWA (CP) — The Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970, expires at midnight tonight, ending 197 days in which police held emergency powers to search, arrest or detain on suspicion.

Justice Minister John Turner told the Commons Thursday that membership in the Front de Liberation du Quebec would no longer be a specific offence, as it has been since Oct. 16.

However, he added, it would be illegal in the same sense as any conspiracy to commit crime.

This means reliance on the Criminal Code to convict suspected FLQ members, a step that brought a sharp response Thursday from the Quebec government demanding special legislation on a permanent basis to outlaw the FLQ.

It is known the cabinet had considered amending the Criminal Code to outlaw the FLQ, as the Communist party had been outlawed in the 1930s. But a lengthy cabinet meeting Thursday may have ruled out such a step.

Government House Leader Allan MacEachen was to place before Parliament a resolution to create a special joint Commons-Senate committee to examine the need for permanent legislation of the public order type.

Mr. Turner said the committee would seek out the need, if any, for new law "to deal with emergencies that may arise in the future by reason of lawlessness or violence in Canadian society that would endanger the existence of government or the maintenance of peace and public order."

Opposition MPs clamored for terms of reference that would enable the committee to look into last fall's dramatic events.

The federal government invoked emergency powers under the War Measures Act Oct. 16 after the Quebec and Montreal governments said a state of apprehended insurrection existed in the province.

The War Measures Act regulations were supplanted Dec. 3 with the Public Order Act, which also outlawed the FLQ but softened powers of arrest and detention.

Under the War Measures Act regulations, suspects could be held without charge up to 21 days. This was reduced to seven days under the Public Order Act.

Mr. Turner said that although it no longer would be a specific offence to belong to the FLQ, charges pending under the expired laws would remain valid.

This raised the intriguing prospect that persons charged with having been FLQ members before the FLQ became illegal could be convicted after it no longer was outlawed.

Retired New Democrat leader T. C. Douglas asked whether the decision to revert to normal criminal law meant Mr. Turner was "making a public apology to the people of Canada for having introduced unnecessary legislation."

He said David MacDonald (PC —Egmont), urged the proposed special committee be given the power to make a full evaluation of last fall's events.

Mr. Douglas said the committee should be able to call Prime Minister Trudeau and Mr. Turner "to get all the facts and information the government had at its disposal at the time it decided there was an apprehended insurrection in Canada."

When opposition MPs jeered after Mr. Turner said normal procedures will be used against the FLQ, he defended the 197 days of emergency law as "necessary to lower the burden of proof in a time of crisis, and more important, to extend powers of arrest and search."

Bourassa Flays Federal Decision As Showing Softness, Inconsistency

QUEBEC (CP) — The federal government's decision not to extend terrorist anti-terrorism measures beyond midnight tonight left Premier Robert Bourassa bitterly disappointed Thursday.

Mr. Bourassa told reporters that Justice Minister John Turner, who announced the federal government's decision in the House of Commons, showed "softness, lack of logic and inconsistency" in not deciding to present permanent anti-terrorism legislation.

It was the most strongly-worded criticism of the federal government by the 37-year-old Liberal premier since he came to power in the general election a year ago Thursday.

Mr. Bourassa said his government had acted responsibly in asking the federal government April 3 and again Thursday morning for permanent legislation to replace the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act, 1970.

"It's the responsibility of the federal government, and the people of Quebec and Canada will judge its actions," he said.

Mr. Bourassa wanted the federal government to replace the temporary measures with permanent legislation banning the FLQ and providing special measures to be used against terrorists in a state of emergency.

"For seven years, we have had many crises and much violence caused by the FLQ. That is reason enough for it to be declared illegal."

The FLQ had to be banned permanently to give the police and the courts "effective" means of fighting terrorism.

The expiry of the temporary measures without their replacement would "reduce the means at the disposal of the police," Mr. Bourassa said.

"The situation now is clearly under control, but we need the means to react when it is necessary."

Dump on Bay Is Now Closed

An eyesore for many years the site is being closed down with refuse to be disposed on a new land-fill operation on Alkens Road in Sidney Township. Operated by Commercial Refuse Services, the new 160-acre waste disposal site will eliminate unsightly garbage as a blight on the landscape.

Deep trenches will be dug with refuse and earth piled in layers. Harold Graham, of Commercial Refuse Services, said this morning there will be no chemicals used" to break down the garbage. The final layer of earth will be two feet deep.

At present, the city of Belleville has a $34,000 annual contract with the company for pickup and disposal of residential refuse. A similar contract with Sidney Township for $24,000 goes into effect immediately.

For commercial refuse, a clause in the city contract read: "special permits good for one year will be issued to any Belleville retail merchant operating his own or a leased pickup truck or light delivery wagon for the sum of $50 per annum".

Private individuals or commercial companies that with to dispose of waste beyond residential pickup will be charged the following rates, posted at the site:

— Automobile: 50 cents per load

— single-axle trucks over half-ton size: $3 per load

— tandem truck: $8 per load

— disposal of an old car: $5 each.

However, in addition to the special commercial permit, a five per cent discount in each of the above categories can be obtained by purchase of 25 load tickets from Commercial Refuse Services.

Mr. Graham, said full-time attendants will be on hand at the Alkens Road site between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m. — Monday to Fridays and between 8 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Saturdays.

There will be no dumping allowed on Sundays or statutory holidays.

City manager J. R. Reynolds, in a telephone interview this morning, said the old Zwick's Island dump would be "cleaned up with land fill from city project's" Levelling, filling and cleanup will be handled by the Parks Board.

However, "no large scale development will be undertaken on until the land settles; we'll possibly seed it with coarse grass for a green effect, but there's no doubt that we'll have to buy fill," he said.

Mr. Reynolds indicated the mill rates would not be noticeably affected by use of the new service. However, this is the case in Sidney Township.

Their dump site, south of the new development off Officially close Saturday, Reeve Jack M. Bush said this morning. "township residents will pay through taxes, similar to local improvements. The charges won't be on the mill rate but would run approximately $1 per month, per residential or small commercial unit."

He said bills for this service would be included in annual taxes, with normal garbage collection allowing 10 bags or cans per unit.

"I think this is a really big step for the township and we can now give service which is expected in urban centres . . . the rural people will now get the same service as the urban residents." The reeve said the township's contract does not include pickup of industrial waste.

Cleanup Debris Needs A Home

TRENTON (Staff) — Organizers of Operation Cleansweep do not know what they will do with debris collected in the annual spruce-up blitz along the Lower Trent River slated to be held June 5-13.

With the town facing the prospect of having to shut down the municipal dump here by the beginning f June and the Lower Trent Conservation Authority facing the possibility of having to pay operators of commercial dumps to take refuse off their hands, a committee has been set up to look into the situation.

"Disposal is a problem this year due to the uncertainty with the dumps. However, this will not deter us," says the LTRCA's secretary, Bill Lawson of Carrying Place.

Seventy-two tons of trash were collected along the river below Hastings Village and along the Bay of Quinte from Twelve O'Clock Point to CFB Trenton in the 1970 cleanup drive.

Even with this remarkable haul, Mr. Lawson says a great many areas of the river were not even touched.

This summer, organizers hope to increase the number of participants in Operation Cleansweep to 1,500 from 200 in 1970. More volunteer trucks and boats will also be needed.

The authority's secretary mentioned in an interview he had talked to representatives of both the departments of transport and highways and they have "never seen anything like the amount of debris coming down the river this spring."

He says there are a lot of ice shanties in the river — two alone just south of Glen Miller.

This year's operation organization is led by Cy MacDonald and Mr. Lawson both of Carrying Place. David Stewart of Stirling, John Greaves of Hastings, Robert Cameron of Trenton and Charles Horton of RR 3 Frankford. Col. Angus Duff, Emergency Measures Organization, Belleville has been a consultant at the committee shapes the 1971 program.

Mr. Lawson contends that for Operation Cleansweep to be a total success this year, the enthusiasm of all the people in the district must be generated. Public participation, more than money, is the key to achieving a beautified Trent rivercourse — in 1970 only $350 was budgeted for the job but it had "million dollar" results.

In the past, ratepayers have made use of dump sites at Frankford, Stirling and the township site on Alkens Road, which will be cleaned up and levelled off. Although residents will pay slightly more for this service, private collection handled pickup of refuse and were charged for disposal.

Charges under the old system, for land rent, fill, bulldozer rental and assistance to Frankford and Stirling f e l use of their sites, were included on the tax bill.

Reeve Bush explained that under department of energy and resources rules, as a municipality with a population over 5,000 "we had to get into a land fill site immediately . . . (no open dumps) it was going to cost the ratepayers more than it will for the new site," he concluded.

Similar charges for private dumping will apply for Sidney township and there is a possibility that other municipalities will make use of the old Goyer-Horlock property on which the waste disposal site is situated.

Mr. Graham stated that the 160 acres would support refuse over the next 30 years from a population of 100,000. "Of course there will be more people but with a smaller population."

IN MEMORIAM

PARKS — In loving memory of a dear father and grandfather, Jerry Parks, who passed away one year ago today, April 30, 1970.
After the winter comes the spring,
After the rain comes the sun,
After the sorrow comes the peace,
There always remains memory
Of Fleetingly perfect, the work of God and the heart.
And just like the seasons that come and go
Like the flowers of spring for God makes all things grow
Of autumn,
A colourful awakening of new
And lovely splendour,
And winter, a blanket in a season of rest.
Will, too, be awakened by God's Everlasting breath.
Sadly missed but remembered by daughter-in-law Lois and children.

BRADLEY — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Fred Bradley, who passed away April 30, 1966.

Time cannot dim their worth
Memories are the purest away

We think of him every hour and tear fell,

Coroner's Jury Urges Compulsory Medicals

By KENNETH SMITH
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — A coroner's jury inquiring into the death of town physician Constable Mark Houlden concluded here Thursday that the 57-year-old former president of the local police association died naturally.

The five-man body also recommended that "Trenton's fire and police departments consider implementing physical fitness programs for their staffs and that both police and firemen here undergo annual medical examinations, results being filed with the appropriate bodies."

The verdict and recommendations came at the end of a five-hour inquest in which both members of the police force and medical men testified.

Houlden's death here July 29 came shortly after he had gone to a College Street residence to investigate a disturbance complaint. On the scene he was object of an assault, fell to the ground and was pronounced dead within two hours at Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Allegations were made by Ontario Police Association administrator, Dennis Latten, at last fall's OPA convention in Kitchener that the incident was shrouded in "a veil of secrecy" and its investigation had been "a mish-mash of incompetence".

Latten had been subpoenaed to appear yesterday but sent a telegram saying he could not make it.

To satisfy jurors the constable died naturally, Dr. S. I. Demeka, head of Trenton hospital's pathology department, disclosed that her autopsy found Houlden's heart was twice normal size and he had a bleeding ulcer of recent origin.

Death, she said, was due to heart failure, perhaps aggravated by the ulcer and exertion but Dr. Demeka concluded "it could just as easily have happened if he were cutting a lawn".

The pathologist noted Houlden received five facial abrasions in the altercation; these she maintained, were "in no way related to the cause of death".

Mr. Affleck concluded Houlden "had not been viciously attacked . . . injuries were superficial and not attributable to the assailant". He said the cuts could have been caused when the constable collapsed in the College St. back yard.

Policemen on the scene testified he did not break his forward fall as he passed out after the brief struggle.

The policeman's family doctor and two area specialists indicated yesterday Houlden had a heart murmur and probable beginnings of diseased heart valves as early as 1964. They said they had refrained from telling his wife and the police department because of their professional oath and the feeling was expressed that Houlden himself was the proper agent to do this under the circumstances.

Dr. Bruce Cronk of Belleville said he had examined the constable five weeks before his death and had told him he may require heart surgery.

Dr. Cronk urged the jury to recommend the fitness program and employer access to results of mandatory medical examinations to help prevent on-duty fatalities. He said "police have relatively sedentary jobs but are periodically called upon to perform miracles."

The compulsory medicals and the disclosure provision have already come into effect here, prompted by the Houlden incident. It was one of the terms in the contract struck between the police association and the Trenton Police Commission this week.

Trenton detective sergeant Sid Vickers said he felt the exercise and examination would be acceptable to the members of the constabulary.

Constable Earl Camp, current head of the Trenton Police Association, expressed satisfaction with the way the inquest had been handled.

Naval Review

Sub-Lt. Wayne Bunnett of RCSCC Quinte last night took the salute following march-past and color ceremonies at the cadet hall, South Front Street, as Belleville cadet Frank Driscoll, left, prepared to raise the flag. Navy League of Canada Week; April 26 - May 2, was marked with cadet dinner last night, presentation of awards and special Sunday ceremonies commemorating the Battle of the Atlantic.

Courthouse Flag Thief Is Jailed

Four days in the county jail was the sentence handed out to Robert Stanley Clark, 23, of 235½ Isabel Street, when he pleaded guilty in provincial court Thursday to theft of a flag from the Hastings County Court House.

Carl Bateman, administrator for the county apprehended Clark after he observed two men at the flag poles. A second citizen's arrest was made on the way to the city police station when the banner-thief attempted an escape.

Sea Cadets Mark Navy League Week

A march - past, presentation of colors and special awards last night officially marked Navy League of Canada Week, April 26 to May 2.

More than 60 cadets formed an honor guard and band for the special awards ceremony at the Sea Cadet hall on South Front Street.

Mayor J. Russell Scott tendered the good wishes of the citizens of Belleville and took the opportunity to commend the cadets on their fine appearance during the Governor - General's visit in March of 1970. "This is the first opportunity I've had to officially congratulate you . . . the marching of the colors by the navy cadets was one of the finest parts of his visit.

"In these days when everyone's talking about peace, we sometimes wonder whether youngsters should be in uniform.

"However," continued the mayor, "you stand out as an example; it helps to build character and perfection in anything is a great thing to strive for."

Lt. Barry Bevzan, commanding officer of RCSCC Quinte said the cadet force had a strength of 65. "We've somewhat overstrength now but we have a natural turnover."

Special ceremonies were held Sunday to commemorate the Battle of the Atlantic, and the many lives lost on the sea during World War II. Second of the navy week events was a rifle shoot, in which RCSCC Quinte teams totalled 273 of a possible 400 points which won them the Eastern Ontario rifle shoot Marsden award.

A final march - past along South Front Street ended the ceremonies.

People Pressure Grows On Trenton Hospital

TRENTON (Staff) — Financing a new 48-bed wing in 1969 forced directors of Trenton Memorial Hospital to exercise utmost economy in 1970 and necessitated a cut in program of priorities for this year's operations, the hospital board's chairman, A. J. C. Ward said last night.

In his annual report to the TMH annual meeting, Mr. Ward explained the 184 - bed hospital faces an immediate need for replacement and additions to physical plant and equipment, some of which is urgently needed.

"It needs to be borne in mind that much of the original equipment of the hospital will be 20 years old this year, and must be regarded as rapidly approaching the end of its useful and economical life," he said.

Mr. Ward stated that hospital service costs are escalating "at the incredible rate of between 10 and 16 per cent", while there is an increasing difficulty in obtaining from government sources funds necessary to operate the hospital."

Net costs of operating Trenton Memorial Hospital in 1970 climbed 20.6 per cent over the 1969 figure. The hospital had grown in size, salaries and supply costs mounted and public use of the facility increased in the period.

The number of patients admitted climbed from 5,364 to 5,885 and the number of patient days from 45,446 to 53,872. In 1970, there were 22,614 visits to the emergency department, an increase of 24 per cent over the previous year.

As people pressure increases, so does the financial burden and there is no slackening, let the chairman indicated.

The hospital made a substantial saving during the year by handing over responsibility for food services to the private firm Versafood Services Ltd.

Administrator John Lupton explained "cafeteria sales have increased while costs for food have been reduced when we were operating these services ourselves."

In 1970, Trenton Memorial was approved by the Canadian Physiotherapy Association to accept physiotherapy interns and began in May to be a teaching hospital in association with Belleville's Edith Cavell School of Nursing.

"They have all rated their stay at Trenton as their most enjoyable and worthwhile period of training," Mr. Lupton reported.

This business year in the hospital's history also saw the opening of a new intensive care unit, extending of visiting hours from 1 to 8:30 p.m., and the decision to employ security guards to patrol the building at night.

Explaining that Ontario Hospital Services Commission "takes practically all the income generated by the hospital," Mr. Ward added: "It is vital that we continue to receive the financial support of the community, its industries, and its citizens."

He reminded the board it is their responsibility to replace equipment, provide new services, repay loans, and finance new construction.

Mayor Scott's Decision

Public life — the assumption of political responsibilities over and above those of family and business — can be a crushing if not intolerable burden. Whatever the level of involvement, municipal, provincial or federal, the pressures is unremitting. It calls for not only a strong physical constitution, but unusual powers of mind and spirit.

Mayor J. Russell Scott is in this tradition. We recall that before taking up his duties four years or so ago he weathered a period of illness and since then has been leading, to use his own words, "a full life."

Well that is the experience of men in public life — and none more so than the chief citizen of a fast-growing community such as our own, one who in addition to his municipal responsibilities and other interests, among them president of the Association of Municipal Police Governing Authorities, runs a medical practice. Now we have word that Mayor Scott does not intend to seek re-election in the December 1972 civic election.

Quite apart from any reasons he might have for pursuing a more relaxed schedule, and this would be understandable, Mayor Scott says he thinks it is "time that somebody else came in with a fresh view." We have seen the same philosophy at work recently in the retirement from positions of leadership of former Ontario Premier John Robarts and the NDP's Tommy Douglas.

And speaking of the wider political scene, Mayor Scott seems to have disproved rumors that he might be interested in provincial politics. Nevertheless, he would appear to be leaving the door open, in the broad sense, to some form of further public endeavour when he says, "if I feel, and if the people feel, that I can be of service to them in a greater way, then I will certainly consider offering my services."

Certainly it would not be in character for Dr. Scott to be anything other than busy. Aside from his medical and municipal concerns he is interested in agriculture — he is currently planning to import some Kerry cattle from Ireland — and he has a camp in the Bancroft area.

We cannot envisage Dr. Scott, at 55, fading into complete retirement, rather in the manner of Hugh Downs, who at 50, is forsaking the Today show on U.S. television. The prospect of retirement, Mr. Downs says, is something which has been taking root in his thoughts for some time. He and his wife are now planning to drive west in leisurely fashion and settle in Arizona.

With all his interests, Mayor Scott will doubtless remain a busy man. At the same time the way is clear for the political aspirations of others, whether among existing members of Council, or from outside. For this reason the next year or two will be a particularly interesting period in local politics.

Queen's Visit

Invariably, it is the Queen's fate to have some problem, real or more likely imagined by observers of the Royal scene, to impede her appointed course. In the past there have been fears for her safety in advance of tours of places like Ghana and Northern Ireland. More often than not, it is something like a common cold, although it must be said that the one troubling the Queen at present seems to be more persistent than usual. In any event, Buckingham Palace officials insist that the Queen will be flying to British Columbia as planned on Monday.

We trust this will be the case. It would not be like the Queen to be deterred from making a scheduled trip.

Age of Aquarius

There is the odd midi on the fashion scene these days, but the accent is on "odd" in more ways than one in this Age of Aquarius. Meanwhile, office bosses are said to be nervously awaiting the more general appearance of hot pants. We read somewhere that some were accepting the new style worn under miniskirts which only goes to show that the latter are still topes in popularity with the fair sex. Indeed, one has only to watch television and the younger female contestants in panel programs like To Tell the Truth for confirmation that the midi has been a spectacular flop. Hot pants meanwhile would seem to be slow in catching on, although girls keeping tally of votes were pictured wearing them at the NDP leadership convention in Ottawa. But then, it is a big city and all that. . .

Press Comment on Proposed Pay Raise for MPs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The following are excerpts from editorials in representative Canadian newspapers on the federal government's proposal to increase salaries of members of Parliament. Except where noted, newspapers described themselves as politically independent:

Belleville Intelligencer: Prime Minister Trudeau is convinced in his own mind that inflation has been cured—for the time being at least—so here he is with a proposal of legislation to give MP's a 59-per-cent pay increase a year, to $18,000, and a 33-per-cent boost in their tax-free expense allowances, to $8,000. Nobody need be surprised by such a proposal although if it is not inflationary we do not know what is. . . . So much for those guidelines of a while back.

Montreal Star: There is no benefit to the Canadian taxpayer in allowing his representatives' salaries to stagnate. . . . If the raise was necessary and timely, however, there is not much to be said for the government's manner of implementing it. Periodic massive increases such as the one announced by Mr. Trudeau simply invite criticism.

Niagara Falls Review: True, MPs haven't had a pay raise since 1963, but Parliament is at fault for having left the adjustments so long. . . . We would suggest the cabinet re-write its proposal and cut that 59 per cent in half, with another 25-per-cent increase to follow in the first session of the next Parliament.

Hamilton Spectator: Parliament deserves the panning it's getting . . . Salaries of public servants should be adjusted annually, not every decade or so (eight years in this instance). The proposed wage hike is around 40 per cent or roughly what it would have arrived at if there had been a small annual pay increases since 1963. Unfortunately and inevitably it is fear of the electorate that makes most governments (and Canada's are no exception) wait until the very last moment to make long-overdue pay adjustments. It isn't any wonder that folk on fixed pensions to say nothing of those workers who live from hand to mouth, are downright disgusted.

Ottawa Journal: There is no good time to raise MPs' salaries. If a government waited until some magic moment when no one would feel resentful or the economic conditions were right, legislators would never receive the kind of compensation their jobs deserve. An increase in salaries is justified. It is in fact overdue. The delicate question is how much. . . . We would have no real quarrel with the $26,000 the government now proposes if that income was taxable at the same rates as everyone else. Prime Minister Trudeau has chosen not only to perpetuate the inequitable practice of exempting $8,000 a year from off the top of income tax but to increase that amount to $8,000.

That is a mistake. . . . The need for giving senators a 50-per-cent increase in their pay at the same time has not been justified.

Kitchener Waterloo Record: The least attractive feature of the government's proposal . . . is that it retains the dishonest principle of making part of the salaries tax-free. The suggestion is that if MP would be paid $28,000 but taxed as if it were only $18,000. In a typical case this will make $28,000 for an MP worth as much as a salary of $25,000 for one of us ordinary folk. He will dodge enough tax to make up the difference.

Oshawa Times: Not only is it unjustly excessive and a blatant abuse of power by the elected, its timing is sadly out of kilter with the country's tight economic picture. Somewhere along the planning line, things went haywire.

Winnipeg Free Press (Ind. Liberal): A 45-per-cent increase spread over seven years works out on average to less than seven per cent per year, which is not out of line with recent wage settlements and is a great deal less than some. More questionable than the size of the proposed increases is their timing, leaving aside unemployment, inflation etc. Present MPs worked hard and diligently to get themselves elected to Parliament in 1968; they did so knowing what they would be paid, and this did not deter them. Surely it would be fairer (and not too much of a hardship) for them to continue on this scale to the end of the present Parliament. Candidates for the next Parliament would then run in the knowledge that they would be paid at a higher rate.

Winnipeg Tribune: Looked at in the context of no salary increase for eight years, the government's new pay scale for MPs is reasonable enough. However, it is to be hoped that in future, MPs' income is reviewed on a regular basis, perhaps every two years, so that there will be no more of these startling annual increases.

Calgary Herald: . . . For an administration which has expended so much time in lecturing Canadians on the need for fiscal restraint, it takes no little gall to boost MPs' salaries from $18,000 to $26,000. . . . If the Commons members, no doubt, will suffer no flickers of conscience in voting themselves a 44-per-cent pay increase . . . their constituents, however, may feel differently.

Calgary Albertan: There is no good time for members of Parliament to vote themselves a raise in pay—and they could wait forever. Agreed. But waiting for eight years and then socking it to us—a 59-per-cent increase in MPs' salaries and a one-third jump in tax-free expenses—is a poor psychology, whatever else one chooses to call it. So it works out to "about six per cent per year." Are we supposed to feel lucky that each annual six per cent hasn't been granted retroactively?

Vancouver Sun (Ind. Liberal): The more this move is considered, the more shocking it appears. If this represents the best judgment of the country's leaders, then the country is in worse hands than it knew.

Vancouver Province: The increases are the first since 1963 and work out at an average of about six per cent annually, which is not out of line with the guidelines that the prices and incomes commission had suggested. . . . It would be much more efficient to have those salaries under annual review by a standing committee of legislators or outsiders, to ensure they keep pace with salary increases throughout the country. . . .

London Free Press: . . . an increase is justified but it should be amended to take a far more realistic approach to the questions of expense accounts . . . It is on the matter of an $8,000 tax-free expense allowance for MPs and $4,000 for senators that the government proposal is wrong. This would merely continue a present inequity in that the expenses of some parliamentarians at present are much greater than others.

Halifax Chronicle-Herald: Most MPs have to keep two homes going, one in their constituency, the other in the capital. . . . Many MPs, especially those without supplementary, non-parliamentary income and with young families to educate, have found the financial strain . . . wearing and in particular work and life too much. Without a substantial pay increase, Parliament faces the danger of losing some of its most promising talent. We agree, then, that MPs should get a raise. Critics of the move ought really be confined to those Canadians who, like MPs, have not had their own salaries raised in the past eight years.

Victoria Colonist: Argue the matter how they will, members of Parliament are not going to convince the tax-ridden general public that the salary and expense benefits they are about to vote themselves are justifiable.

Do Airline Fares Need Revising?

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

The wise man who wrote the book of Proverbs said: "Three things were too wonderful for me, yea four which I know not." (Proverbs Chapter 30, verses 18 and 19)

Had he been living today, he could have added a fifth one. . . Transatlantic Air Fares.

When I went to the United Kingdom last September, the fares were:
Economy Class . . . Montreal to London — 29 days minimum to 45 days maximum — $268 return; — over 45 days — $426 return.
These fares may have since been changed.

My stay requiring 62 days, I had to pay maximum fare. I was on routine flights both ways.

What is so puzzling about these fares is that it costs no more to fly a 21-day passenger than to fly a 60-day passenger. The only difference being that one returns about a month or so after the other. No special aircraft is standing by for the expensive fare passenger; both travel routine flights and in fact can be together on the same aircraft.

What it boils down to, is that the airline charged me in advance approximately $200 for the privilege of staying more than 45 days to complete my business. They had the use of my money for more than two months.

The airlines complain of flying with less than a full complement of passengers. Perhaps this stupid fare arrangement could be a great part of the cause. Charter flights at fares greatly below regular flights are fully booked. So there is part of the answer staring you in the face.

I believe the international aircraft organization was formed about 1945-46 when civilian air travel was by no means so prevalent as today. Among other things the organization is said to have fixed these fares, but common sense would say that it is long past time for such items to be revised and this revision put into effect as soon as possible.

The organization being quasi civil service is therefore seathed in red tape. Why does one air line not just decrease fares to a common sense level and present them with a fait accompli. The others would probably rush to get on the band wagon and everyone . . . air line and passenger, would be happy.

A. H. MACDONALD, C.A.,
7 Edward St., Belleville.

EDITOR'S NOTE: One major airline was reported recently to be contemplating just such a reduction, whether the international body liked it or not.

Kierans Places Jobs Ahead of Efficient Use of Capital

Nor does the advice correspond with the current philosophy of the government as expressed on many occasions by Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin —who has told the textile industry and others they will have to rationalize to keep export markets—and by Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, who spoke in the Commons Wednesday.

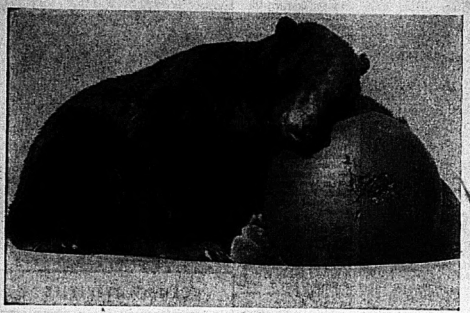
Participating in debate on his bill to increase the federal minimum wage to $1.75 an hour from $1.65, Mr. Mackasey said higher minimum wages force companies into deciding whether they will increase wages and remain inefficient, "or introduce a greater degree of automation, thus placing their industry on a more competitive basis."

Labor, he said, ought to accept technological change which might redistribute the workforce, have it absorbed elsewhere or reduce it.

It is apparently this emphasis on automation over labor, requiring the import of capital goods and at least temporary unemployment, that Mr. Kierans does not find acceptable.

Mr. Kierans is the second minister to leave the cabinet over economic differences.

Transport Minister Paul Hellyer, who quit specifically over the housing issue two years ago, had since spoken out bitterly against the government's economic policies and the unemployment he said resulted from them.



Mr. Hellyer said in an interview following the announcement it appears that Mr. Kierans had come to the same conclusion he had—that the economy is being badly mismanaged.

Mr. Trudeau told reporters he had tried to convince Mr. Kierans not to resign, but Mr. Kierans had felt the cabinet didn't have the answers to his questions about future policy for the country.

Mr. Kierans, first elected to the Commons and appointed to the cabinet in 1968, had wanted to speak publicly on a wide range of issues.

Mr. Trudeau said the minister's views might have had a better chance of becoming policy if he had remained in the cabinet.

Mr. Kierans left word that he would not be available for comment until next week.

Kierans Resignation Opens Up Debate on State of Economy

OTTAWA (CP) — The resignation of Eric Kierans from the federal cabinet Thursday blows open a tinderbox debate about the way Canada's economy is being managed.

There is evidence that Mr. Kierans was moved to quit because he and his ideas about a wide range of subjects weighed lightly in cabinet decisions. But the reason he gave publicly was disagreement with the running of the economy.

At rock bottom, the debate is about whether unemployment or inflation is the most worrisome villain, although all participants take pains to declare themselves roundly opposed to both.

At issue for policy-makers, then, is whether to maintain a guarded restraint in spending and credit controls to ward off further inflation or to open up in the hope that production and employment will boom.

Those choices—in advance of a much-delayed federal budget, now promised for sometime in May—are for the immediate future. Most debaters are agreed that better management methods are needed for the longer term.

The debate was burning even as Mr. Kierans was writing his farewell note to the Trudeau cabinet.

Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, John Young, chairman of the federal Prices and Incomes Commission, and Arthur Smith, chairman of the Economic Council of Canada, made simultaneous contributions to the argument Wednesday night.

Mr. Kierans placed himself on the side of the so-called expansionists—advocates of employment-generating growth — with his parting shot that "the overriding objective of all nations in the 1970s must be the attainment of full employment, however defined, as the best guarantee of political, social and economic stability."

Mr. Rasminsky and Mr. Young stressed anew in their speeches in Vancouver Wednesday that caution is in order lest inflation burst out again.

Unusual alliances have formed in favor of more expansionist policies, including in recent days the Canadian Chamber of Commerce calling for tax cuts, the Canadian Labor Congress demanding more vigorous action against unemployment, and Ontario provincial treasurer Darcy McKeough, who announced federal restraint policies in his budget speech Monday.

Mr. Smith, in two appearances before the Commons finance committee and in an Edmonton speech Wednesday, joined with Mr. Young and Mr. Rasminsky in calling for better management methods to achieve both full employment and price stability over the long haul.

But Mr. Smith, whose council had implicitly criticized tough government restraint programs 18 months ago, warned that present policies are holding down production when it should be expanding.

If the grass looks greener on the other side, your neighbour's probably using:

Weed 'n Feed with Killex doesn't do things by halves. It feeds your lawn with a long-lasting fertilizer that releases UF nitrogen slowly into the soil — for lush green growth. And at the same time Weed 'n Feed applies Killex, the weed killer that gets weeds even 2,4-D misses. Weed 'n Feed with Killex is lightweight, yet concentrated so a 22 lb. bag covers a full 5000 sq. feet. And it flows evenly through your lawn spreader. You can't go wrong with it.

LAWN AND PLANT CARE

Lawns

How many times a year should a lawn be fertilized? For best results, spring, summer and fall. What formula? Soils differ, so requirements differ. But it's generally agreed that a 20-10-5 ratio is the best overall balance. If you use a fertilizer of this type, you can be sure of good results.

Weeds—If the only weeds in your lawn are simple dandelions and plantains, a 2,4-D type of weed killer will clear them up in a hurry. Either spray with Weed-No-More or use Weed 'N Feed 20-10-5 Lightweight Fertilizer with 2,4-D.

However if you have hard-to-kill weeds such as Ground Ivy, Hmi-Ali, Black Medick (Yellow Clover), Chickweed, etc., you'll need something more potent. Use Killex as a spray, or in the form of Weed 'N Feed 20-10-5 Fertilizer with Killex.

Shrubs, Hedges, Evergreens

Control weeds with Green Cross Granular Weed Preventer containing Trifluralin. The chemical prevents weed seeds from germinating in the soil. So if the soil starts clean (after a good hoeing, for instance) it'll stay clean.

'Open House' Held At Nursing Home

MARMORA — "Open House" at the Centre Hastings Nursing Home, Deloro, last weekend was well attended. About 150 guests signed the guest book, visited the patients who are in residence there and enjoyed a cup of tea with them.

The new owners, Mr. and Mrs. M. Horvath and staff were on hand to greet the guests and show them around the newly decorated Home.

The patients looked happy and well cared for. Mrs. Horvath reports that the patients love to have visitors and will be talking about "Open House" for days to come. Wooler Couple Mark 25th Wedding Anniversary

Relatives and friends gathered together Saturday night with Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Burrows of Wooler to celebrate their silver wedding anniversary. A delightful party was arranged for them at the Wooler Town Hall by their six children — George, Barbara, Roslyn, Marie, Sandford and Raymood.

Married on April 26, 1946 at St. Philips' Church, Montreal West, they resided the first 19 years in Trenton and the last six years in Wooler.

Of the original wedding party, Mr. Hugh Sanford of Belleville, the best man, was able to be present. So was Mrs. Phyllis McColl, of Peterborough, matron of honor and sister of Mr. Burrows. Mr. Norman Payne of King City, an usher, brother of Mrs. Burrows and Mr. Jack Cowdery of Middleton Park, an usher, both came with their families. Mrs. Alice Payne, Mrs. Burrows' mother came from Pointe Claire, Quebec.

Over 50 close relatives and friends came from Tweed, Belleville, Oshawa, Peterborough, Toronto, Marmora and Trenton. A beautiful home-cooked meal was served by the Women's Institute of Wooler, George Burrows, the couple's eldest son acted as MC. A description of the wedding was read from a newspaper clipping of 25 years ago which caused many chuckles.

In the evening the party was joined by friends and neighbors for dancing and plain old - fashioned "Visiting".

A Difficult Choice

Ralph Allen, director of the University Arts Centre, Kingston, surveys some of the entries for the East Central Ontario Art exhibition which will open to the public on Saturday at the Belleville public library. Mr. Allen juried the show for which about 100 entries were submitted including oils, woodcuts, batiks and prints.

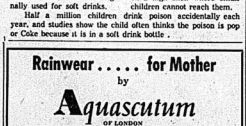
East Central Ontario Art Exhibition Opens Saturday at Library Gallery

The annual art exhibition of the East Central Ontario Art Association will open to the public on Saturday May 1 at the art gallery of the Belleville public library and will continue till May 24. The works can be viewed during library hours.

Membership in the East Central Ontario Art Association is open to residents of the area which extends from Bancroft in the North to Oshawa, Belleville is at the Eastern limit of this region.

The show which was juried by Ralph Allen, assistant professor of art at Queen's University, Kingston consists of works selected from about 100 entries including oils, woodcuts, batiks, prints, a hooked wall hanging and collages.

Ralph Allen who selected the works for exhibition is also the director of the University Arts Centre, Kingston and director of the Agnes Etherington Art Gallery there. He is represented in innumerable galleries in Canada and abroad including the National Art Gallery of Canada, the art gallery of Ontario and the Leeds University gallery in England.



Of British origin, Mr. Allen studied in the Slade School of art, University of London and directed a gallery in Bond Street, London before coming to Canada. He does both painting and sculpture and most of his paintings are highly abstracted landscapes.

Asked for his opinion of the show he was jurying, he remarked that it was a very interesting show and that he was particularly pleased to see that some of the artists had looked around them for ideas. "Art comes out of life, not necessarily out of dreams" he commented.

"A great number of techniques have been used by the artists and there is quite a bit of vitality in this area" he continued. "This made the jurying much more difficult."

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Toddlers, as well as older children, may be misled if they find poisonous substances, such as insecticides, barbecue lighter fluid, paint thinners, etc., in bottles originally used for soft drinks.

Half a million children drink poison accidentally each year, and studies show the child often thinks the poison is pop or Coke because it is in a soft drink bottle.

Keep all poisons and harmful substances in their original labeled containers so no one will take them by mistake. Keep them locked up or on a high shelf where small children cannot reach them.

Ann Landers

More to Marriage Than Hair and Teeth

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I felt sorry for the woman who married her husband for his hair and teeth. She wrote that a gum condition is threatening his teeth and his hair is falling out. The woman confessed, "I know it isn't right, but I'm losing interest in him and I don't know what to do about it."

My husband always joked about having fallen in love my my hair and teeth. In my youth, everyone remarked on my beautiful, auburn mane. My husband was so proud of it he wouldn't let me wear a hat — or even a head scarf on windy days. My teeth were unusually beautiful. I once won a prize for the prettiest smile. A toothpaste company asked me to be a model.

ANN LANDERS

Ten years ago I was in an automobile accident — a head-on collision with a drunk driver on a one-way street. My front teeth were knocked out and I sustained a head injury. They had to shave my head to operate. My hair grew back thin and scraggly — a mousey brown. Lucky for me my husband saw something in me worth staying around for. I hope the woman will also find compensatory virtues when her husband's hair and teeth go. — SYMPATICO.

DEAR SYM: I'm with you. Thanks for writing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: It's a standing joke that physicians have illegible handwriting. To those of us who must decipher it, it's no laughing matter. I speak for pharmacists, nurses, hospital employees, etc. It's time-consuming as well as nerve-wracking to figure out whether it's "p" or "a", "r" or "c", "j" or "y", "2 or 3", "7" or "9". More than once I've given up in despair and spent hours locating a doctor to check out his instructions.

Your column has a high readership among doctors, Ann. Please tell them. — TAYLORVILLE.

DEAR TAYL: I'll try: Now hear this; all docs who have rotten handwriting — which includes most of you: Please take an extra minute to write prescriptions and instructions legibly. Thanks very much. — on behalf of those who must read your handwriting, and those whose lives depend on it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My problem isn't an earth-shaker, but since many people air their petty gripes in your column, I decided to do the same.

I play cards a couple times a week with neighbors. No money is involved, we just have a nice sociable game and it's fun. I have to go across the alley to get to the neighbors. Every time I go home they hand me their garbage. It's always the same: "When you pass the pail in the back will you please throw this in?"

How do I go about letting them know I am not a garbage man? Thanks. — MY DUDGEON.

HI HY: These people know you aren't a garbage man. They view you as a friend — one about whom they feel comfortable asking a small favor. So take the garbage with a smile, Hub. It doesn't cost anything and it in no way diminishes you.

Employment Program for Senior Citizens

By DORIS CLARK

Project Senior Abilities at Albertson, Long Island, N.Y. (an offshoot of the Human Resources Centre), calls itself "an economically sound employment program" for people 55 and over.

Objective of this demonstration project is to show that needs and talents of older workers can be matched successfully with job requirements of industry.

In one year the project placed 100 applicants in positions ranging from five hours a week to seven and a half hours per day. The idea is to meet the demands of industry where possible with the skills of the senior citizen. Seven applicants were asked to accept permanent positions.

Examples: An older woman returns to employment as a secretary after 10 years of retirement. Training at the Human Resources Centre helped her learn to use an electric typewriter.

A man who is a cardiac case works at home as a teleservice claims agent for an Insurance Company. A gentleman who can't get around because of an arthritic hip works on the telephone as a bank credit collection clerk.

Dear Doris: We have four sons and had a good marriage until recent years. When my husband's mother became a widow she came and lived next door for five summers. By the end of that time our marriage was shattered.

He just took sides with his mother. She is a lovely, gracious woman who is overhelpful and an extreme worrier. She uses her hurt feelings to get her way. Last summer we talked to our pastor about the situation and the results were even greater hurt feelings.

Can you recommend any books that we could read that would be a help for us? My husband and I are both active Christians. I have one book which is very good but how can I get him to read it with me? — Floundering

Dear Floundering: This lonely lady is like the elephant who wants to move all the way into your tent! Your husband is blinded to any fault in her interference, can see no sense in your resentment.

Basic, of course, is the fact that she hasn't got enough to do with her time. Your next talk with pastor or counsellor ought to seek activities for her. Could you present her with a specific job to do for you or the children?

The way to get your husband to read your book is to read it yourself and mention quotes from it for discussion But don't for heaven's sake let it sound like "I told you so" stuff. And do something special to show him you care about him.

Love is taking a beating these days.

* * *

Dear Doris: Am I wrong in being hurt?

My friend came home from hospital after surgery, and I cooked and baked for seven days for her (she didn't ask me) but I wanted to help her. She has three children and not once did she say anything was good. Merely said, "Thank you".

I don't expect her to go wild over it, but somehow I thought a few more words of gratitude would be correct. It was all my food. It wasn't her food she had got given to her. Am I being foolish? — Your Reader

Dear Reader: There are times when a woman feels so inadequate that anything another woman does makes her ashamed of not being able to carry her own load. Then she forgets to express the gratitude she feels deep down.

When she is really well, give her a chance to feel needed by you.

Has Doris helped you with a problem? Write and tell her so.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Pineapple Squares Best Ever

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Years ago about five or six — you gave a recipe for Pineapple Squares that will freeze. It was the best recipe for squares I ever made but I have misplaced the recipe. — Mrs. Eileen O'C.

ANSWER: I agree. It was given to me by Mrs. J. Gumbert, a wonderful cook, who made them for a gathering after a funeral. They have been an all-time favorite with our readers ever since.

PINEAPPLE SQUARES

Lower Crust:

¾ cup butter (no substitute)
¼ cup granulated sugar
1¼ cups sifted all-purpose flour
½ tsp. salt

Topping:

One 20-oz. can crushed pineapple, well drained
1 egg
¾ cup light brown sugar
½ tsp. salt
½ tsp. vanilla
½ cup coconut (flaked or desiccated)

To make Lower Crust cream together the butter and granulated sugar well then add flour and salt and beat until thoroughly blended. (This now resembles soft shortbread dough.) Press into unbuttered 8¾ x 8¾" pan; using your fingers.

Dinner Menu

FRIDAY

SUNDAY

(Guests)

moistened finger tips to make it smooth.

Drain pineapple, making sure excess syrup is pressed out. (Use leftover syrup for some other purpose such as the liquid ingredient in a jelly dessert.) Spread drained pineapple evenly over lower crust.

Beat together in a bowl, the egg, brown sugar, salt vanilla and coconut. Spread evenly over the pineapple. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 25 min. or until top is baked and gold all over. Let cool in pan, but mark into small 1¼" squares while warm.

NOTE: Because I planned to freeze these, I lined the bottom of the pan with foil. After cutting and cooling I put them in a double plastic bag and froze them. When they were hard I lifted them from the pan on the foil, cut them in halves lengthwise, put ½ on top of the other, returned them to their double bag, dated them, and stored for a future tea party.

Kosher Food Order Held Unnecessary

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice E. A. Richardson dismissed as unnecessary Thursday an application by a prisoner who said he was forced to sin three times a day because he was compelled to eat non-kosher foods.

Emanuel Lester, one of the spokesmen for prisoners during the uprising at Kingston penitentiary earlier this month, was seeking on Ontario Supreme Court order to compel Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer and Warden Arthur Davis to provide him with food in accordance with orthodox Jewish dietary law.

L. R. Olson, counsel for Mr. Goyer and Mr. Jarvis, told Mr. Justice Richardson that arrangements had been made to provide Lester with the kosher diet. He asked the judge to withdraw the application.

Lester, 45, an American millionaire, is serving a four-year sentence for possessing stolen securities and now is at Millhaven, a new penitentiary near Kingston.

NDP and Creditistes Oppose Pay Boost for MPs

OTTAWA (CP) — New Democrats and Creditistes clashed out their party opposition Thursday to the government's bill to increase the salaries and allowances of MPs and senators.

Conservative spokesmen sided with the government.

Prixy Council President Allan MacEachen said the increases would ensure a degree of personal security for MPs comparable to that in less uncertain professions.

The bill would increase MPs' salaries to $18,000 yearly from $12,000 and non-taxable allowances to $8,000 from $6,000.

Senators' salaries would move to $18,000 from $12,000 and their allowances to $4,000 from $3,000.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis and Andre Fortin (Creditiste—Lotbinière) said the raise for MPs is unjustified in a period of high unemployment.

J. Angus MacLean (Malpeque), the only Conservative to enter the debate, said the increase is needed, especially since MPs do not get automatic raises with seniority as in other professions.

In debate on the MPs' salary increases, Mr. MacEachen acknowledged it is hard for MPs to speak in support of their own pay raise.

But since 1963—when the salaries were last adjusted—incomes of economists, engineers and university professors had risen at least the 50 per cent proposed for the MPs' basic salaries.

The average industrial wage had gone up 82.2 per cent in those years.

The $8,000 tax-free allowance differs from the recommendation of T. N. Beaupre of Montreal, hired to study the issue of MP income.

The Beaupre committee recommended that MPs get paid for expense vouchers actually submitted.

"All we differ in is the method," said Mr. MacEachen. The voters would hold MPs accountable for the way they spend their money.

Mr. Lewis opposed the bill because:

—The salary increase is too big;

—The seven-month retroactive period is excessive;

—The method of adjustment by MPs themselves—is unjust;

—The tax-free allowance is an unfair advantage denied other workers.

He said the increase is unjustifiable in a social context of unemployment, inadequate pensions, poverty, bad housing and pollution.

He rejected Mr. MacEachen's statement that the 50-per-cent increase could be pro-rated over the years since 1963.

The 1963 increase had been set to take account of future rises in living costs.

He predicted the increase could enlarge the widespread disenchantment with the parliamentary process. MPs' salaries should be related by making MPs a public service category.

Mr. Fortin agreed that it is ridiculous for MPs to raise their own incomes.

MPs needed more office space in Ottawa and their ridings and more research assistance, rather than pay raises.

Mr. MacLean said MPs deserve the increase because of the long period since the last raise, and because MPs have no security of tenure.

Without the increase, many MPs would have to quit politics to support their families.

Ran Harding (NDP—Kootenay West) opposed the salary increase as unjustifiable. But he supported increases in certain expense allowances, especially for MPs from distant ridings.

Mr. Harding's riding is in British Columbia.

Speaker Won't Refer Incident to Committee

OTTAWA (CP) — Another Commons row involving Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer erupted Thursday as New Democrats claimed he violated parliamentary privilege by ordering four of their MPs out of Millhaven penitentiary.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux rejected a move by Frank Howard (Skeena) to refer the issue to the Commons committee on privileges and elections.

Mr. Howard, one of the four to visit Millhaven, said later the party may raise the issue when Mr. Goyer's spending estimates come before the Commons justice committee.

Mr. Goyer said he ordered the MPs out of the new maximum security penitentiary because a coroner's inquest is under way into the uprising at Kingston penitentiary March 15-18, a federal inquiry is looking into the events and allegations that guards beat prisoners, and provincial police also are investigating.

He added that a fragile psychological climate exists at Millhaven, where most of the Kingston prisoners were transferred April 18.

Mr. Howard told a news conference he and three other New Democrats—Arnold Peters (Timiskaming), John Skoberg (Moose Jaw) and John Gilbert (Toronto Broadview)—found "a climate of hostility and tension" there.

However, Mr. Peters said that during a four-hour visit they found prisoners who were happy about the transfer and spoke of more privacy and less noise.

Prisoners had told them one cause of the rioting was fear of complete loss of privacy at Millhaven.

He said they spoke at length with a prisoner who had a six-stitch scalp wound and was covered with cuts. The man said he had been beaten by guards.

The New Democrats recalled that until 1969, MPs had a statutory right to visit prisons during business hours. In the last year, authorities have been encouraging regular visits by MPs.

Mr. Goyer admitted that such visits were "traditional. But he suggested that the New Democrats should have given him advance notice.

"What have you got to hide?" Mr. Howard demanded, commenting on what he termed Mr. Goyer's evasiveness.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis called the minister authoritarian.

Ontario's Ban on Tire Studs May Become Continent-wide

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's ban on studded tires, which comes into force at midnight tonight, may lead to disappearance of the studs throughout North America.

Quebec is studying the possibility of such a ban while eight northern states in the United States, including Minnesota, Wisconsin, New York and Michigan, have followed Ontario's lead and taken steps to ban the studs because of damage to road surfaces.

Unofficially, Ontario is relying on this support to facilitate enforcement of its ban, first announced last fall. Up to now, studded tires were legal in Ontario from Oct. 1 to April 30.

But in Manitoba studs are heavily used to cope with the hard prairie winter. Manitoba Highways Minister Joseph Borowski has threatened "bloody war" if Ontario interferes with studded Manitoba cars using Ontario roads.

There are no restrictions in Saskatchewan, Alberta and New Brunswick on the studs. Small metal spikes imbedded in the tire tread to provide better traction on ice and hard-snow surfaces.

Ontario's position is that safety features of the studs are far outweighed by the damage they do to highways. How Ontario will enforce the ban is still not clear.

The penalty for having studs after tonight is a minimum fine of $30 under the Highway Traffic Act.

Ontario Highway Minister Charles MacNaughton won't say, but warns that no out-of-province motorists will receive tire privileges not available to Ontario residents.

About a third of all snow tires sold in Ontario last winter were studded.

The Canadian Tire Stud Manufacturers Institute, which represents about 90 per cent of the industry, says 2,500 Ontario tire dealers will lose $600,000 in tire-studding equipment because of the ban. Two Ontario studmaking firms have already laid off 70 employees.

About 800,000 Ontario motorists also face the added cost this year of removing the studs from their tires.

The major knock against studs is the damage they do in gouging highways, and in creating while safety markings—damage estimated by Mr. MacNaughton's experts at $16 million a year.

Mr. MacNaughton said studies prove conclusively that studs don't reduce either the number or severity of road accidents in the winter.

"In my opinion, the over-all standard of safety on the paved road system in Ontario is lowered by the use of studded tires in winter and on this basis alone the prohibition of studded tires is justified."

He said tests show that studs lengthen, not shorten, the stopping ability of a car on wet or dry pavement; that they cause ruts in pavement which creates a safety hazard in itself; that they reduce manoeuvrability; and also give drivers a false sense of security that they can stop their car on any surface in safety.

The industry says the studs offer increased driving safety, particularly in hard winter climates such as in Northern Ontario.

The industry also argues that the studs offer an alternative to massive road salting which has been shown to cause pollution of waterways.

As to road damage, the industry has pleaded with the Ontario government to be given a "fair chance" to come up with an improved stud design that would eliminate the problem.

Many Northern Ontario municipalities, such as Timmins and Sault Ste. Marie, are opposed to the ban on the grounds that studs are required in the north where the population is small and distances between communities long.

Leo Bernier, Ontario minister of mines and northern affairs and a resident of the north, is opposed to his government's action.

He says distances in the north are so great "that it is pretty hard to argue that the number of drivers involved would really do a significant amount of damage to the roads."

Sydney J. Harris Says

'Love Story' Wretched Book

When the judges for the US National Book Award insisted upon dropping Love Story from the fiction nominations, this contemptuous gesture outraged millions of Americans, and puzzled just as many more. How could the runaway best-seller of the year be deemed not even worthy of consideration by this committee of writers?

It is impossible to adjudicate such disputes between the public and the intelligentsia. They seem to be talking about the same thing — a novel named "Love Story" — but they are in actuality responding to quite different stimuli.

The public is responding to the story on an emotional level, and the judges are responding to a purported work of art on an intellectual and professional level. The public has a perfect right to enjoy the book, and the committee has an equal right to repudiate it.

But when I say that the public has a perfect right to enjoy it, I do not mean that I concur in its taste. It is a wretched book, however appealing on a sentimental level, but people have a right to bad taste, in books, clothes music or anything else. What they do not have a right to is the confusion of taste with standards.

I have learned over the years, however, that it is nearly impossible to persuade a person untrained in the arts that everything is not just "a matter of taste." One cannot convince most people that "The Sound of Music" was a redeeming movie, or that "God Bless America" is a banal song, or that the onstage landscape binding over their fireplace is a piece of junk.

They are emotionally moved by all these things, and that is enough for them. Yet in their own fields, they would not be so easily fooled. A good carpenter would know at a glance when a house is well and truly built, no matter how beguiling it might look from the outside and would not be deceived by its superficial appeal. A good tailor can tell at a glance which suiting has been skillfully run up or which is sleazy.

A novel, a film, a piece of music, is a technical fabrication, before it can be anything else. It must have the same professional craftsmanship, the same honesty and integrity, as a well-built house or a hand-sewn suit, before it merits our approval. But the public knows nothing of these things; it sees only the surface glitter.

This is why there is no effective communication between the untrained audience and the trained observer. And why, without the right education, we can never hope to persuade the public that "Love Story" is a gingerbread house wholly unhabitable by real people.

Moira Donors Thanked

Students from Moira Secondary School who donated blood at the April clinic came in for a vote of appreciation this month from the executive of the Belleville branch of the Red Cross.

At the Red Cross April meeting it was noted that 226 packs had been produced from the clinic early this month and clinic chairmen Cecil Heard and Archie Lewis said that personal appeals to the students of Moira Secondary School had been worthwhile.

Mrs. J. K. Bradford explained that students at each secondary school in the city donate blood once a year.

Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson said that during the month, 15 homemakers had maintained family routine in 36 homes involving 33 children.

Mrs. W. S. Wills reported that the women's work group will easily exceed its quota with 250 articles being included in the last shipment.

The treasurer's report presented by Mr. Lewis showed expenditures totalling $2,696.83.

President, Mrs. J. E. Marsh said that the home nursing course, which has proven popular in the past, will be again offered this coming fall.

Australia Trip For Wilkinson

TRENTON (Staff) — Wilfred Wilkinson, a chartered accountant here, will travel to Australia in May for Rotary International's 1971 Sydney Convention.

Mr. Wilkinson will officially accept the post of governor of the service club's district 707 while in the country's metropolis. He takes over from Peter Sadler of the Toronto Eglinton Club and is the second Trentonian to hold the post.

Returning from Australia, "Governor Will" will face an active year of travel throughout his district that stretches from Kingston down into Western Ontario. As a rule, he will be out of town every other day in the exercise of his duties.

However, sizable hometown duties face Mr. Wilkinson this year with the Trenton Rotary Club preparing to celebrate its 50th anniversary.

Proctor Estate Now Authority's

BRIGHTON (Staff) — Held up for months by legal snags, the Lower Trent Conservation Authority has at last become the official owner of the Proctor estate here.

The deed to the village's landmark estate — 100 creek-girthing acres — was transferred to the authority this week, permitting the LTRCA to proceed with development of the site, destined to become headquarters of the conservation group.

Projections call for one floor of the old home on the property to be turned into permanent offices for the LTRCA, a second floor to contain a Canadiana museum.

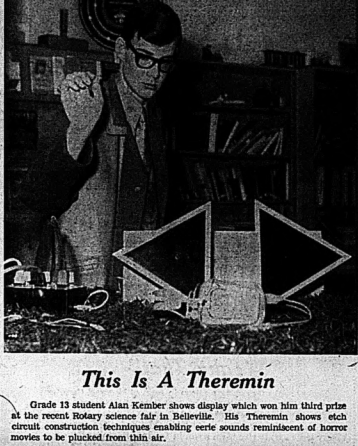
Three of the authority's committees will meet on the site in May and final plans for utilizing the property may be resolved as early as the full LTRCA meeting June 10.

Already the prospect of developing the Proctor property has sparked considerable interest with one citizen's committee formed here last night to help furnish this residence of one of Brighton's founding families.

The two-storey brick building features massive bay windows to either side of a portico doubledoor entrance. A history of the structure is currently being researched.

Achievement Night On Television

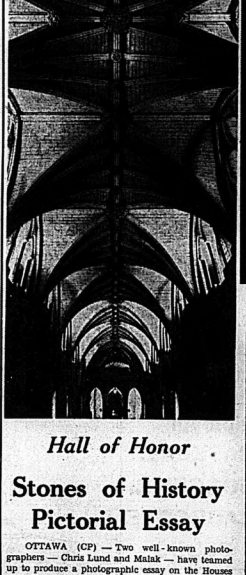
PICTON (Staff) — A television camera set up in the main corridor of Prince Edward Collegiate Institute last night captured candid shots of students presenting their own 'special', called Achievement Night.



This program featured a cast of hundreds drawn from student ranks. Its theme centred on the accomplishments of PECI students during their studies this year. An audience of parents and pupils filled more than 25 classrooms utilized for the presentation of the school's annual Achievement Night.

Model parliament held its closing session in the gymnasium from 7 to 8 p.m. while a fashion parade called Swing Into Spring entertained spectators in the auditorium. The school library was open for inspection by visitors to PECI. An art display and an exhibit of night school projects attracted many viewers. Two plays, The Pen of My Aunt and My Proud Beauty were performed in gymnasiums A and B for the enjoyment of visiting theatre buffs.

Among other exhibits featured in the school were automotive displays, experiments in the biology and chemistry laboratories, a small engine and sheet metal display, electronics displays, woodworking, silk screening and electrical displays. Guidance films were shown and pamphlets circulated among parents and teens.



Highlight of Achievement Night was a typical Russian dinner served in the staff dining room. Two sittings of 25 persons enjoyed favorite Russian dishes prepared by student chefs.

Displays featuring shorthand, bookkeeping and typing demonstrations also were popular among visitors. Showcase displays in the IlseHTA vided eye-catching exhibits of student talent. To assist parents in discovering the many displays in the school, student guides staffed an information desk in the main corridor. The school remained open from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.

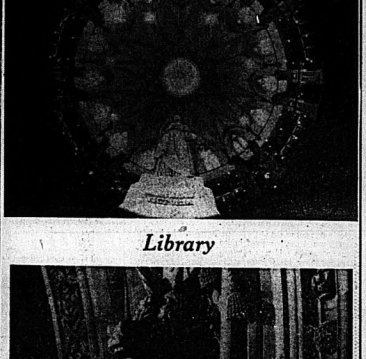
Stones of History Pictorial Essay

OTTAWA (CP) — Two well-known photographers — Chris Lund and Malak — have teamed up to produce a photographic essay on the Houses of Parliament entitled Stones of History.



Malak, a commercial photographer who has been shooting pictures of the Parliament Buildings for the past 18 years, concentrated on the exterior.

Lund, who has been taking pictures for the National Film Board for 28 years roamed the interior.

Because some architectural details are hidden from the eye of the casual visitor, Lund's plan of attack was carefully planned to include photos of the deepest recesses of the old Gothic buildings.

Malak spent months in all seasons and at all hours photographing the buildings in all sorts of weather and capturing the subtle changes produced by varying lights.

The photographs shown here are among the 145 black-and-white and color prints taken during the course of producing the book. The volume is published by Information Canada and is sold at $5 a copy.

North Stars Die Hard, Lose Pushover Label

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (CP) — Those who predicted Minnesota North Stars would be a pushover for the Canadiens in the National Hockey League playoffs had better not express such views in the presence of Montreal team. Or to the North Stars either.

The Canadiens did manage to hold on for a 3-2 victory Thursday night to take the best-of-seven semi-final Stanley Cup round 4-2. But not before the underdog North Stars had come within an ace of sending the game into overtime.

With the sellout crowd of 15,422 in an uproar, centre Ted Hampson gave Minnesota what appeared to be the tying goal as the blue-green light flashed to end the game. No one in the crowd, or on the ice for that matter, heard the siren because of the noise.

However, referee Bill Friday, who was right on top of the play, jumped in immediately to rule that the game had officially ended before Hampson put the puck behind Montreal goalie Ken Dryden.

Some of the Minnesota players took exception to Friday's ruling but cooler heads prevailed in the person of Minnesota goalie Cesare Maniago and finally the referee and even both teams were shaking hands and leaving the ice.

"That's the most important goal I've ever scored in professional hockey that they didn't count," muttered a disappointed Hampson.

The loss capped an uphill fight by the plucky North Stars.

Veteran winger Charlie Burns gave the North Stars a 1-0 lead at 9:59 of the first period, only to watch it obliterated seven minutes later by Montreal's Yvan Cournoyer.

The Canadiens forged ahead in the second period with only 67 seconds gone when Claude Larose, a former North Star, scored his first goal of his season's playoffs.

Hoyda... Rejean Houle pointed what proved to be the winning goal for Montreal at 12:29 of the second period, 21 set the scene for the third-period

Maniago was brilliant in the ... the Stars often left him defenceless with their savage onslaught on the Canadiens' end of the rink.

Montreal coach Al MacNeil said his team had worked hard for the victory, but the Minnesota club deserved a lot of credit.

"You got to give them credit," MacNeil said. "We should have had three, maybe four goals, in that final period, but Maniago made some tremendous saves.

"If they had won this game and this series, they'd have given whoever they met in the final one hell of a run for it," MacNeil said.

Henri Richard, who worked like a Trojan for the Canadiens all night, and set up Houle's winning goal, said the Montreal team had been under more pressure in this series than when they beat Boston Bruins in seven games in the quarter-final round.

"We had the pressure on us all the time because everybody said they'll be an easy for us to handle," Richard said. "But they started to every game ... When we beat Boston we were the underdogs and no one gave us a chance ... we didn't have the pressure."

Dryden, who stopped 30 of the 32 Minnesota shots, was honest about the Hampson non-goal. He admitted he had played to stop the shot but missed it.

"I didn't know the game was over," the 24-year-old rookie netminder said. "I looked up at the clock with five seconds left, and that interval clock that's inside you seemed to tell me that more than five seconds had gone by. But I was still playing the shot."

Maniago, in goal for both Minnesota victories in the series and who stopped 34 of 37 shots Thursday night said Hampson's efforts came close, "but not close enough."

"Just one more second," he said. "It would have been nice to tie—to make them sweat a little."

Jack Gordon, Minnesota's freshman coach, was philosophical about the game.

"The blue light came on before the red one, I guess, and that's what counts," he said. "But I'm proud of these guys—they worked their guts off in this series."

More than the game-over goal incident, Friday had an easy night as he called only eight minor penalties—all in the first 40 minutes. One of those was a first-period bench minor against Montreal for having too many men on the ice.

If it was any consolation to Minnesota, Montreal also lost a goal in the first period when Friday ruled that Richard's goal on a breakaway resulted from an offside pass.

Baby Hawks Don't Want Gardens Money

TORONTO (CP)—St. Catharines Black Hawks turned down an offer Thursday to play the opening game of their Eastern Canada major Junior A playoffs against Quebec Remparts at Maple Leaf Gardens.

The game, said Gardens' vice-president Harold Ballard, could have drawn upwards of 14,000 and, with the team and MLG splitting the take after the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association skimmed its 60 per cent of the gate, would be worth $6,500 to St. Catharines.

The Black Hawks, champions of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, rejected the offer however and will be host to the Quebec champion Remparts at home for their best-of-seven series opener Sunday night.

Ballard said the Hawks will be lucky to take $1,000 from games in the 3,400-seat St. Catharines Arena. The Gardens official said he would also have compensated the St. Catharines Arena for losing the game.

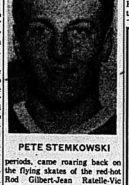
Hawks' Overtime Death Anything But Sudden

NEW YORK (CP) — The overtime was supposed to be sudden death, but there was nothing rapid about the demise, the ultimate victim has yet to be identified and the funeral has been postponed.

"That didn't put us out of the playoffs, you know," veteran centre Stan Mikita said with a weary puff after his Chicago Black Hawks lost 3-2 to New York Rangers Thursday night in a six-period marathon that evened their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series at three games apiece.

"We just have to go back to Chicago for the final game," added Black Hawks' coach Billy Reay, chosen on a wad of paper that probably was at least 101 minutes and 29 seconds old.

Peter Stemkowski was the Ranger who arranged the trip and called off any plans the Black Hawks may have had on burying New York's National Hockey League championship aspirations right here in Madison Square Garden.



The big centre, acquired from Detroit Red Wings in mid-season, scored the winning goal—"definitely the biggest of my life"—at 1:29 of the third overtime period and reduced the entire gruelling series to that seventh and final game in Chicago Sunday afternoon.

It came before a nearly hysterical Garden crowd of 17,250 who had watched the Rangers, second-place finishers in the NHL East Division during regular season play, and the Black Hawks, West Division champions, battle each other in a wild seesaw of hockey of the finest playoff calibre.

The long night's journey into day—it was just past midnight Thursday night when the game finally wound up—started on Dennis Hull's tally for Chicago at 10:19 of the first period, the big winger breaking loose from the blueline after set-up passes from Mikita and Cliff Koroll to bang the puck past New York goaltender Ed Giacomin. Giacomin got a piece of the shot, but it trickled behind him into the net.

Chico Maki made it 2-0 at 2:56 of the second period, finishing off a smooth passing combination with Pit Martin and Bobby Hull. Martin, getting the puck from Hull, moved across the New York blueline and centred accurately to Maki, who put his drive cleanly past the Ranger goalie.

The Rangers, who had fallen behind despite a domination of offensive play in the first two

Gilbert sliced the deficit to one with a blazing slapshot that hit the twines behind Chicago netminder Tony Esposito at 7:07 of the second period, Hadfield and defenceman Brad Park picking up the assists. The goal gave Gilbert a club record of 17 career Stanley Cup markers and Hadfield's assist as his 12th playoff point, another team record.

Ratelle tied the game at 4:21 of the third period on assists from Hadfield and Gilbert.

The stage was set for the overtime battle after Esposito, who was brilliant in frustrating the Rangers on 45 of 48 shots, preserved the deadlock with a diving, face-first save on a Ratelle shot with 15 seconds left in regulation time.

Esposito and Giacomin, especially in a furious, wide-open first-overtime period, came up with several sensational saves to shut the door at both ends of the ice until Stemkowski let everybody go home.

Stemkowski said he didn't remember exactly how it all happened. He just backhanded a fast rebound of a shot by Ted Irvine from the left point. Tim Horton, a stalwart all night on the Ranger defence, also assisted.

"I came right out to me and I shot fast," Stemkowski said. "Teddy shot it low. It came right out to me and I just shot it good—real good—I know that."

It was the third overtime game of the series and the second one which Stemkowski had decided. He beat the Black Hawks with an overtime goal in the opening game of the series.

COLD DUCK?

You must be kidding!

Nobody kids about a great wine in a champagne bottle with a wired-on cork, and a fancy foil capsule. This pink, pink wine with millions of crazy bubbles deserves all that fun. And it's game like COLD DUCK. After all, what else could you call it? After the first sip, you'll call it delicious.

Youngster Shows Giant Veterans How

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

San Francisco Giants have in their lineup such established stars as Willie Mays, Willie McCovey and pitcher Juan Marichal but young Chris Speier appears he be the thread holding the Giants together.

"The kid's playing some kind of baseball for us," says San Francisco manager Charlie Fox. "He's been the difference in our club."

The kind of baseball the 20-year-old Speier has been playing: unerring shortstop and 30 hits in 89 at-bats for a .337 average that included three safeties in Thursday night's 5-2, 13-inning victory over Atlanta Braves.

It's also the kind of baseball that has the Giants on top in the National League West with a 4½-game bulge over Los Angeles Dodgers, who beat Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 Thursday night.

Cincinnati Reds beat San Diego Padres 12-5, New York Mets clouted St. Louis Cardinals 7-6 and Montreal Expos tipped Chicago Cubs 7-6 in the other National League games.

Speier's only professional season was with Amarillo in the Class AA Texas League, where he made the all-star team and hit .333 at age 19.

Among Speier's three singles Thursday night was a hit that ignited the Giants' tying rally in the sixth. Speier singled to left, went to second after a walk to McCovey, then scooted home on Dick Dietz' single to make it 2-2.

San Francisco then scored three runs in the top of the 13th, the go-ahead tally coming on Ken Henderson's two-out single to centre.

Duke Sims drove home the winning run in the ninth inning with a bases-full single to give Los Angeles the victory over Pittsburgh.

Pete Mikkelsen, a former Pittsburgh reliever, hailed ex-Dodger starter Al Downing in an eighth-inning tough spot and picked up his third victory.

Ty Cline collected three hits and sparked two-run Cincinnati rallies in the first and third innings as the revitalized Reds seized their fourth straight victory. Wayne Simpson, with relief help from Wayne Granger, was credited with his first victory since the middle of last season.

Donn Clendenon's second homer of the season, a three-run shot, highlighted a six-run seventh for New York. Clendenon's blast, a line drive into the left field pavilion, was the clinching blow in a 13-hit assault of three pitchers as the Mets completed a sweep of their four-game series in St. Louis.

Ron Swoboda tripled in the tying run with two Sbt in the ninth inning, then scored the winner on John Bateman's single as Montreal beat Chicago

Bench Strength Saves White Sox

Pinch-hitters delivered the big blows for manager Chuck Tanner Thursday night in a four-run seventh-inning rally that carried the struggling Chicago White Sox to a 5-4 victory over Washington Senators.

Rich McKinney's two-run single keyed Chicago's assault as the Sox erased a 2-1 deficit in the seventh and then held off the Senators to snap a four-game losing string.

Eddie Fisher hurled 4 1-3 innings of hitless relief as California Angels thumped Cleveland Indians 8-4, and Don Buford's eighth-inning homer sent Baltimore Orioles past Oakland Athletics 2-1 in the only other American League games. The Minnesota - Boston game was rained out.

Mike Andrews opened the White Sox seventh with a single, knocking out Senators' starter Dick Bosman. Walt Williams and Rich Morales then stroked pinch singles off relief ace Ted Kooviens to send home the tying run.

Horacio Pina replaced Knowles and walked pinch-hitter Lee Mays intentionally, filling the bases. After Lee Richard tapped into a force at the plate, Tanner lined a single, Riddleberge and McKinney, batting for Ed Stroud, looped a single to right for two more runs.

Carlos May, who had driven in Chicago's first run with a sixth-inning single, capped the rally with a sacrifice fly, giving the Sox a 5-2 lead.

Fisher replaced California starter Tom Murphy in the fifth after Gaig Nettles' two-run homer timmed the Angels' lead to 3-4 and stymied the Indians the rest of the way to earn his third victory against one loss.

Roger Repoz drove in three early California runs with a double and bases-loaded walk. Tony Gonzalez doubled home two more in the sixth and Syd O'Brien climaxed the Angels' scoring with a seventh-inning homer.

The loss was the eighth for the Indians in their last nine games.

Jim Palmer, tagged for a two-run homer by Dave Duncan in the second inning, went the distance for Baltimore, bringing his pitching record to 4-0.

Extremes Among 20 Starters In Run for Roses

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Eastern Fleet, Jim French and Unconscious, all winners of $100,000 stakes, and Fourrulla, a winner of nothing, represent the extremes of a grab-bag group of 20 three-year-olds who will contest Saturday's Kentucky Derby.

The 20 hopefuls, the third largest field in Derby history and the biggest since 1961 when 20 ran, were entered Thursday for the classic at Churchill Downs.

Sole Mio, owned by Mrs. Taylor Hardin, was entered for the race but was withdrawn later in the day after he kicked himself and suffered a filled hock—a swollen ankle.

Starting from the inside post under Jorge Velasques will be Bold and Able, the Calumet Farm entry mate of Eastern Fleet, the florida Derby winner who will leave the No. 17 gate under Eddie Maple.

Going from the outside slot under 46-year-old Eric Guerin will be Wendell F. Rosen's Impetuosity, the Blue Grass Stakes winner. He will be coupled in the betting as part of a George Poole-trained entry with Pastorale Stable's Fast the Axe who will be ridden by Garth Patterson from post 11.

Unconscious, Arthur A. Seeligson Jr.'s California Derby winner, will be ridden by Laffit Pincay Jr. from the eighth slot; Frank Caldwell's Jim French, the Santa Anita Derby king, will go from No. 10 under Angel Cordero Jr., and A. H. Sullivan's Fourrulla, winless in his only four career starts, will leave from No. 19 under Donald MacBeth.

A third entry was the George J Getz-trained combination of Philip Telmenwitz' Royal Leverage and Telnowitz' and Schmidt's On the Money. Martin Fromin will send Royal Leverage from the No. 5 post while Mickey Solomone will ride On the Money from the 9th slot.

Others entered were Going Straight, Saigon Warrior, Jr.'s Arrowhead, Barbizon Streak, Vegas Vic, Canonero II, Knight Counter, Bold Reason, Tribal Line, Hello Blue, and List.

Post time for the 97th running of the 1¼-mile Derby, which will have a record purse purse of $188,000 if all 20 start, is 5:30 p.m., EDT. Television coverage will be from 5 p.m. EDT on the CBC.

The forecast is for partly cloudy and cool weather with the temperature at race time in the upper 60s.

The early 5-2 favorite was the entry of Bold and Able, the Sleeping Stone Purse winner and Eastern Fleet. The Impetuosity and Twist the Axe entry was made the early second choice at 7-2. Twist the Axe won the Arkansas Derby and finished second to Impetuosity in the Blue Grass.

The 20 colts entered came from a record 220 nominees. It costs $100 to nominate, $1,000 to enter and $1,000 to start.

A gross purse of $188,000 means $145,300 to the winner. The runner-up will receive $25,000, third $12,500 and fourth $5,000.

Key to the big payoff was Jet Adios. The 8-year-old mare, owned, trained and driven by John Millman of Goodwood, Ont., returned $150.20 for a $2 win ticket.

Largest payoff of any kind at a Jockey Club harness track was the $2,922.30 on a daily double bet at Mohawk raceway in Cobbleshille, Ont., July 16, 1965.

Celtic's six wins in a row equals their own record set between 1905 and 1910 and they now have won the title 23 times, 10 fewer than Glasgow Rangers, whom they meet in the Scottish Football Association Cup final May 8.

Track Renovations Could Go Down to Wire

By ERIC EMERSON
Staff Sportswriter

The most important sign that could be hung at the Belleville Fairgrounds in regard to this year's harness racing season wouldn't be found above the gate, place or show windows. Instead it would read "Under New Management".

The Belleville Agricultural Society (fair board) has for years held the charter to conduct harness racing in the city, but had previously leased the rights to the Quinte Riding and Driving Club. This year however, because of the large number of changes required for the Belleville track to continue operating, the riding and driving club is no longer able to continue to operate the races, which will be administered directly by the agriculture society.

The revision, which includes such items as widening the track, removing a number of electric power poles and relocating the betting booth are expected to total about $20,000.

The federal Department of Agriculture, which administers track facilities, parimutuel wagering and race dates throughout the country, had announced in early April that the changes would be required for this season.

"It wasn't a question of the Belleville Agriculture Society stepping in and taking over from the Quinte Riding and Driving Club," stated society manager Ev Gowsell, "They just weren't able to meet the expenses that would be forthcoming and so we purchased their assets and good will after they were no longer able to operate."

President Gerald Vance of the Quinte club, which has directed harness racing in Belleville since 1958, agreed with the reason for the changeover. "It was a matter of executive shareholders, which meant that the few of us that were left just couldn't meet the cost that would be required for the changes demanded by the dominion government."

One prime requirement of the Department of Agriculture was to widen the track so that it would be 50 feet across at its narrowest point. Previously the track had been as narrow as 36 feet in some spots. To do this five hydro poles on the north side of the track will have to be transferred to the infield.

Another necessary change concerns the betting booth which must be enlarged inside, have more space between the windows and have separate facilities for such things as the bank and odds room.

The current plan calls for the pari-mutuel booth to be moved directly behind the grandstand and to construct two new entrances to it to help facilitate the necessary additions.

The fair board has agreed to assume responsibility for conducting the races and has even begun construction work on the track. Nevertheless, one small problem does exist. The Agricultural Society doesn't own the track or the grandstand, both of which are administered by the Belleville Parks Board.

"We still have to work out the details of the arrangement with the parks board," admits Gowsell, "but because of the time factor we have to begin construction right away. We have approval in principle from the park board people and it will be a question of working out the terms of an agreement between the two groups."

The reason that construction must be initiated so rapidly is that any permanent lapse in racing dates would mean that Belleville would lose its charter to hold the meets on Saturday night. Any of the newer tracks in the area could then pick up the racing dates, meaning that the Belleville track would have to operate on possibly a Tuesday or Wednesday night when they began racing again.

"We had to give up our scheduled races for May 8 and 15 and Kingston snapped them up just like that. There isn't much question that someone would pick up the Saturday night dates if we let them lapse," related Gowsell.

Current plans call for the first harness meet of the year to be held May 22, while the proposed completion date of the construction is listed as May 20, which could provide a photo finish between builders and horsemen.

The Agricultural Society will appoint a committee to conduct the races and it will undoubtedly contain some former members of the Quinte Riding and Driving Club. "We're not out to institute any wholesale personnel changes," said the manager, "we're just going to try and conduct racing in Belleville with the best we've got."

Bristol Takes Helm

The Belleville Power Squadron will have a new commander at the helm Saturday when Charles Bristol takes over from present head Bill Boswell.

Frank Wilson has been named as the new executive officer of the Belleville boating group with Reg Mory assuming the position of training officer. This year's secretary will be Bob Frederick, while Vic Allen will look after the duties of treasurer.

Lieutenants for the club include Lee Jouvard, E. T. "Taffy" Meeking, Ian Dafoe and John Locke. The auditor will be Doug Wilson.

The change of watch will take place at the Belleville Yacht Club, Saturday beginning at 6.30 p.m.

Clear the Track

Belleville's latest construction site is at the Quinte Exhibition grounds where work has begun on widening the race track for the upcoming harness season. Belleville Agricultural Society president Jack Bush points out the progress to manager Ev Gowsell. The group has taken over from the Quinte Riding and Driving Club in conducting the Saturday night races and hope to have operations under way by May 22.

Clinical Approach Offered for Softball

A clinical approach to softball will be taken Saturday, May 15 when the Ontario Amateur Softball Association holds a softball clinic at the CFB South Side recreation centre.

The clinic is open to anyone interested. For further information contact Jim Tebworth (962-6142) or Lloyd Lobb (392-8658).

Galt Wins Another Shot At Allan Cup

GALT (CP) — A four-goal second period moved Galt Hornets into the Allan Cup final Thursday against Calgary Stampeders.

Hornets used their middle-period spree to overcome a 3-1 deficit and defeat Grand Falls Cataracts 6-3 in the fifth game of the Eastern Canada Senior A hockey final.

A crowd of 3,300 watched Ron Smith, Bruce Reier, John Nickerson and Mike Doersam score second-period goals to put Galt into the National final for the second time in three years.

The Hornets met the Stampeders in the 1969 final and won four straight games. The clubs open the best-of-seven series here Saturday night.

Coc Hoekstra and Pete Panagiotakis set the other Galt goals. Grand Falls replies were by Jack Faulkner, with two, and Jim Dunn.

Some members of the large Grand Falls cheering section littered the ice with oranges and derbis midway through the third period.

Hornets dominated the game, peppering Grand Falls goalie Jean Guy Morrissette with 39 shots and guarding their own netminder, Boat Hurley, well. Hurley faced only 16 shots.

The president of the Ontario Hockey Association, Clarence (Tubby) Schmalz, presented captain Vence Millar with the Abbott Cup, emblematic of the Eastern Canada senior title, in a brief ceremony after the game.

Ruby Cooper Says:

Golf's Million Dollar Winner

THROUGH THE BALL

Accelerating the clubhead through the ball is important to every golf shot, from drive to putt. This is the familiar "hitting through the ball." It merely means that you should not do anything to impede the forward progression of the clubhead in the impact area.

Since golf is indeed a game of feel, I think most club players would benefit from this practice exercise: Using a short iron, swing back on more than three-quarters, then with the left hand in control get the feeling that you are "flailing through the ball." Let the ball up on a peg if this helps give you confidence. Then when you actually play, be uninhibited at! impact. Fitty-pattying or steering will create nothing but problems.

Tenor's Program A Challenge

By EUGENE LANG

Music, so the savants tell us, is made up of five basic ingredients, — melody, harmony, rhythm, tone color and form. Indeed all five components are knowledgeable blended by the composer, the resulting mixture classified truthfully labelled good music. Perhaps the main reason that the works of the masters has lived through decades and centuries is that they had that knack of subtly blending the five elements into a composite structure which contained all those factors. Above all else (and we must admit to exceptions), the gift of melody does reign supreme. Without that the work teeters on the brink of hybridean precipice.

The audience that was present last evening in BCI auditorium to hear the amazing young tenor John Stewart, was balanced precariously for nearly half of the program on the ledge of non-melodic content.

Are we too provincial in our tastes or could it be that the New York concoctors of program material should consider all audiences on the circuit to be of Town Hall calibre?

Is the musical tree of solid recital foundation now moulding skyward with trunks decked of melodic sap? Please don't let lyrical coagulate produce audience strangulation!

The youthful tenor chose a demanding program of varied content that brought to the attention of his hearers the gifted talents that are now making him a singer to be reckoned with in concert and operatic world. Most of the selections were sung in their native tongues from the realm of late nineteenth and present day composers.

The three Rachmaninoff Rems were given renditions ranging from the pensive to potent. Fauré's Clair de Lune art songs were handled with relaxed tenderness (Clair de lune), carefree jibing (Mandoline) and finished in fervent feeling (Nell).

The five Spanish Classical Songs by Fernando Obradors were enticingly portrayed with the final wild chantings of the last song ending in dramatic climax. Here started it's tunes we shan't recall.

Powerful readings were given the two excerpts from Oedipus Rex by the late and lamented Igor Stravinsky (died at 88 this past April 6). The ringing tenor voice was most effective in the Aria of the Fisherman, a rhapsodic outburst of vocalism. The morbid accompaniment, to be truthful, they did not add zest to the enjoyment of the song itself.

It does not matter how fine the singer or how great his recreative ability if the music is dilated, dull and melodically defective — the resultant effect is disastrous. The polite but not profound applause after was the answer. For more profit in programming be prudent with Poulenc.

Three well known arias from opera were sung with aplomb and artistry. Questa o Quella from Act I of Rigoletto was sung in gay fashion with the high notes of Mr. Stewart's voice resounding from the far reaches of the hall. Pinkerton's well known Addio fiorito asil from the third act of Madame Butterfly was delivered in impassioned ragtime. The voice tones demonstrating the soloist's vocal reaches.

In the first of two encores, a favorite tenor vehicle was dusted off, namely the florid arfa Ecco ridente in cielo from the opening act of The Barber of Seville by Rossini. The technical difficulties of this treacherously ornamented tenor's delight were easily overcome by Mr. Stewart in his brilliant singing of this showpiece. A cute little folk song The Valley of Love and Delight, brought the recital to its conclusion.

Flavia Martin Katz turned in fine accompaniments throughout the entire evening. In summation then, we have a very gifted young tenor with a fine voice that will see rich rewards in the years to come. Also, appeal, charm in presentation and maturity for his youthfulness were attributes to carry him along on the crest of a career now just starting. Our views of dissent were spoken earlier—no more need be said. Thus ends the 37th season.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

People are funny. Parents are people. Parents are funny. At least, so they may often appear to their children. In bringing up our children we're influenced by what we have heard, have read, or experienced ourselves as young-sters. For example, consider sleeping patterns. Often we inflict them on our offspring, deaf and blind to their protestations.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've brought up six children who have grown to be happy adults. Why? Because my husband and I recognized that each one of us has a personal "rhythm." When one child wanted to stay up a little later than usual, we did not force him to go to bed — or else. When one wanted to go earlier, we didn't force him to pry his eyelids apart and stay awake.

I have a neighbor who has the idea that sleeping time should be measured by the ticks of the clock. Whether her little girl is sleepy or not, she actually forces her to drop whatever she may be doing to go to bed. She tells me the child often lies there for hours crying and whimpering, but she has never relented and let her stay up a little longer.

Don't you think that sleeping rules should be more elastic? — Mrs. D.

Comment: I certainly do. Many a grown-up night owl, I believe, is the end-product of parental over-strictness when he was young. It is rebellion against his inability, in childhood, to stay up a little longer.

The child becomes an adult, now able to make his own decisions, and mentally thumbs his nose right back at the hands of the clock. He is the one who is wide-awake at 1 or 2 a.m. when all others at the party want to go home to bed.

Over-restrictiveness is the mother of neurosis and character quirks. I believe that parents should not be too strict with their youngsters, acting like drill sergeants when bedtime draws near.

The child who is not sleepy who wants to finish a game he is playing, or see the end of an interesting TV play, or just wants to feel grown up sitting with his parents or other siblings a few minutes after accustomed bedtime, should be given this delightful dividend at the end of the day.

We parents should also remember that some little children require less sleep than others. Sleeping patterns vary because individuals vary. The trouble is that we forget that children are individuals.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 36 and my husband is only 33 — yet he has become impotent. We've been married seven years. Our sexual life was normal until about one year ago.

I wonder whether his lack of interest in me and his inadequacy might be due to the fact that I've let myself get fat. I know I'd look better if I took off at least 40 pounds. — Mrs. N.

Comment: Your experience underlines the fact that impotence may occur in younger men, too. It is interesting that you should bring up the matter of obesity as a possible cause. It's possible. One way to tell is to reduce.

But the reasons for impotence is not so easily discovered in most cases. Lack of interest in one's wife may be due to physical changes in her appearance. But it is perhaps more often true that other emotional or psychological factors are involved.

Sometimes a physician can get at the the bottom of the cause; often he fails. But it is worth a try. Get your doctor's advice and also try to influence your husband to consult with him.

Each Child's Need For Sleep Varies

Consumers Need More Protection

OTTAWA (CP) — Standards to protect persons and pocketbooks need far greater public and government attention with a fast-growing economy and population, says a special study.

A change to the metric system is imminent, reports the project done for the Economic Council of Canada and the Science Council of Canada by Dr. Robert F. Legget, an acknowledged expert. It was released today.

He reports:

Growing consumer demand for standards in everything from pollution control to toy safety creates a special urgency since, in many areas of standards, the consumer has been nearly forgotten.

The cost to meet the demand for consumer protection will be heavy and it will require solutions for many problems in defining and testing such things as quality and performance.

Yet this cost is insignificant when compared with the sales value of the goods.

The penalty for failure to keep abreast of the times in standards is illustrated by the fact that it cost Ontario $325,313,000 to convert to the 60-cycle North American electrical standard in the 1950s after years of what Dr. Legget calls political procrastination while southwestern Ontario was a 25-cycle island in the continent's electrical supply.

The Canadian government has already taken the first concrete step to conversion to the metric system by passage last year of legislation that defines the Canadian standards of measurement in terms of the metric system.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

Your birthday today: Organization, revision of career and business plans and life patterns come spontaneously this coming year. What does not come so easily is the handling of human relationships. Today's natives can be a carefree, happy-go-lucky approach to life, in which even the most serious events are set up like major theatre, a generous tale for long retelling.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Arrangements you had throught settled turn out to need further attention. Nothing excuses temper — just get busy and face up to the present urgencies.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Whatever your mood, put on a cheerful surface, help your family and friends by so doing. A smile costs you nothing and is priceless to the beholder.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Interruption of what you start today is almost certain — the challenge is whether you can get back to whatever it is and get done with it.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Be available and with your plans amenable to changes. Later on you'll look back to this as a long weekend of many surprises, sudden bits of "luck" and perhaps happy romance.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Impulse comes first, then second thoughts. The discipline to wait for information to be confirmed is beyond early reach—stretch your patience!

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Most of what happens now depends on how closely you observe and follow up on what you see. People wait for you, you tend to wait for them, and the subtlest cue is to be taken at the first suggestion.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Work on the general assumption that good news, improvements are on the way today. Spread your enthusiasm, get others to look upward with you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Much is offered you — the issue is to know what is worth doing, what leads nowhere. In material objects, expect no bargains. Quality costs more, wears far longer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Take the cash and let the credit go today. If there's something you've striven for a long time, seize what you can get of it, while the taking is feasible.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You stand to gain by solving and settling conflicts. Use your utmost tact and persuasive effort to get everybody to move toward serenity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 1): Think twice about whatever you do: make sure you have at least some communication with your fellows as you go, so they can keep in step with your efforts.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You have good influences going for you, but should take especial care in planning important near-future enterprises.

Foreigners Bought 17 Per Cent of Crown Land in 20 Years

TORONTO (CP) — Foreigners bought 17 per cent of all Crown land sold in Ontario for cottage lots between 1950 and 1970, a study by the department of lands and forests shows.

Rene Brunelle, minister of lands and forests, said several weeks ago that the study was the basis for an announcement in the Throne Speech that Crown land will be available only by lease in the future and that deadlines will have one year to lease property before it is offered to foreigners.

The study, which Mr. Brunelle tabled in the legislature Thursday, shows that in the 20 years surveyed, foreign sales accounted for 20.5 per cent of the total in 1950, dipped to a low of 10.9 per cent in 1960 and climbed to 18.8 per cent in 1969.

Seventy-five per cent of foreign sales were made in the districts of Kenora, Algoma, Parry Sound, Nipissing, Rainy River and Sudbury.

The report concludes that the traditional way of disposing of Crown land—by sale and patent—fail to meet department goals for protecting the environment or controlling land use for the utmost social and economic benefits of the people of Ontario.

Because the province had no control of land after resale, control rested with the municipalities.

"As a result, misuse of lands has been made through changing use, such as private to commercial and through dividing into smaller parcels, which has often resulted in uncontrolled development with its attendant problems."

The report noted that relatively little revenue comes to the province through the initial sale of public land for cottages. In 1960 cottage lots were sold at $2.50 per foot of water frontage with a survey fee set at $300 in 1969.

Average lot prices varied from $700 when sold at $2.50 a foot to $2,000 when sold by auction.

Sale at prices fixed by regulation on a province-wide basis does not reflect the market value of particular lands, the possibility exists that land may be purchased for the purpose of making immediate profitable resale.

"Despite this there have been advantages in making low-cost land available, although in the context of new departmental objectives, it is doubtful this practice should continue."

The government has not yet announced its regulations for the leasing of cottage lots, how long such leases will be, whether they will be renewable or whether they will revert to the Crown if certain conditions are not fulfilled.

In the 20 years, 22,527 acres of land containing about 3,750,000 feet of water frontage were sold. Besides the 17 per cent to foreigners, three per cent was sold to other Canadians and the remainder to Ontario residents.

The survey provided no figures on sales before 1950, or how much total Ontario land is owned by non-Canadians.

It is said the department adopted a policy of leasing. It would affect only 15 per cent of total lands available for cottage purposes, with the rest in private hands available for sale.

—Revenue Minister Eric Winkler said in the legislature that Ontario and Quebec have agreed to waive security transfer taxes on certain short-term money transactions.

—A bill that would allow residents of mobile homes to vote in elections for local boards was given first reading. The bill was introduced by Douglas Kennedy (PC—Peel South).

—Premier Davis said that plans for Ontario's conference on foreign investment will be announced early next week.

—Premier Davis also said the provincial government has not made a decision on a site for a new Toronto international airport because it wants to know how much Ottawa is prepared to pay for servicing it;

—Attorney General Allan Lawrence said that only the Ontario Provincial Police have the right to investigate alleged beatings at Millbrook prison;

—Allan Grossman, minister of trade and development, said he will review the Ontario Housing Corp. policy on tenants keeping pets to make sure any ban on pets is directed at nuisances and not well-behaved pets.

—Mr. McKeough said the Ontario government will likely opt out of certain share-cost programs with the federal government as they come up for re-negotiation. He said, however, Ontario can't opt out of some programs for five or six years.

Ontario Plans Consumer Caravan

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's first consumer caravan, a $85,000 truck designed to warn consumers about the pitfalls in credit buying, investments and impulse shopping, will go on the road next week.

"Our objective is to multiply the number of informed consumers," said Arthur Wishart, minister of financial and commercial affairs. He cut a red ribbon Thursday at the door of the van, parked outside the legislature.

The truck will visit shopping plazas, country fairs, schools and community centres. For the next few weeks it will be located in Toronto and then will move on to southwestern Ontario and around the province.

Caravan organizer Ray Garstang, 42, says the van is specifically aimed at low-income families, who are often the victims of fly-by-night salesmen or easy credit that quickly turns into a financial nightmare.

Mr. Garstang will travel with the van to answer questions from visitors about their rights as consumers and to follow through on complaints.

Niagara's Fruit Farms Said Doomed

TORONTO (CP) — Fruit farming in the Niagara Peninsula will die within 20 years, a member of the Ontario legislature from the area predicts.

"In 20 years it is my guess we will have no farm community on the peninsula to speak of," Ian Deans (NDP—Wentworth) said during debate of estimates of Agriculture Minister Stewart.

"In order to acquire fresh fruit we're going to have to import it."

Nixon Says Davis Can't Control McKeough

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario's Opposition leader says Premier William Davis lacks the personal status to control Treasurer Darcy McKeough's tendencies to go to irresponsible extremes in a vendetta against the federal government.

Robert Nixon said in the legislature Thursday during his televised reply to Mr. McKeough's budget speech:

"This government has gradually moved into a policy approach which seriously undermines national unity.

"The vendetta against the federal government began in the Robarts-MacNaughton days, but the Robarts' recognition of Ontario's role as a national leader kept the attitude in check. Now this moderate approach has gone."

He said the government has decided to opt out of existing shared-cost programs without examining every proposal on its merits. But the government is inconsistent for it has asked for federal cost-sharing of the insurance coverage on nursing homes.

He accused the Ontario government of attempting a form of blackmail against the federal government.

"The budget statement contains a clear threat that Ontario will block substantial advances in the constitutional review unless tax arrangements (between Ottawa and Ontario) are changed," he said.

"This blackmail threat is the most ugly and divisive move in a federal-provincial war that has escalated since 1968 and now assumes irresponsible proportions."

The Liberal leader also chastised Agriculture Minister William Stewart for introducing a law that gives Ontario the power to seize farm products entering Ontario from other parts of Canada without a permit.

The bill demonstrates "the simplistic arrogance of the new government stance," he said.

"He (Mr. Stewart) seems to forget that Ontario has a $2.6-billion trade surplus with the rest of Canada and in the long run his attitude will not be in the best interests of our farmers or any other part of our economy. What is worse, the policy balkanizes Canadian provinces with the old conservative approach to tariff protection. . . ."

Mr. Nixon assailed the five-per-cent tax credit announced in the budget for corporations installing new machinery.

"The $125 million assigned for this item will help the corporations but won't put much meat on the table for the working man."
